Albert A. Schatzl

Retired Quincy Fire Lieutenant, Veteran

A funeral service for Albert A. Schatzl, of Weymouth, formerly of Quincy, was conducted Wednesday at the Mortimer N. Peck-Russell Peck Funeral Home, Braintree.

Mr. Schatzl died Feb. 18 at the John Scott Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Braintree.

Born in Quincy, he was a graduate of Quincy High School and attended college. He lived in Weymouth for the past 43 years and formerly resided in Wollaston where he and his bride resided in the first 13 years of marriage.

He was a retired Lieutenant with the Quincy Fire Department, having served 33 years. In his earlier years, he was a Corrections Officer at Bridgewater Correctional Institution.

Mr. Schatzl served with the United States Navy during World War II from 1941 to 1946. He was an Aviation Radioman with the Blimp Squadron #31 Fleet Airships, Pacific Fleet. He was a crewmember of a blimp, which was caught in a lightening storm and crashed in the Atlantic off the Carolinas in 1955; he received several medals.

ALBERT A. SCHATZL

Husband of Sally (Wentworth) Schatzl; father of Joan Shedlock and her husband Stephen of Sandwich and the late Glenn Torrey Schatzl; grandfather of Samantha of Brighton and Andrea Shedlock of Sandwich; brother of the late Captain John Schatzl, QFD, Lt. Robert Schatzl, QFD and Doris Renda Baslow; son of the late Albert G. and Katherine (MacPhee) Schatzl.

He is also survived by two nieces and five nephews.

Interment was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to the Jimmy Fund, 450 Brookline Ave, Boston, MA 02115 or The American Cancer Society, 30 Speen St., Framingham, MA 01701.

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING
Project File No. 605729

A Design Public Hearing will be held by MassDOT - Highway Division to discuss the Intersection & Signal Improvements project at Hancock Street & East/West Squantum Streets in Quincy, MA.

WHERE: North Quincy High School Cafeteria
316 Hancock Street
Quincy, MA 02171

WHEN: Tuesday, March 8, 2011 @ 7:00 PM

PURPOSE: The purpose of this hearing is to provide the public with the opportunity to become fully acquainted with the Intersection & Signal Improvements project at Hancock Street & East/West Squantum Streets. All views and comments made at the hearing will be reviewed and considered to the maximum extent possible.

PROPOSAL: The proposed project consists of pavement milling and resurfacing, roadway widening, reconstructed traffic signal system, reconstructed concrete sidewalks, new wheelchair ramps, minor drainage and landscaping improvements, pavement markings, signing and all other incidental work. Also included in this project is an upgraded mid block pedestrian signal. Shared accommodations for all users have been provided in accordance with applicable guidelines.

A secure right-of-way is necessary for this project. Acquisitions in fee and permanent or temporary easements may be required. The City of Quincy is responsible for acquiring all needed rights in private or public lands. MassDOT's policy concerning land acquisitions will be discussed at this hearing.

Written views received by MassDOT subsequent to the date of this notice and up to five (5) days prior to the date of the hearing shall be displayed for public inspection and copying at the time and date listed above. Plans will be on display one-half hour before the hearing begins, with an engineer in attendance to answer questions regarding this project. A project handout will be made available on the MassDOT website listed below.

Written statements and other exhibits in place of, or in addition to, oral statements made at the Public Hearing regarding the proposed undertaking are to be submitted to Frank A. Tramontozzi, P.E., Chief Engineer, MassDOT – Highway Division, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, MA 02116, ATTN: Project Management Section, Project File No. 605729. Such submissions will also be accepted at the hearing. Mailed statements and exhibits intended for inclusion in the public hearing transcript must be postmarked within ten (10) business days of this Public Hearing. Project inquiries may be emailed to dot.feedback.highway@state.ma.us

The community has declared that this facility is accessible to all in compliance with the ADA / Title II. However, persons in need of ADA / Title II accommodations should contact Angela Rudikoff by phone at (617) 973-7005 or email to angela.rudikoff@state.ma.us. Requests must be made at least 10 days prior to the date of the public hearing.

In case of inclement weather, hearing cancellation announcements will be posted on the internet at http://www.massdot.state.ma.us/Highway/only in the council office. There are no men's toilets so male employees must walk to rest rooms located in the adjoining City Hall annex.

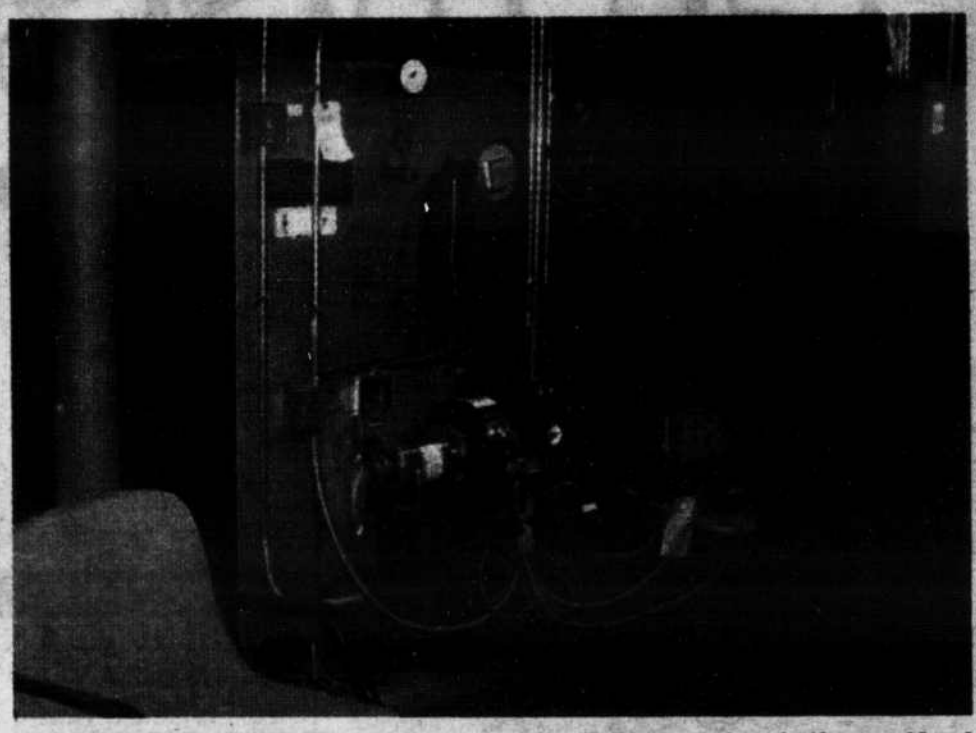
The electrical wiring – which includes knob and tube as well as plastic coated wiring – needs updating because it's substandard and not up to code.

There was no electricity when the building opened in 1844. Lamps were lit by whale and animal fat. But in 1902, new pipes were installed for gas lamps. Electricity and telephone lines were also added.

"There was a lot of modern innovation happening in 1902," Edwards said.

The knob and tube wiring might be over 100 years old.



"I don't want to give you the impression that some of (the knob and tube) could have just been abandoned in place and has been supplemented by other wiring. Regardless, what we see is a combination of that updated wiring and the old knob and tube from the turn of the 20th century," he said.

Any renovation would also require updating the fire alarm system as well as adding fire protection sprinklers required by law.

To be handicap accessible, an elevator needs to be installed.

THREE CONTAINERS were placed at each of the Council Chamber windows to catch the leaks after a ice dam caused water to back up over the frozen eaves and right into the building. Replacing the slate roof, copper gutters and downspouts is the first priority of the restoration project.

GAS-FIRED STEAM BOILER in the basement of City Hall is approximately 40 years old and should be replaced, according to consultants who recently examined the exterior and interior of the 167-year-old building. There is rust at the base of the boiler.

"That building has to be made handicap accessible," Edwards said. "That's the law. The access to the building currently is not anything near what it should be.

"To get to the Council Chamber you have to go through the annex. That's not proper. If people want to use the toilets, they have to go back into the City Hall annex. If you touch anything it has to be brought up to code," he added.

The building has been inspected by structural engineers, electrical engineers, heating and AC engineers, fire protection engineers, and hazardous materials engineers.

"There's a whole gamut of experts and preservationists and engineers who are looking this over to make sure we get this right and to be able to provide the mayor and the city council with as much accurate information as we can to allow this project to move forward in a reasonable manner."

The project may also entail an historical element: restoring the Council Chamber to its original "Great Hall" status.

The Great Hall was located where the Chamber is now. It included the space where there are offices as well as a balcony above the staircase leading into the chamber.

The "Great Hall's" boundaries were the four exterior walls of the building when it was old Town Hall. In other words, the space that is now the Council Chamber originally went from the north wall to the south wall. The offices to the side of the Chamber – which at one time included the mayor's office and is now the location of the City Council president and clerk of committees – were added in 1921.

Restoring the Chamber to it's Great Hall status would include a new handicap accessible balcony, extra seating and a stairway to the middle of the hall.

The restoration – which is still under consideration – would also include new carpeting, new lighting, new ceiling, new moldings, and adding moveable chairs to increase capacity from 75 today to about 180. The balcony would add another 50 seats.

The Chamber underwent an aesthetic restoration in the late 1990s. A new ceiling, carpeting, seats and light fixtures were added.

But those features would probably be changed again if the Great Hall is restored.

Edwards said the Chamber evolved from the Great Hall because the city needed more office space.

Time-wise, it would take about nine months to a year to get the proper architectural and engineering plans drawn up and out to bid. The restoration and repair work would need about 12-14 months to complete.

"The building would have to be emptied of people to allow the construction to proceed," Edwards said. "That's part of what the mayor is trying to figure out right now."

Asked to express his impressions of the building's overall condition, Edwards said, "It's in sorely a need of an update both on the exterior and interior. Every bone, every wire, every gut in the building that makes it function as a real building are in bad condition. It has to be done.

"This is a noble building. This is the essence of the historic Quincy district. This is a building that is critically important to the city's history. (The condition of the building) is something the mayor has noticed and he thinks it's time to do something about it. You don't look back, you try to look forward.

"I commend the mayor and it's brave of him to go after this during tough economic times. There's a great need here. As a citizen and as a person who works in the building periodically and who attends meetings (there) I think the building should be taken care of.

"It's a treasure to this city."

Extras Sought For New Kevin James Movie At Kennedy Center From 10 A.M. To 3 P.M.

City's First Hollywood Casting Call Saturday

Quincy's first Hollywood Casting Call will be held Saturday, March 5 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St.

The call is for Quincy adults, 18+, for paid extra work in the new Kevin James movie "Here Comes The Boom."

The upcoming production, featuring James, will also star Oscar nominated actress Selma Hayek, and 70's and 80's television icon, Henry Winkler, better known as "The Fonz." Production will start shooting at the end of the month.

'I Like To Celebrate The Mission Of Libraries'

Director Harry Williams: From Humble Roots To 'The Library Dream'

By JOE REARDON

Throughout his career Harry Williams has always watched, with a twinge of envy, retirees come into the library and depart with several books under their arms, eager to dive into their wonderful world of words.

Williams only wishes he had the time to attack the bucket list of books he'd like to read. As the new director of the Thomas Crane Public Library, Williams is surrounded by thousands of books every day.

"We're like the guy in the candy store," the engaging Williams said. "We can't eat it, we're giving it out to the customers.

"I like to be in the library. I celebrate what the mission of libraries is. It really is the American dream. And I was lucky enough to come to the city of the American dream."

Williams is confident he's up to the task of taking over for city icon Ann McLaughlin, who retired in January after 40 years in the city's library system, the last 15 of which she spent as the director.

Williams spent the last six years as director of the Brockton Public Library and as part of the Old Colony Network, he was more than a little familiar with Thomas Crane's impeccable reputation. When the director's job was advertised, Williams jumped at the opportunity and prepared his resume.

"The Thomas Crane Library is very well known in the library world," Williams said. "I was really familiar with the activity level and how much the staff of this library was involved in professional affairs. And because of that, I got a good sense of what a great library is."

Williams grew up poor in Yonkers, NY, working a number of menial jobs along the way. From the time he was a young boy, he had a love for libraries and the world that books opened up for him. Libraries, Williams has always held close, as public institutions, are essential in towns and cities and made available for all

Zoning Rules For Boats, Parking, Daycare Debated

Councillors Reject Restriction On Boat Storage

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Proposed zoning regulations limiting residential boat storage were tossed overboard Monday after the majority of councillors claimed that there are few complaints in this coastal city where residents expect the right to store boats on their property or to see boats on others' property.

"If it ain't broke, why fix it?" said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, chairman of the Ordinance Committee which is currently reviewing proposals aimed at updating the city's zoning regulations for the first time in over 30 years.

Boat storage was the most visible and controversial of the zoning issues that councillors debated at two meetings in the past week as they prepared for a March 9 public hearing on the zoning changes.

However, councillors, also, struggled with zoning issues for daycare facilities, signage, home occupations, commercial parking, the concept of accessory housing units, and efforts to rein in the powers of the Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA).

Town Brook Public Meeting At Crane Library March 9

The Mayor's Office and Street-Works Development LLC will host a public meeting Wednesday, March 9 at 7 p.m. in the community room of the Thomas Crane Public Library to discuss plans to restore the Town Brook as part of the City's downtown redevelopment plan.

Street-Works and City representatives will give a detailed presentation on plans to restore a Brook culvert through a new route downtown, how the design was engineered, and how the project will benefit the environment and repair long-standing problems with the existing Town Brook Culvert.

A question-and-answer session will follow the presentation. For more information, residents can call Chris Walker in Mayor Koch's Office at 617-376-1990 or via e-mail at cwalker@quincyma.gov.

of the production along the way, we have been able to generate income for the city, local businesses and now, it's residents. We're expecting a huge turnout so we suggest that not everyone show up at 10 a.m., so that we won't get jammed with people all at once."

This casting call is an 18 years or older call due to child labor laws; however, the combined Quincy and North Quincy bands are set to be in the movie.

"There is more news to come about this movie as production looms close," added Carey. "Between the good will that the movie has been showing Quincy in many areas, and the Mayor's willingness and ability to see this as an opportunity to boost the local economy in new ways, we'll see more dollars being generated in the weeks and months ahead as more locations are unveiled and as the production team rapidly expands."

'Here Comes The Boom' Star

"At any given time," Carey continued, "there will be upwards of 300 people eating at our restaurants, renting parking lots and more. It's our duty to introduce them to our local businesses and so far, it's working out pretty good."

The open casting call is for Quincy residents age 18+. You must bring a photo. Shooting will take place late March through early June.

All questions should be directed to Ashley at Boston Casting at 617-254-1001, ext. 3 or to Mark Carey at The Quincy Film Bureau at 866-990-FILM (3456).

ConCom Plans April 6 Hearing On Neponset Landing

The Conservation Commission continued its public hearing on the Order of Conditions for Neponset Landing to Wednesday, April 6.

Commissioners will consider public access proposals by local residents, Friends of Neponset Estuary, and the Neponset River Watershed Association at the meeting.

All members of the public may speak at the meeting.

Quarry Hills Wind Turbine Public Meeting Planned

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci announced Monday that he plans to hold a neighborhood meeting in the near future with Milton town officials to discuss plans for a 450-foot wind turbine in Milton near Granite Links Golf Course.

Palmucci said he has already met with Milton Town Administrator Kevin Mearn who will speak at the meeting and will provide Quincy residents with detailed information on the project.

tee which has already met five times. An attorney, Bobrowski specializes in Land Use Law, Real Property and Administrative Law.

Also on hand were former Planning Director Richard Meade and Building Inspector Jay Duca.

Boat Storage

The original boat storage proposal required all recreational equipment (boats, recreational vehicles, campers) to be stored in a carport or enclosed building and limited such storage to one item per residence.

However, after the Feb. 23rd meeting Bobrowski provided a compromise which defined permissible storage locations in relation to lot lines.

Both proposals covered non-commercial trailers and recreational vehicles and stated, "No such equipment shall be used for living or housekeeping purposes when stored in a Residential District, on in any location not approved for such use."

"Why now?" Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest asked Monday. Laforest said snowmobiles and plastic-covered lawn furniture could be just as ugly as a shrink-wrapped boat.

Laforest, whose ward covers Houghs Neck, one of the region's most active boating communities, held a community meeting which drew 60 residents to discuss the issue. Most protested the change.

Gutro said he has never fielded a complaint about boat storage in his ten years as councillor, while Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi said that in his 22 years, "I can't remember getting a call about a boat."

McFarland said the only call that he's received on boats focused on the Quincy-built ship USS Salem.

However, Councillor John Keenan said, "I've heard from people." He described a thwarted home sale.

According to Keenan, the resident complained, saying "I tried to sell my house and thought I had a buyer" until the buyer saw a boat in the neighbor's yard.

Building Inspector Jay Duca described about three dozen calls a year with most problems due to broken down, dilapidated boats, oversized boats, or boats that are stored too close to a lot line.

"We need a standard; we just can't ignore it," said Keenan who supported "a reasonable standard as opposed to neighbors going after each other."

Several councillors expect to revisit the issue in the future, particularly the sections regarding recreational vehicles.

Accessory Units

Councillors debated a proposal that would allow "Accessory Apartments" of no more than 800 sq. ft. in areas zoned for single-family dwellings. Bobrowski described the concept at the Feb. 23 committee meeting which Councillor Mike McFarland chaired.

The purpose of the zoning change is to increase the number of the city's small dwelling units, provide alternative housing options and to help seniors stay in their sometimes oversized homes.

"As long as you continue to abide by the rules, you're safe," said Bobrowski who outlined such details as these requirements:

- One New Parking Space,
- No Change in Exterior of the House
- Owner Must Live in Residence
- Additional Entrance
- Special 3-year Permit
- Site Plan Approval by Planning Board

Councillors questioned how such units would affect Residence A zones and whether garages could be converted to the new unit.

Brobowski said the proposal, as written, would allow owners to convert or build a garage for the purpose of renting an accessory unit.

Under the current wording, the owner could rent the home to boarders and live in the converted garage unit.

Home Daycare And Businesses

Councillors debated a zoning proposal allowing small state-licensed daycare providers serving six or fewer clients to operate in residential districts "as of right." The provision would cover both childcare and adult daycare.

Providers serving up to ten children or adults would be required to apply for a permit from the Appeals Board.

Councillor Joseph Finn supported the measure, describing how small a six-child operation would be and describing the urgent need for "safe and affordable child care."

Also supporting the measure were Laforest and Raymondi.

Councillor John Keenan said that even the smallest daycare "...should not be

MOST SEAWORTHY

If a woman born in the month of March finds herself dreaming of warmer days spent at the beach, she can take solace in the fact that her birthstone provides the next best thing to being there. Aquamarine is a gorgeous beryl gemstone whose name means "seawater." Anyone who has ever laid eyes on these clear greenish-blue minerals can have no doubt about the aptness of the name. Unlike its more famous beryl sister, emerald, aquamarines are often completely flawless. Because many very large masses of aquamarine have been found, it is reasonable for consumers to expect that they can find a gemstone in large-carat sizes to suit their desires. Aquamarines with emerald cuts are especially eye-catching in large sizes.

A must have for your jewelry wardrobe; aquamarine jewelry is a girl's best friend. Enjoy these beautiful aquamarine pieces with confidence at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. First Meeting Wednesday At Sons Of Italy

West/South Quincy Flood Projects Key To Mayor's Capital Plan

Mayor Thomas Koch's administration is taking the case for its $25 million Capital Improvement Plan to residents across the City beginning this week with a meeting detailing a series of projects aimed at addressing chronic flooding problems in several neighborhoods in West and South Quincy.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci was to host the meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Sons of Italy on Quarry Street, where the Mayor's team outlined $5.8 million in flood-relief projects in neighborhoods devastated by last year's March flooding around the Furnace Brook.

"These are residents who frankly have waited for far too long for something to be done. We are not going to hide from our responsibility to tackle these issues," said Koch. "We saw first-hand the devastation caused by last year's floods, and we simply can no longer pay lip service to the vital infrastructure needs of our neighborhoods. These projects are affordable, aggressive and necessary."

Added Palmucci:

"There is no silver-bullet to the flooding that has affected many of these neighborhoods, but make no mistake: This is most substantial investment – with

Proposed Wind Turbine On Moon Island Public Hearing March 10

Boston and Quincy officials will host a second public meeting on a proposed wind turbine on Moon Island in the second floor conference room of City Hall from 1 to 3 p.m. on Thursday, March 10.

The meeting will focus on a detailed presentation on visual, noise and aviation analyses conducted to date, and will be followed by a question-and-answer session with community members.

There will be additional meetings in the coming weeks, and a hearing at the Quincy Planning Board is tentatively expected to be held in April.

The proposed turbine, which would be a maximum of roughly 400 feet tall at the tip of its highest blade, is proposed to be located in the northern most area of Moon Island, more than 1 mile away from the nearest home in Squantum.

The two cities are continuing to work on a formal agreement that will split both the cost and revenue from the turbine, which is estimated to cost $4.3 million. Under any agreement between the cities, revenue from the power generated by the turbine will more than offset costs to build it.

The City of Boston is also working to obtain grant money from several sources to add to the economic benefit that will be shared by the cities, including working with the Massachusetts Energy Consumers Alliance and the Massachusetts Renewable Energy Trust.

The City of Boston has spent the last several years researching potential wind projects in the Boston Harbor Island areas, and the proposed Moon Island project meets a series of standards for a successful wind energy project, including meeting Federal Aviation Administration height restrictions.

Anyone with questions who cannot attend the meeting can contact Chris Walker in Mayor Koch's office at 617-376-1990 or at cwalker@quincyma.gov.

DuArt Dubs James 'The King Of Quincy'

There'll be a "Quincy Only" casting call this Saturday for the comedy "Here Comes The Boom" that's being filmed inside the old Quincy High School.

The casting call will be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Kennedy Center on East Squantum Street. Only Quincy residents age 18 and older are invited to audition to be an extra in the movie starring Kevin James.

But maybe Columbia Pictures can make an exception for a former Quincy resident who has some movie and TV credits to her acting resume.

DuART

How about adding comedian-impressionist and Quincy native Louise DuArt to the cast?

As they say in Hollywood, she'd be "a natural."

Yes, indeed.

DuArt's a 1968 graduate of Quincy High School. She and good friend Jack Raymer, the former Presidents football coach and high school dean, were voted "class wits" by their fellow graduates.

She has fond memories of her high school days on Coddington Street and remains in touch with Mrs. Bernice Bennett, the drama teacher who inspired Louise to follow her dream to make it in show business.

If she gets a call from the production company, she says she'd be delighted to appear in the film.

"Of course I would do a cameo," DuArt said after being reached by The Sun. She's currently traveling the country doing shows with Tim Conway and Chuck McCann.

How about a cameo as the school principal, she's asked.

"Playing the part of the school principal would be typecasting seeing that I spent so much time in that office! I also would love to play the part of the drama coach.

"When I attended QHS, Mrs. Bennett was our drama teacher and was my inspiration in making the decision to become a professional actor. I used to do an impersonation of her for the other kids.

"She was a crack-up. I still keep in touch with her. I would say she was the greatest influence as a teenager."

DuArt had this to say about the location and star of the film.

JAMES

"The old Quincy High School is a beautiful building that holds wonderful memories for me. I think Kevin James is 'wicked funny,'" she says mimicking our own Massachusetts jargon. "His stand-up act is hysterical.

"I love his show The King of Queens. Now, he'll be known as the King of Quincy!"

According to industry websites, James will play a teacher who joins the UFC (Ultimate Fight Club) fighting circuit in the hopes of raising money to save his school's music program. Under the deal worked out with the city, Columbia Pictures will pay Quincy at least $80,000 which Mayor Tom Koch plans to dedicate to the Quincy Public Schools music program.

DuArt, who's informed her old high school stomping grounds have been replaced by a newer, state-of-the-art learning facility, says she "loved every moment" of her high school days at QHS.

"I would say that my fondest memories were all the plays we did. I loved the creative and social aspect of working with a team of actors to create something that entertained an audience.

"I will never forget the first laugh that I got. We did the play 'The Man Who Came to Dinner.' I was hooked from that day forward."

"Jackie and I were both voted 'class clown," she points out. "I find it ironic that the photo of us in the yearbook has us in a tree with me smoking a cigar. Years later, I am STILL smoking a cigar when I do an impression of one of my favorite people: George Burns."

DuArt, who turned 60 last October, began her career as a comedian and impersonator in 1976 on the children's show "The Krofft Supershow" playing Nashville, a member of the fictional band, Kaptain Kool and the Kongs. She also played Wilhelmina Witchiepoo in the TV movie "The World of Sid & Marty Krofft at the Hollywood Bowl."

1968 QUINCY HIGH School "Class Wits" - Louise DuArt and John "Jack" Raymer.

But these days she may be more "recognizable" for her spot-on impressions. Besides the late-great George Burns, she impersonates Edith Bunker, Judge Judy, Joan Rivers and Barbara Walters among others.

Her list of television credits spans nearly four decades. You may remember her face from being a panelist on The Hollywood Squares (1986-1989 and 2004) or her voice from Garfield and Friends, Bonkers and Family Guy.

On stage, she's performed in Together Again, Many Voices of Louise DuArt and Glued to the Tube.

Today, she says she's living "my dream."

"I worked for 10 years with the great Tim Conway and Harvey Korman from the Carol Burnett show. Unfortunately, Harvey passed away a couple of years ago but Tim and I are doing a show together with a great actor named Chuck McCann. We travel across the country performing in theaters," DuArt says.

Her fans should take note that the trio will be in the Boston area next month. She will appear at the Hanover Theatre in Worcester April 9 and at the Wilbur Theatre in Boston April 10.

With the Quincy-only casting call only days away, she has this timely advice for any aspiring young actors.

"Follow your dream. If you know that this is the path you should take . . . don't let anyone discourage you. I pray you have a great encourager like Mrs. Bennett. It means so much to have a teacher validate our dreams."

COINCIDENCE? Louise DuArt and another well-known local actress, the late Ruth Gordon, share some startling similarities.

Louise and Ruth were both born on Oct. 30. Both graduated from Quincy High School – 50 years apart.

Louise is married to an author, Squire Rushnell.

Ruth was married to an author, Garson Kanin.

Louise and her husband live on Martha's Vineyard. That's where Ruth and her husband lived, too.

And of course, both grew up in Quincy.

Incidentally, Squire Rushnell is the author of a series of books, When God Winks. He claims there is no coincidence to coincidence. He has more than 105,000 fans at facebook.com/godwinks.

MORE COMEDY – The Quincy Partnership will hold its 14th annual Saint Patrick's Day Luncheon Friday, March 18 beginning at 11:45 a.m. at the Quincy Lodge of Elks, 254 Quarry St., West Quincy.

Donation is $50 per person and tickets are available at the city's License Board office in old City Hall or from any Partnership member.

The brunch features plenty of fun and good-natured ribbing for a very good cause. Proceeds raised help fund civic causes undertaken by The Partnership. Their list of community projects include exterior lighting at the Adams Academy and commissioning the bronze statues of John Adams and Abigail Adams with a young John Quincy Adams located in Quincy Center.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1914 real photo postcard is a view of a typical crew of stonecutters at one of the dozens of stone-sheds owned by granite companies in South and West Quincy at the time. One of these was the National Granite and Polishing Company that was located on Sampo Place where Kustaa Fagerlund was the manager. Fagerlund, who had emigrated from Finland, later bought the monument manufacturing company in the 1920's and he and then his son continued the business until 1960. Over the years, the company used all types of granite to build monuments, but their favorite was Balmoral granite from Finland. It is a handsome, large-grained dark-red stone that takes a fine polish. Today, long after the demise of its granite industry, there are only a half-dozen granite companies left in Quincy, and fewer men who call themselves stonecutters. Thanks to the family of Mike Fagerlund for contributing this postcard. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Quincy Public Schools To Hold Kindergarten Registration March 29

Quincy Public Schools will hold kindergarten registration for the 2011-2012 school year Tuesday, March 29 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Children who will be five years of age on or before Aug. 31, 2011 should register at their home schools. To determine a home school, check the QPS website at www.quincypublicschools.com.

Parents seeking open enrollment need to first register at their home school on March 29. Children do not need to come to registration. A child who presently attends the Pre-K programs at either the Snug Harbor School or the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center does not have to register March 29.

The following documents must be produced in order for a student to be registered:

- Child's birth certificate (with a raised seal)
- Proof that the child resides in the home school district
- Any two: tax bill, utility bill, copy of lease.
- Photo I.D. of the adult seeking to enroll the student.
- Copy of a recent (within one year) physical examination by a physician
- Written records of immunizations

The required forms that a parent needs to complete for registration are available on the QPS website. They may be found under the A-Z Parent Guide section under Kindergarten Registration.

Questions regarding the kindergarten program may be directed to the home school principal.

Pre-Kindergarten Screening March 22, April 5

The Quincy Public School's "integrated" pre-kindergarten programs serve children with special needs and typically developing peers.

Children must be 3 to 4 years old before Aug. 31, 2001. Priority is given to 4-year-olds. Classes are half-day sessions held Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays.

Pre-Kindergarten screening will be held Tuesday, March 22 and Tuesday, April 5. Call the school which meets your eligibility requirements, to schedule an appointment no later than Friday, March 18.

Applications must be made in advance. Visit www.quincypublicschools.com for more information.

Title 1 Integrated Pre-Kindergarten Program: children who reside in the following districts are eligible for these classes:

- Snug Harbor (617-984-8951)
- F.W. Parker (617-984-8710) – the program for this school is located at Snug Harbor.
- Clifford Marshall (617-984-8951) – the program for this school is located at Snug Harbor.
- Della Chiesa E.C.C. (617-984-8777)/

City-wide Integrated Pre-Kindergarten Program - Children who live in a non-Title 1 district (listed above) are eligible for this program: Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, Bernazzani, Merrymount, Montclair, Squantum and Wollaston Schools. There is a tuition fee for this pre-kindergarten program.

- Snug Harbor (617-984-8951).

Special Education Screening – Consistent with the Special Education Act, Quincy Public Schools conducts a screening for 3 and 4 year-old children in order to identify those who have special needs.

- Snug Harbor (617-984-8951).

$3M Bond Issue For Early Childhood Center, Bernazzani Addition

By FRANK McCAULEY

To the delight of School Committee members, teachers, parents and children, the City Council Finance Committee approved a bond issue in excess of $3 million for an Early Childhood Center to be built on the site of the former Lincoln School in southwest Quincy.

This Week
18 Years Ago

The unanimous decision also cleared the way for a four-classroom addition to the Bernazzani School.

A total of $2,172,540 from the bond issue will be put towards the Early Childhood Center while $905,000 will fund the building of the Bernazzani addition. An additional $127,540 from private donations will complete the funding for the E.C.C. project.

LaRAIA RETURNS TO THE CITY COUNCIL

Joseph LaRaia was back on the city political scene after a six-year hiatus.

LaRaia was unanimously elected by the City Council to fill the councillor at-Large seat vacated by Patricia Toland who left the council to seek the city's assistant city clerk's position.

"I feel like a newcomer," LaRaia said, after being sworn in by City Clerk Joseph Shea. "This is the first time in 5 ½ years I've been in the City Council Chambers as a councillor."

LaRaia, who had been in and out of political office since 1960, said that for now he is simply happy to be back on the council.

Pre-Screening Reception, Q & A Session

ENC Hosts New England Premiere Of Feature Film 'The Grace Card'

Faith and film were seamlessly interwoven recently when Eastern Nazarene College hosted the New England premiere of the feature film The Grace Card.

Held at ENC's Mann Student Center, the premiere featured a pre-screening reception for members of the ENC community and invited guests, including the film's lead actor, Michael Higgenbottom; Director/Executive Producer Dr. David Evans; Executive Producer Esther Evans; and Lynn Holmes, senior pastor at Memphis' Calvary Church of the Nazarene, which formed Calvary Pictures to produce The Grace Card.

Following the film, guests had an opportunity to participate in a question and answer session with the film's production team. Moderated by ENC Director of Student Development and Multicultural Affairs Robert Benjamin, the discussion focused on some of the movie's key themes, such as race, grace, faith and reconciliation.

"I like to do things to grab people by the heart," said Dr. David Evans, the film's director and executive producer. A Memphis optometrist, Evans drew on both his professional training as a doctor and his experience in producing passion plays for Calvary Church to direct the film, which tells the story of an African American cop and part-time pastor who reaches out to his white partner, a man who has become angry and embittered following the loss of his son.

At the Eastern Nazarene College screening, Evans and some of the film's cast members – many of whom had never before appeared on film – discussed working with The Grace Card's best known star: Academy Award®-winning actor Louis Gossett Jr. It was noted that Gossett – who won an Oscar for his portrayal of a tough drill sergeant in An Officer and a Gentleman – created the non-profit Eracism Foundation in 2006 to combat racism through cultural, educational and historical enrichment programs.

"The quality of the premiere event was outstanding," said ENC Vice President for Institutional Advancement Scott Turcott, who noted that a second "sneak preview" and discussion was held for ENC students the following afternoon. "Our team, led by Scott MacFarland, ENC's Director of Marketing, was praised several times by the film's writer, director, producers, and lead actor. ENC was proud to be associated with the New England premiere of this culture-shaping film."

The Grace Card is now playing in theaters around the country. For more information, visit www.thegracecardmovie.com.

The Ice Creamsmith Celebrating 35th Anniversary

The Ice Creamsmith, a small but well-known homemade ice cream parlor in Dorchester Lower Mills, celebrates its 35th Anniversary this spring.

The shop opened Tuesday for the season.

To celebrate the anniversary, during March there will be a daily drawing for an free ice cream sundae, followed by other promotions in April and May.

The store at 2295 Dorchester Ave. near the Milton line is a family business, owned and operated by David Mabel and his wife Robyn. All of the ice cream, frozen yogurt and sorbet sold at the shop is made on the premises, and ice cream cakes, pies and pizzas are also available.

DAVID MABEL outside The Ice Creamsmith which is celebrating its 35th anniversary in business this year.

For the first three years the ice cream was made in the front window using the old ice-and-salt method, but as production increased they switched to a more modern batch freezer downstairs.

Besides the thirteen flavors on the menu, including special monthly flavors, there are also a number of "mixin's" that can be hand-mixed into an ice cream portion to create a special flavor. A sign in the shop boasts of having over 2000 flavors at any time, based on the number of combinations that can be created. There are also the usual ice cream concoctions, such as sundaes, frappes, banana splits, and the giant "Belt Buster" sundae.

The Mabels thank their loyal customers for The Ice Creamsmith's 35 years of success, and plan to continue serving their "delicious homemade ice cream in a friendly, old-fashioned atmosphere."

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Vanilla Cupcakes

(Editor's note: This recipe appeared Feb. 17 in The Quincy Sun. The amount of flour is 1 and 1/2 cups, not a 1/2 cup as listed two weeks ago. Here is the complete recipe.)

It seems that the current dessert craze these days is cupcakes of every kind. I have such an easy basic recipe for a vanilla cupcake that almost anything can be added. Years ago, my mother made lemon filled cupcakes with this recipe.

VANILLA CUPCAKES

1 ½ sticks butter (softened)
1 cup sugar
3 large eggs
1 ½ cups self-rising flour
1 tablespoon warm water
1 teaspoon vanilla

If you haven't got the self-rising flour, use the other flour, and add 1 ½ teaspoons baking powder with ¼ teaspoon salt.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Line a 12-cup muffin tin with cupcake papers.

Beat butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Alternately add the eggs and flour beating until each is well blended. Add the water and vanilla and mix.

Place the batter in the tins about ¾ full. Bake until done about 15 minutes or so. Put a toothpick in the middle to make sure they are done. After a couple of minutes place on a wire rack to cool.

Here is a delicious easy cream cheese frosting to go with the cupcakes.

CREAM CHEESE FROSTING

4 tablespoons softened butter
8 ounces cream cheese (softened)
¼ to 1 cup powdered sugar

Beat butter and cream cheese until smooth. Beat in the sugar adding it until blended.

If you want to make a lemon filled cupcake, make a lemon pie filling according to directions. Cut the tops off each cupcake when they are done. Place the pudding over each one and then put the cupcake top over it.

Sprinkle top with powdered sugar.

Marita MacKinnon Stage Manager For Curry's New Plays Festival

Curry College announces Quincy resident Marita MacKinnon, daughter of George and Mary MacKinnon, will be the stage manager, in Curry alumna Cate Buckley's original comedy Sex and Education in Curry Theatre's Black Box production of The Fifth Annual New Plays Festival.

MARITA MacKINNON

MacKinnon is a 2008 graduate of Quincy High School. Currently a junior at the college majoring in Communication, she has been seen in Cynthia Mercati's To See the Stars, David Robinson's Justice Man, and Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman.

MacKinnon has also served on Curry Theatre's Supervisory Board as the House Manager and Publicity Director. She currently holds the position of costumes manager.

The Fifth Annual New Plays Festival, showcasing original student 5-10 minute one act plays, will run Saturday, March 5 through Monday, March 7 at 7:30 pm in the Oscar B. and Frances A. Keith Auditorium at the Academic and Performance Center on the Milton Campus, 1071 Blue Hill Ave., Milton.

Tickets are $5 and may be reserved at 617-333-2259 (Option 2).

14th Annual Quincy Lions Run/Walk For Sight April 23

The Quincy Lions Club will hold its 14th Annual Run/Walk for Sight Saturday April 23 at Pageant Field in Quincy.

Online registration is now open at www.quincylionsclub.org/2011-Run-Walk-For-Sight.html. Day-of-race registration will begin April 23 at 9 a.m., followed by the children's 1K race at 10:30 a.m. The adult 5K run/walk—which is on a course certified by U.S. Track & Field—begins at 11 a.m. Prizes will be awarded to race winners in a number of categories, and the first 200 registrants will receive a free race T-shirt and runner's giveaway bag.

The registration fee is $20 for adults and $5 for the children's 1K race, and includes a buffet lunch following the race. There will also be entertainment and a prize raffle.

"The Run/Walk for Sight is a fun event for the whole family," said Quincy Lions Club President Loretta McTiernan. "The local community has been very supportive of the Lions Club's efforts to help blind and visually impaired individuals, and we hope everyone will come out and enjoy this fun and worthwhile event."

Proceeds from the Run/Walk benefit eye research and the Quincy Lions Club's community service activities, including providing free eye exams and free eyeglasses for local residents in need, offering free vision and health screenings, providing college scholarships to local high school students and more.

Kiwanis Breakfast Saturday Salutes Junior Heroes

The Kiwanis Club of Quincy will recognize several acknowledged young leaders with its "Junior Heroes Awards" at a breakfast Saturday, March 5 in the Quincy Lodge of Elks Tirrell Room.

Each year the club presents the award – named in memory of Patrick Toland White of Quincy – to young people. They are judged by their peers to be a "class by themselves" when it comes to community service. Their special civic efforts and contributions helped identify each one as a "leader" within their school community.

In addition, their contributions illustrate how local youngsters selflessly contribute to those less fortunate amongst them. The junior heroes are recognized for learning early in life the skill of giving back.

The junior heroes will be joined by their parents and teachers who have helped shape and encouraged them. This year's students were nominated from several local elementary, middle and high schools.

Purple 'Hat' Day At Community United Methodist

The Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., is celebrating Women's History Month, and is asking all who attend the worship service Sunday, March 6 to wear purple hat (or some other item of purple clothing) one of the colors worn by the suffragettes.

The worship will begin at 10:30 a.m. with Sunday school classes held at the same time. Adult Bible Study is held before the service at 9 a.m. A coffee hour will follow the worship service.

For more information, all the church office at 617-773-3310.

Broad Meadows School PTO Comedy Night Fundraiser

Friday Night At Sons Of Italy Social Center

Broad Meadows Middle School PTO will host a Comedy Night Fundraiser Friday, March 4 from 7 to 11 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center, 120 Quarry St., Quincy.

The event will feature Boston, New York and Las Vegas headliners Tommy Dunham, Christine Hurley and Paul Keenan.

Dunham has headlined clubs all over the northeast for over 20 years and will host Friday's show. His act involves growing up on the South Shore in the 70's as well as parenting today.

Hurley's life truly is "funnier than fiction," with a new twist at every turn. With a houseful of quirky kids and a husband who's easy to pick on, she keeps things light hearted.

Keenan, winner of the 2010 Plymouth Rock Comedy Festival, is best described as a 12-year-old boy trapped in a 6'4" adult body. He has emerged as one of the brightest up and coming comics from the talent-rich Boston comedy scene. Crowds can't help but be drawn in by his All-American looks and childlike charm as he shares his bizarre and somewhat twisted thoughts.

The event will include a Chinese food buffet dinner from Imperial Terrace, cash bar, silent auction and raffles. Auction and raffle donations are still being accepted. Auction items include tickets to the Boston Bruins, a three-credit course to Quincy College, framed art work, local hotel stays, gift certificates to local restaurants and more.

Proceeds from the event will be used to upgrade technology in the classrooms.

Tickets are $20 per person, may be purchased in advance at the school, and will be available at the door.

For more information, call Broad Meadows at 617-984-8723 or email bmmspto@hotmail.com.

Taste Quincy Restaurant Week March 6-11

The Quincy Restaurant League will sponsor its annual "Taste Quincy Restaurant Week" Sunday, March 6 through Friday, March 11.

Throughout the week, restaurants and specialty food establishments are offering special lunch and dinner menus and other promotions with discounted pricing.

"It's a wonderful opportunity for diners to visit a restaurant that perhaps they haven't tried before and to sample great food at a great savings," said Maralin Manning, director of Business Development for the Quincy Chamber. "Quincy has such an array of diverse and eclectic food establishments and there's something for everyone."

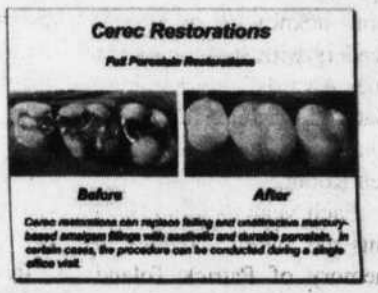
Restaurants are offering something for every budget: Enjoy lunch for two for either $10 or $15, dinner for two for either $20 or $30, as well as discounted offerings at some of Quincy's most unique specialty shops.

Taste Quincy Restaurant Week is also beneficial to the restaurant owners who are seeking to fill seats in their establishments after this tough winter.

Sean Fitzgerald, manager of Captain Fishbones said, "During last year's Taste Quincy Restaurant Week we had a huge influx of new customers at the restaurant and a percentage of these customers are still dining with us on a regular basis. I am even more excited about this year's Restaurant Week because the consumer is still looking for value and this should be worthwhile for everyone who participates."

There are over 25 participating food establishments in Taste Quincy Restaurant Week, including the Adams Pub at the Best Western Adams Inn, Beni Café, Burke's Seafood, Captain Fishbones, Common Market, Fuji, The Fours, Gennaro's Eatery, Ginger Betty's, Hancock's at the Marriott, The Half Door, La Paloma, Siros, Shabu, Texas Saloon, Unchained Pizza, The View Restaurant and Tavern, Villa Rosa and more.

For a list of participating restaurants and their specific category offerings visit www.TasteQuincy.com or call the Quincy Restaurant League at (617) 471-1700.



Created as a partnership with the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, the Quincy Restaurant League provides a forum for member restaurants to collaborate with the City of Quincy's Tourism and Economic Development organizations to promote Quincy's diverse and dynamic restaurant community.

For more information on the Quincy Restaurant League contact Maralin Manning at 617-471-1700.

Council Honors Lynn Margherio, Bids Farewell To Cradles To Crayons

City Council President Kevin Coughlin called last week's ceremony honoring Lynn Margherio, president of Cradles to Crayons (C2C), a 'bittersweet' moment, noting the project she founded ten years ago in Quincy has helped over 200,000 children.

However, C2C is now so successful it has outgrown its Myrtle Street quarters and is leaving Quincy for Brighton and that's a loss for our community, said Coughlin.

"C2C's departure from Quincy to Brighton is a very positive sign of growth of this wonderful organization," Coughlin said. "On the other hand its loss from our community diminishes an important thread in the caring and charitable fabric of our city."

"I only wish that we could have offered a place for C2C to continue in our midst," said Coughlin.

Coughlin lauded Margherio's vision, sacrifice and hard work as he outlined the successful project that she initiated a decade ago. C2C collects toys and clothing and donations and provides children in need with such items as toys, clothing, books.

In recent years, the agency has expanded its social and education programs and foundations in other states.

"She conceived and created a bridge between those who have and those who need. Lynn became an instrument for good," said Coughlin before outlining the impressive credentials Margherio had long before founding C2C.

Prior to launching Cradles 2 Crayons, Margherio worked as a business strategist advising Fortune 500 companies, directed a U.S. Commerce Department team on the digital economy. She also served as a senior member of President Clinton's health care reform team and as executive vice president of the William J. Clinton Foundation's HIV/AIDS Initiative.

Margherio brought those contacts and those resources to the C2C project and created a non-profit agency with more than 130 corporate partners and more than 400 social service distribution partners, according to Coughlin.

Coughlin presented Margherio with a pin of the city along with the formal commendation.

Joining Margherio at the ceremony were Kathy Fagan, Director of Community Outreach for C2C, and Wendy Schottland, Distribution Partner, General Manager.

real solutions – to be presented to this community. It is a tremendous start for our neighbors who have been fighting for flood-relief for years."

The proposed projects include:

- $900,000 to modify the pumping station affecting Alrick and Joyce Roads into a stormwater pumping station, as opposed to its original design as simply a groundwater pumping station.
- $2.5 million to inspect, repair and clean the Furnace Brook for collapsed culverts and other major structural issues that have compromised the Brook over the years.
- $900,000 for a new drainage and pumping system in the Miller Street, Cross Street, and Furnace Avenue area that have long been prone to flooding.
- $800,000 to replace the Blacks Creek Tide Gates to a system more capable of handling flood control for the Furnace Brook.

The plan also includes more than $100,000 for engineering and other studies for permanent solutions, including an update of the Army Corps of Engineers Study that called for box culvert diversions along Furnace Brook Parkway and estimated at the time to cost between $50 to $60 million.

If the full program is approved by the City Council, Mayor Koch will finance it through a 20-year bond. More than half of the bond payments will come from sources outside of the City's general fund, including the hotel/motel room tax and a sewer rehabilitation fee paid for by developers, according to the analysis by the Department of Municipal of Finance.

The analysis showed that under even the most conservative projection, the capital plan will add only $1.4 million to the City's annual budget line for debt payments, a little more than one half of one percent of the City's total $230 million budget.

The City's borrowing position is strong and flexible, Koch said, pointing out that Quincy has the lowest per capita debt and the lowest debt as a percentage of overall property value than any of the 10 largest cities in Massachusetts.

Quincy Youth Hockey Registration Extended Through March 10

Quincy Youth Hockey has extended registration through Thursday, March 10 at 4 p.m.

Any player interested in trying out for a Squirt, Pee Wee, Bantam or Midget travel team must register by March 10 to be considered at tryout-time.

Based on the response and additional registrations, a revised tryout schedule will be provided no later than Monday, March 14.

Players in the Mite and Girls division will be not required to tryout due to registration numbers but must register no later than the March 10 deadline so that the program will be able to appropriately identify and field terms in these divisions.

To make registration arrangements, contact Amy in the hockey office at 617-479-8371 ext. 15.

North Quincy Catholic Club Meets March 10

Director Harry Williams: From Humble Roots To Living 'The Dream'

citizens of all ages. Times, too, are tough for libraries across the country with branches closing and others cutting back their hours.

"My roots are humble," said Williams. "I'm' from the working class. To me, it's always been important to remember that if we say this is America and we can pull ourselves up by our bootstraps it doesn't matter who your father was, your nationality or what your sociological class, we can strive and succeed.

"If we say that and we don't really have good public schools and good libraries, which are part of the mix of being an informed active citizen, then it's really an attractive lie. It's a way to feel good about our country."

Williams' career in the library field began back in 1972 in the Worcester Public Library System. He put his skills as a communicator to good use and focused on "front line services" within the library halls. Williams became a highly skilled librarian doing reference work. He has worked as a librarian in the business, medical and children's field over the years.

Over time, Williams became frustrated with aspects of his job. He had seen the inner workings of public libraries and there were areas that he believed could be improved, but he wasn't in the position to have his opinion heard. He then concentrated on moving up the librarian ladder.

"The only way I could really influence the quality and direction of the institution was to take more leadership positions," said Williams. "I was a child of the 60s so I was so anti-authority, anti-leader in the sense that we perceived leaders as all foolish, dominating people that just wanted to be the boss. So I never wanted to be boss, per se; to push someone else around. But I did want to have some influence on the institution."

Williams knew the solid reputation of Thomas Crane and its entire staff and looked at it anonymously soon after applying for the director's position. He browsed the library, much like any other patron, to get a feel for the staff and the quality of service.

Williams has seen libraries whose staffs simply have no regard for the patrons who use it. "Good directors can do a lot, but organizations have their own personality," he said. "They can have dysfunction just like a family can. I hate to say it, but there are libraries where people are not all that welcome. Hopefully, they're few and far between, but once in a while you find them.

"The staff maybe has been there too long or they just somehow think the library's for them and the public is kind of a necessary evil."

Williams was quick to dismiss the idea that libraries have become obsolete because of the speed and easy access of the Internet. "If you've got your Internet access at home and your high speed connection and enough money to buy books if you need them, you have the tools to do really well in school," Williams explained. "And if you don't, how are you going to compete with kids that do without libraries? You see all the people using those public computers. Most of them would be home doing that if they had a nice high-speed computer.

"I really like that part about what libraries are."

The computer bank at the library is nearly always busy with people looking for information online. "It's made us more needed by an awful lot of people," he said. "A lot of the working class people, who in the past, when times were better had the computer, at this point maybe have cancelled their (Internet service) because it's not cheap. It's that or pay the rent or feed the kids. They're shut out of the Internet."

The overall validity of information on certain Internet sites can be bogus and librarians are helpful in steering people in the right direction for the information they may be looking for.

"It's a whole different world now," said Williams. "The internet has given us a wealth of different ways to help people navigate through what is still really a maze. Now with Google, you can end up with so many hits you don't know where to begin.

"Anyone can set up a website that looks professional, but is just worthless drivel."

Williams also is of the belief that adults reading a book to children still holds the magic it did when he was a child. His position "It's like it's always been," he said. "The kids were fired up to have an adult read to them. It's special. You'd think, having a lady or a man read a book to you might seem kind of tame. But somehow, there's something in that transition, that environment, the kids love it."

Williams learned over the years, that unlike a lot of librarians, he was comfortable meeting a lot of different kind of people and talking with them. Being from the working class himself, he's very comfortable talking with laborers and crafts people and custodians.

"I've never been intimidated by important people. I respect them, but I've found if you're not awed by them and just talk, they're just people too."

Williams is also a good listener and believes patrons of the library will tell him what they need.

"But we need more than that. If it's just me telling everyone the library's great and the people aren't delivering service, well it's just Harry's hot air. My chief role as director of a large library is really the principal advocate.

"The building itself sells the library and I want to capitalize on it."

Williams said he views the Friends of the Library group as a huge plus in promoting the library with its 630 members.

"It's like having 700 ambassadors in the community," said Williams. "And each of them has people they know who give them a lot more credibility in terms of their judgement calls than they're going to give me.

"I'm going to tell people the library's great no matter what. And if you've got 630 people saying the library's great, that's priceless. We want to nurture that and cultivate it."

Friends Hopeful Cardinal Will Attend

Star Of Sea Friends Meet March 13

Friends of Star of the Sea Co-Chairpeople Sean Glennon and Maureen Mazrimas have called a special meeting of the Friends, for 2 p.m. Sunday, March 13 at Squantum Elementary School.

The meeting is in response to the Feb. 17 press release from the Boston Chancery, announcing Cardinal O'Malley's intention to conduct a consultation of the Catholic faithful that were parishioners at Star of the Sea (and six other closed churches).

The proposed month-long consultation will end on March 18 and will be administered through an Internet survey.

The chancery's press release said the Cardinal is seeking comments on a possible decree of "relegation to profane use," which, if issued, may allow the Cardinal to sell Star of the Sea church. The release also spoke of a "culture of transparency" to encourage "greater consultation, collaboration and coordination."

"Apparently that consultation, collaboration and coordination did not include informing the parishioner groups involved," said Mazrimas. "It would have been nice if we hadn't had to read it in the paper. We have been asking for a meaningful dialogue for years.

"The timing is interesting in light of the recent decrees from the Springfield and Allentown dioceses on this specific issue."

The decrees Mazrimas referred to were issued by the Vatican in favor of 11 Catholic parishioner groups – 8 in the Diocese of Allentown, PA, and 3 in the Diocese of Springfield, MA. In each case, the Vatican sided with the parishioners on the issue of "relegation to profane use," and the bishops of those dioceses must reopen the 11 churches as worship space.

If a Decree of Relegation to Profane Use is issued against Star of the Sea, the co-chairs say they are ready to proceed with a new round of appeals, and have already retained the same Canonical advocate as used in the 11 Allentown/Springfield cases.

"Hopefully it does not get to that point," said Glennon, "which is precisely why we have extended an invitation to Cardinal O'Malley to attend this meeting.

"We are hopeful that he will come to hear our concerns in person, rather than relying solely on an impersonal computerized survey, to help him make this crucial decision."

In the meantime, the Friends co-chairs encourage all residents in the neighborhoods of Squantum and Marina Bay to participate in the Cardinal's survey at www.2011Consultation.org, prior to the March 18 deadline.

Written responses will be accepted, provided the 2011 Consultation Form (available online) is used. Hard copies of the form will made available at the March 13 meeting for those without Internet access.

Glennon and Mazrimas encourage parishioners to contact them at 617-909-6426 or 617-257-8295 (or by e-mail at sean@marystarofthesea.org / maurmaz@aol.com) with questions, comments and/or suggestions.

OBITUARY

William L. Reardon

Retired Support Specialist
At Norfolk County Sheriff's Office

WILLIAM L. REARDON

A funeral Mass for William L. Reardon, a lifelong resident of Quincy and a retired Support Staff Specialist at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in Holy Trinity Parish at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, 227 Sea St., Quincy.

Mr. Reardon died Feb. 27.

He was the beloved husband of Jeanne (Delmonico) Reardon of Quincy, the Clerk of Committees for the Quincy City Council. Monday's council meeting was dedicated in Mr. Reardon's memory.

He was a 1956 graduate of Quincy High School.

He was a Support Staff Specialist at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office in Dedham for 20 years before retiring in 2009.

In his earlier years, he worked as a plumber in Brookline.

Mr. Reardon enjoyed golf and was an avid Boston Bruins fan. His passion was umpiring girls' high school softball and local men's and women's softball leagues.

He was a member of the Amateur Softball Association and held various offices in the Association.

Above all he loved spending time with his grandchildren who were the light of his life.

He will be missed by all who had the pleasure to know him.

Mr. Reardon was also the loving father of William A. Reardon and his wife Michele of Plymouth, Mark T. Reardon and his wife Faith of Quincy. Brother of John Reardon of Marshfield, Eleanor Southwick of Marshfield, Margaret Poillucci of FL, Richard and Kathleen Wells both of Quincy.

Devoted grandfather of Brooke and Nicholas Reardon of Plymouth and Mark T. Jr., Brett , Amber and Sierra Reardon all of Quincy.

Visiting hours were Wednesday from 4 to 8 p.m. at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Burial will be in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to Quincy High School Football Program, Student Support Services at Quincy High School, 100 Coddington St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Water Meter Replacement and Automated Meter Reading System Project

Information for Residents

The Quincy Department of Public Works is updating 24,000 water meters throughout the city. The project includes the replacement of both the water meters and external reading system. The completed project will greatly improve the reliability and accuracy of water meter reading operations and will increase the efficiency of the DPW. The city has contracted with Easton Winwater Services, who will be performing the installations. Easton WinWater Services will need access to each water customer's house or business for this work. Please be aware that Easton WinWater Services will contact customers directly via U.S. mail. Residents of Quincy are reminded not to respond to unsolicited phone calls or home visits. All personnel installing water meters are issued identification and will arrive in uniform and in marked vehicles. A link to names and pictures of each installer can be found on the DPW website. If you believe you have been contacted by someone other than Easton Winwater or the city, please call the Quincy Police Department at 617-479-1212.

The meter replacement work will begin in September in the North Quincy/Squantum area, and will progress throughout the city by water meter reading route over the course of a two-year period. There is a systematic implementation plan for this project and therefore customers are asked to not contact Easton Winwater Service or Public Works for their meter replacement until they have received a notification letter from Easton Winwater. For a current update on this program please visit the DPW website at http://www.quincyma.gov/Government/PWD/WaterMeterRepacement.cfm

The WEV: A Variety Store And So Much More

When Mike Raimondi decided to take the plunge and become an entrepreneur, he didn't have to travel far to find the perfect business and location. Growing up in the West Elm Ave. neighborhood in Wollaston, he often frequented the local convenience store. When the opportunity arose six years ago for him and his family to own West Elm Variety, they didn't hesitate.

West Elm Variety – affectionately referred to as "The WEV" by some locals - is stocked with staples such as milk, bread and other groceries, but the store has evolved into much more. They are now selling K-Cups and the most recent addition to the store is the large K-Cup display with a large selection of flavors. With prices ranging from .75 for one K-Cup to $13.99 for a box of twenty-four, and the ability for customers to create their own personalized box, WEV provides something that isn't found anywhere in the area.

In addition to the K-Cup selection, they also carry a great selection of beer and wine, with a monthly wine special. And for the cigar aficionados, WEV has a humidor with a large selection of competitively priced premium cigars.

WEV is the only convenience store within walking distance to Wollaston Beach. This advantage allows for a great deal of foot traffic during the warmer months, as beach-goers, cyclists, runners and the like often find their way down West Elm Ave in search of a treat.

West Elm Variety, located at 139 West Elm Ave., is your friendly, neighborhood convenience store and so much more! The store hours are 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. and in the summer months the store stays open until 9 p.m. Find them on Facebook at facebook.com/west-elm variety or call 617-479-1717 for any other information.

MIKE RAIMONDI, owner of West Elm Variety located at 139 West Elm Ave., Wollaston, stands in front of the stores large K-Cup selection.

Jonathan Allen Graduates Navy Basic Training

Navy Seaman Jonathan B. Allen, a 2006 graduate of North Quincy High School, recently completed U.S. Navy basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill.

During the eight-week program, Allen completed a variety of training which included classroom study and practical instruction on naval customs, first aid, firefighting, water safety and survival, and shipboard and aircraft safety. An emphasis was also placed on physical fitness.

The capstone event of boot camp is "Battle Stations." This exercise gives recruits the skills and confidence they need to succeed in the fleet. Recruits learn sacrifice, dedication, teamwork and endurance.

A Job Well Done

LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday, Feb. 16, at approximately 11:15 a.m., Officer Paul Foley and his K-9 partner Rex, were on patrol in the West Quincy area when he observed a vehicle fail to stop for a stop sign at Willard and Copeland Streets.

Officer Foley activated his emergency lights and siren and stopped the vehicle near the intersection of Willard Street and Ricciuti Drive. Once stopped, the operator began moving around in his seat. As Officer Foley approached the vehicle, he noticed the operator's hand shaking nervously as he held the license out the window. When Officer Foley asked the driver if he knew why he was being stopped, the driver said that it was for the red light that he had blown at Willard Street and Bates Avenue.

Officer Foley told him he did not observe that violation but that he did observe the stop sign violation. When asked for the vehicle's registration, the driver said that the vehicle was not his and he did not have a registration for the vehicle.

Initially, the driver stated that he lived in Kingston and then said he was staying at his girlfriend's apartment, providing an address that is well known to the Quincy Police Department for drug activity. Officer Foley checked the driver's license, which was active, but his criminal record showed he had 22 entries, including disorderly, resisting arrest, two separate counts of trafficking cocaine, two separate counts of unlawful possession of a firearm and other drug and firearm violations.

Due to the driver's nervousness and criminal record, Officer Foley requested backup and then questioned the driver further, learning that the driver served five years in Walpole State Prison and "didn't care for people like you too much," referring to cops and correction officers.

The driver's cell phone rang and he began reaching toward his waistband and right pocket area as K-9 Officer Brian Mahoney was pulling up. Fearing that the driver could be reaching for a weapon, Officer Foley ordered the driver to keep his hands where he could see them as he ordered him out of the vehicle. A pat frisk was conducted on the driver and Officer Foley found a metal object stuffed in the right sneaker of the suspect. Inside the sneaker were a small mace canister and two small plastic bags containing white pills.

The driver said that the pills were "Perc 30's," officially known as Oxycodone, which is a Class B controlled substance. Upon further inspection of the metal canister, it was filled with 20 pills. The two plastic bags contained 19 pills in one and five pills in the other for a total of 44 pills (street value of $1,320). These pills came in different shapes and the driver/suspect did not have a prescription.

He also had $345 cash in his left front pocket; the cash was separated into two separate folds: $300 in one and $45 in another, often indicating separate transaction amounts or to separate personal cash from the proceeds of the sale of the drug.

The driver/suspect a 26-year old Quincy resident was placed under arrest for possession of a Class B substance (Oxycodone) with the intent to distribute. A K-9 sweep of the suspect's vehicle was conducted by Officer Foley's gun detection dog and Officer Mahoney's drug detection dog with negative results.

The vehicle was impounded and the cash placed into evidence, pending forfeiture hearings. Two traffic citations were issued to the suspect for the stop sign violation, a cracked windshield and no registration in possession.

Quincy Lions Club Celebrates 70th Anniversary

The Quincy Lions Club recently celebrated its 70th anniversary with a dinner gala at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy. An estimated 80 people attended the celebration.

Highlights of the evening included a narrative history of the club; a testimonial of one member's journey through Lionism; the installation of a new member; and presentations of several awards, including the Hon. Francis X. McCauley Community Service Award.

The celebration began with the Lions traditional five-point opening, which includes the Pledge of Allegiance, the singing of one verse of "America", an invocation, a "thought for the day", and the Lions toast, "Not above you, not beneath you, but with you."

Following some welcoming remarks from club President Loretta McTiernan, a narrative history of the club was given by Lion Frank McCauley, who holds title as the longest-serving member of the club, having been installed in January 1960. McCauley served as club president during the 1962-1963 "Lionistic" year.

Joyce Hogan -- a Quincy Lion and Governor of Lions District 33K -- then presented a very emotional and heartfelt testimonial of her journey through Lionism, since her installation in October 2001. During her short time as a Lion, Hogan has risen very quickly up the ranks in the district as a Club President, Zone Chair, Region Chair, District Secretary/Treasurer, Vice District Governor, and now as District Governor.

During her installation as District Governor in July, she was presented with a small banner from Sid Scruggs, International President of Lions Clubs International. Rather than keeping the banner for herself, Hogan selflessly gave it to the Quincy Lions Club for permanent display.

"I could not think of a better place for this banner than here at home, with the Quincy Lions," said Hogan. "I am so proud to be a member of this club." Hogan is Governor of over 1,900 Lions in over 40 clubs throughout the Greater Boston area.

Following dinner, Hogan presided over the installation ceremony of the club's newest member, Phi Du, Manager and Owner of Grandasia Bridal & Fashions. Du's sponsor is Lion Lola Tom.

Several membership awards were presented during the evening. Lion Christine Cedrone Logan received a 10-year membership chevron; Lion (and Quincy City Council President) Kevin Coughlin received a 15-year membership chevron; and Lion John Pickering received a 20-year membership chevron.

Lion Don Uvanitte was presented with the Membership Excellence Pin for having sponsored three new Lions during the 2009-2010 Lionistic year, and District Governor Hogan was presented with a commemorative, gold-plated lapel pin, inspired by the "Beacon of Hope" theme selected by International President Scruggs. The pin was given to Hogan on behalf of the entire membership of the Quincy Lions Club, as a gesture of support, pride, and encouragement during her term as District Governor.

Following those awards, the second annual Hon. Francis X. McCauley Community Service Award was presented to Robert Bosworth, publisher of The Quincy Sun. Bosworth was selected for having demonstrated a commitment to being of service to others and the community, consistent with the Lions motto "We Serve."

Among his charitable efforts, Bosworth is a member of the Quincy Kiwanis Club, the Quincy Salvation Army Advisory Board, the Mayor's Commission on the Family, and the Quincy Sons of Italy. Bosworth organizes the annual Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year contest (renamed the "Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award"), and also continues the tradition of sponsoring the "Community Leader" kettle in front of City Hall, in an effort to boost contributions to the Salvation Army red kettle fundraising effort during the

Flood Relief Efforts Topic Of Community Meeting

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci scheduled a community meeting Wednesday, March 2 with members of the Koch Administration and City Engineers to discuss flood relief efforts.

Mayor Koch has submitted a capital improvement plan to the City Council that includes several major flood relief projects to address the chronic flooding issues in South-West Quincy.

Palmucci's neighborhood meeting regarding this proposal, which include the inspection and cleaning of Furnace Brook, creation of a flood control station at Cross Street and Furnace Avenue, improvements to the Alrick Road pumping station, improvements to drainage in the Alrick Road area, and improvement of the Black's Creek tide gate and capacity, was set for Wednesday, March 2 at 7 p.m. at the Sons of Italy located at 120 Quarry St.

All neighbors were invited and encouraged to attend and participate.

"This capital improvement plan represents one of the largest commitments from the city, of resources both financial and otherwise, that has ever been made to address flood problems in our community," says Councilor Palmucci.

Residents with questions about this or any other matter can contact Palmucci on his cell phone, (617) 834-3945 or by email at bpalmucci@quincyma.gov.

Family History Program Starts Monday At Crane Public Library

A free series of programs on genealogy and family history will be held Mondays at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy, beginning Monday, March 7.

No registration is required for this series sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The topic Monday, March 7 is entitled "Genealogy Myths and Legends."

From our "Name was Changed at Ellis Island" to "I am descended from an Indian", be prepared for an end to some old fairy tales.

Genealogist Michael Brophy explains and debunks some of the popular fiction about genealogy and family history, including: You can research your whole family history on the internet; The Courthouse burned down and destroyed all the records; All records that you find are accurate and reliable; and If my grammie said it was true, it must be true.

Well researched proof will be presented to explain these myths.

Additional programs in the series include "Kilroy Was Here" on March 14; "Genealogy Records at the Boston Archdiocese" on March 21; and "Finding Your Ancestors in Court Records" on March 28.

For more information, visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1301.

Quincy Lions Club Celebrates 70th Anniversary

holidays. He also served as a judge during the Quincy Lions Club's essay contest last month.

"For more than twenty years, Bob Bosworth has helped keep Quincy residents informed on the important news of the day," said club President McTiernan. "He has helped countless non-profit organizations and charities raise awareness of their missions and services and showcased all that is good and positive about the City of Presidents. In doing so, he has made a valuable contribution to the social fabric of our city."

Boworth began his 23-year newspaper career at The Sun in May 1987, after graduating from the University of New Hampshire in Durham with a Bachelor of Arts degree in communication and political science. While at The Sun, he has worked as a reporter covering the mayor's office and City Hall as well as writing feature stories on Quincy events and people. He was named Editor in 1992 and became Publisher following the sudden passing of his father (and Quincy Sun founder) Henry Bosworth, in February 2009.

"I consider it a tremendous honor to follow in my dad's footsteps," Bosworth said after accepting the Lions award. "The Quincy Sun was my father's baby. Henry created it, he nurtured it, he sacrificed for it.

"In short, he loved it. And he loved Quincy.

"It's been two very long years since he passed. But knowing The Sun goes to press every week – and is still a prime source of Quincy news and features – is most comforting."

Bosworth also congratulated the Quincy Lions Club for their seven decades of outstanding community service.

"Being an active service club for 70 years in a tremendous accomplishment. And I am deeply humbled and quite overwhelmed by this honor tonight.

"Thank you, Quincy Lions for believing in community news. The Quincy Sun stands by your side to help spread your good deeds," he added.

The Quincy Lions Club was founded in January 1941, as a chapter of Lions Clubs International. The club's primary mission is to aid blind and visually impaired individuals through local service projects and fundraising efforts. The club offers leadership and social opportunities, as well as the chance to network with other civic-minded business and community leaders. The club is comprised of approximately 75 residents, civic leaders, community activists, and members of the business community who all share a desire to give back to their community. Luncheon meetings are held on the first and third Thursday of the month (Sep. – June) at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy. For more information, please visit the club's website at QuincyLionsClub.org.

OBITUARIES

LaVerne Austin, 87

A funeral Mass for LaVerne (Bowen) Austin, 87, of Kingston, formerly of Quincy, Norwell and Carver, will be celebrated Saturday at 10:30 a.m. at St. Helen's Church, Norwell.

Mrs. Austin died Feb. 23 at Jordan Hospital.

Born in Pittsburgh, PA, she previously lived in Quincy. She attended St. Elizabeth's School of Nursing in Boston and was family oriented and enjoyed spending time and celebrating holidays with her family.

Wife of the late Forrest A. Austin; sister of John B. Bowen, Regis B. Bowen and the late James D. Bowen; daughter of the late James A. and Margaret M. (Bert) Bowen.

Interment was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Shepherd Funeral Home, Kingston.

Memorial donations may be made to the Alzheimer's Association, 311 Arsenal St., Watertown, MA 02472.

Alice M. Strausbaugh, 76

A funeral service for Alice M. (Ray) Strausbaugh, 76, of Quincy, was conducted Wednesday in the Keohane Funeral Home, Quincy.

Mrs. Strausbaugh died Feb. 25.

A resident of Quincy for over 45 years, she was an active volunteer for Survival. She enjoyed traveling and was a yard sale fanatic but her main passion was being surrounded by her family, especially her grandchildren. She will be sadly missed by all who had the pleasure of knowing her.

Wife of the late Arlin V. Strausbaugh; mother of Debra Bizzaro of Quincy, Jeffrey Strausbaugh and his wife Debra of Plymouth, Joette Halpern and her husband Joel of Foxboro and Brian Strausbaugh and his wife Sarah of Raynham; sister of Claire Gaudet of Stoughton, Marilyn Scott of NH, Evelyn Pirozzi of Belmont and the late Barbara Dickerson and Grace McKain; friend of Noreen Routier of Hanover and Etta Olszowy of Quincy.

She is also survived by nine grandchildren, five great-grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital, 501 St. Jude Place, Memphis, TN 38105.

Mary R. Cleary, 69

Worked For Massachusetts DPW

A funeral Mass for Mary Rita Cleary, 69, of Quincy, was celebrated Monday in St. Joseph's Church, Quincy.

Ms. Cleary died Feb. 24 at the Quincy Rehabilitation Center.

She had lived most of her life in Quincy. She was a graduate of Archbishop Williams High School and was with the Sisters of St. Joseph until 1967. She also had worked in the Personnel Department of the Massachusetts DPW where she retired from after 21 years.

Ms. Cleary had also worked at the Mug & Muffin Restaurant in Wollaston and her interests included baking, bingo, ceramics and most especially her family.

Daughter of the late Leo and Helen Cleary; sister of John and Sherry Cleary of Whitman, Robert and Kathy Cleary of Pocasset and Daniel J. Cleary of South Weymouth; aunt of Johnny, Jennifer, Bobby, Danielle, Val, Joey, Erin, Carrie and Erin G.; friend of Katie Murphy of Stoughton and Mary Shagru of Quincy.

Interment was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McDonald Funeral Home, East Weymouth.

Memorial donations may be made to Father Bill's Place, 38 Broad St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Stephen E. Lydon

Worked For Gillette Company

A funeral Mass for Stephen E. Lydon, of Quincy, formerly of South Boston, was celebrated Feb. 24 in St. Brigid Church, South Boston.

Mr. Lydon died Feb. 20.

He was a late retired employee of the Gillette Company.

Husband of Mary E. (Norton) Lydon; brother of James M. Lydon and the late Annmarie "Nancy" (Valle) Lydon; uncle of Kelley, Michael his wife Tara and their son Liam Norton and Joann Valle; brother in-law of Martin, Robert and his wife Ann Norton; cousin to the Finnegan, Lydon, O'Malley and Ward families.

Interment was in Cedar Grove Cemetery, Dorchester.

Funeral arrangements were made by the O'Brien Funeral Home, South Boston.

Memorial donations may be made to Jerry's Kids, c/o MDA, 3300 East Sunrise Dr., Tucson, AZ 85718.

Primo L. Ceriani, 81

Purchasing Agent; Veteran

A funeral Mass for Primo L. Ceriani, 81, of Quincy, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in St. Mary's Church, West Quincy.

Visiting hours were conducted Wednesday from 4-8 p.m. at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, Quincy.

Mr. Ceriani died Sunday.

PRIMO L. CERIANI

Born, raised and educated in Quincy, he was a lifelong Quincy resident. He began his career working as a salesman and later as a manager for the former TV Supply Company in Peabody. He and a partner then founded their own television company, the former PACE Company in Brockton. Finally, he worked as a supervisor-purchasing agent for this region's Veteran Administration Affairs Health Care System for 18 years; he retired in 2002 from the VA in Jamaica Plain.

Mr. Ceriani served in the United States Army during the Korean War and received the Korean Service Medal with four Bronze Stars.

He also belonged to the Quincy Sons of Italy, the Knights of Columbus and the Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post 294.

Husband of the late Edna M. (Trainor) Ceriani; father of Peter L. Ceriani and his longtime companion Denise McKenna of Quincy, Edward J. Ceriani and his wife Nancy A. of Braintree and the late James P. Ceriani; grandfather of Ashley, Steven, Lauren and Meghan; brother of Rose Miano of Methuen, Louise Schwemin of Hanover and the late Louise Ceriani; uncle of Frank Miano of NJ, Francine Leahy of Methuen, Dan Schwemin of East Bridgewater and Roy Schwemin of Hanover.

Interment with Military Honors will be in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Tips On Getting More Use Out Of Your Garage

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

(NAPSA)-A growing number of homeowners are finding they can save money and get more from their home by reorganizing and remodeling their garage.

It's estimated there are more than 70 million garages (2007 Garage and Storage Shed Trends) in the United States and some say the average two-car garage has never been larger. Yet, due to the overflow of storage, few homeowners ever get to take full advantage of all the space it has to offer. Fortunately, there may be a way to change all that.

Turning a garage into a room

Many homeowners are starting to view their garage as yet another area of a home that, if properly organized, can become another fully functional and spacious room of the home.

"By reclaiming the garage and making it a functional part of the home, families can get more entertainment and storage space than they've realized," said Mario D'Ovidio, general manager, Gladiator GarageWorks. "Make the garage work for you. When everything has its place, you may just need a quick sweep of the broom to get the space in tip-top shape to host a tailgate party or a happy hour."

Space and convenience

Start by looking at your garage and determining how it's used and where the entry points are in the space. Then determine what areas should be created and where they should be located to maximize space and convenience.

For instance, creating a recycling area near the entry door to the house limits the need to trek across the garage when tossing in those newspapers and aluminum cans.

Think dual purpose

Another way to save is to invest in pieces that are modular -items that can serve a dual purpose. For example, one such item is the Gladiator GarageWorks Bamboo Modular Workbench. The workbench, which is made of sustainable materials, was originally conceived as a workspace for garage hobbyists. However, the sturdy, natural work surface can also work as a buffet table, bar or kids' crafting station.

The company offers a full line of workbenches, cabinets, wall systems and components, such as shelves, baskets, bins and hooks, designed to help homeowners get more from their space.

First-Time Homebuyer Workshop March 14, 19

Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore and the Bank of Canton will host a first-time homebuyer workshop Monday, March 14 from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturday, March 19 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Bank of Canton, 490 Turnpike St., Canton.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuying certificate.

There is a $20 fee per person.

The workshop is open to all, regardless of income.

Seminars are educational and recommended for all potential first time homebuyers. Participants will have an opportunity to speak with a lender to discuss many mortgage options.

Other topics include the legal aspects of buying a home, importance of home and lead inspections and other information.

The workshop is a prerequisite for first-time homebuyer mortgage and grant programs.

For more information or to register, call 617-770-2227 ext. 31.

THIS IS A HAMMER

Broken Bulb Blues

Q: I was trying to unscrew a burnt-out light bulb yesterday, which unfortunately stuck and then broke as I tried to force it to turn. I wasn't hurt, but now I have a jagged remnant stuck in the socket. I'm afraid to turn that light on, but it's the ceiling light in my den, and I'd really like to be able to work there. Any suggestions? Also, what do you think of those new fluorescent light bulbs? – Derek N., Youngstown, Ohio

A: First, turn off the circuit breaker to that room to make sure no electricity is getting to the socket. Second, put on a sturdy work glove and place a wastebasket nearby to discard the bulb. Third, take a raw potato or a piece of soap. Cut the potato in half and trim to slightly larger than the diameter of the socket. Press the trimmed part of the potato or soap against the jagged edges of the broken bulb. Then, slowly turn counterclockwise to unscrew. You may need to brace the socket with your free hand or with a pair of needle-nose pliers if it tries to twist with the bulb.

If this doesn't work, contact an electrician to remove the bulb and inspect the socket for damage.

As to your second question regarding CFL (compact fluorescent lamp) bulbs, well, they're the wave of the future – like it or not. The last U.S.-manufactured incandescent light bulb rolled off the production lines last year. The ones on store shelves now are produced overseas. CFLs do produce the same amount of light while using significantly less power, so you may see a slight difference in your power bill if all your home's bulbs are CFLs. The cost of a CFL is higher than that of an incandescent bulb, but that price is coming down. Additionally, CFLs last much longer than incandescents, so you won't be purchasing them as often.

By the way, if you break a glass-coil CFL bulb, the soap/potato trick isn't effective. Wear sturdy work gloves and grip the socket and the small extension from which the CFL's glass coil protruded and carefully unscrew it.

HOME TIP: Light bulb flickering? Before changing it or calling an electrician, try removing the bulb and cleaning its base with a pencil eraser. A clean contact may solve the problem.

What You Need To Know When Replacing Windows

(NAPSA) – Your home is a major investment and replacing outdated, inefficient windows can be an important step in protecting that investment.

New windows can lower your heating and cooling bills, block harmful UV rays, reduce exterior noise and increase a home's resale value. Replacement windows come in a variety of styles and materials, the most popular of which are steel, vinyl and wood.

Besides deciding on the frame, it's also important to consider the kind of insect-screening material that will be used.

THE RIGHT SCREENS allow better airflow, allowing light, fresh breezes to flow through and more optical clarity.

Daylighting

Choosing the right kind of screening can help replace some of the light that may be lost when installing energy-efficient windows. The low-e glass used in many windows today helps to save energy but it does so by reducing the amount of light transmitted through windows. Standard screen material can dim light even further.

One of the advantages of screening materials such as Phifer's UltraVue is that they improve "daylighting" by providing 25 percent more optical clarity for a crisper, brighter outward view.

Ventilation

The second reason many experts prefer UltraVue Excellent Visibility Insect Screen is superior ventilation, because the 15 percent greater openness provides 25 percent better airflow.

The screens are also infused with Microban antimicrobial protection, helping to provide an additional level of cleanliness protection that won't wash or wear away for the lifetime of the screen. Microban inhibits the growth of stain- and odor-causing bacteria, mold and mildew, and works continuously to keep screens cleaner for longer.

The screens are Greenguard certified by the Greenguard Environmental Institute (GEI) for superior indoor air-quality performance, and certified for meeting the more stringent GEI Children and Schools standards for commercial use.

All products certified by GEI must pass a series of rigorous emissions tests and undergo quarterly tests, as well as annual recertification to ensure their low emission status is maintained. The certification is a requirement reference in the Leadership for Energy and Environmental Design for Commercial Interiors Rating System.

Red Door Real Estate Marking 1st Anniversary

Red Door Real Estate, LLC, in Quincy, is marking its one year anniversary as a full service real estate brokerage, announces Broker/Owner Madelene Semeria Cheney.

During its first year, Red Door Real Estate, LLC expanded its operations and opened an office location on Sea Street in Quincy. The sleek, modern office space is adorned by paintings of local landmarks and historic magazine articles dating back to the 1800s.

"Red Door Real Estate continues to expand with a goal to attract today's high tech real estate agents," Cheney said. "As a result of the current market conditions, real estate brokerage models are evolving. Red Door has developed a unique business model that caters to the real estate agent. The company structure is one that leverages the various technologies available to assist in an agent's success; allowing more time to build their own business.

"Red Door offers agents the structure and direction needed to conduct their business but does not weigh agent's down with unnecessary fees for service they do not use or see value in," she added.

Cheney pointed out Red Door provides home sellers with an aggressive marketing plan to get their home sold.

"With excellent internet exposure, strategic marketing partners and direct mail initiatives, sellers can reach the largest group of potential buyers," she said.

Red Door Real Estate, LLC is a family owned, full service real estate brokerage locally owned by husband and wife team, Michael Cheney Jr. and Madelene Semeria Cheney.

Broker/Owner Madelene Cheney began her real estate career six years ago. She holds a bachelor's degree in marketing.

QHS Boys and Girls, NQ Boys Are All Playing

March Madness High School Style Underway

THE QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL Lady Presidents hosted a first round Division I South Sectional tournament game last night (Wed.) against Taunton HS. Quincy entered the state playoffs with a sterling 17-3 record, which included a second place finish in the Patriot League. A win by QHS last night would set up a quarterfinal contest this Friday against, most likely, Newton South HS.

Quincy Sun team photos/Larry Carchedi

By SEAN BRENNAN

March Madness began in earnest earlier this week for three (out-of-four) Quincy high school basketball programs when the Division I and Division II South Sectional Basketball Tournaments tipped-off on Tuesday night.

On the boys' side, both the North Quincy Red Raiders and the Quincy Presidents, were set to play in their tourney openers on March 1 (Tuesday) after The Quincy Sun went to press for the week while the Quincy girls' team played its tournament opener last night (Wednesday) at home (7 p.m. start).

The Red Raiders finished the regular season with a 10-10 record. North Quincy was seeded 17th in the field of 18 in Division I South. The team played a preliminary round contest against 16th seeded Needham High School (11-9), out of the Bay State League, on the road Tuesday night.

The winner of North Quincy/Needham is scheduled to travel to top-seeded Mansfield HS tonight (Thursday, March 3) for a first round game against the 20-2 Hornets.

The top five contenders in Division I South include Mansfield (20-2), Weymouth (17-3), New Bedford (16-3), Marshfield (15-3) and Attleboro (16-4).

Taunton (10-8, 15th seed), Needham (11-9, 16th seed), North Quincy (10-10, 17th seed) and Xaverian (10-10, 18th seed), the last four schools in the field, all played preliminary round games Tuesday night, with Taunton and Xaverian playing at Taunton HS.

The Presidents concluded their regular season at 10-10 overall and ended up being seeded 13th in the field of 15 in Division II South.

Quincy, as a result, played at #4 Duxbury HS (14-6), a familiar Patriot League opponent, on Tuesday evening in a first round tilt. The Presidents were looking to avenge a 54-40 loss to the Green Dragons suffered during the regular season.

The winner of the Quincy/Duxbury game will play either #5 Oliver Ames (13-7) or #12 Whitman-Hanson (10-9); if the Presidents were to upset higher seeded Duxbury, Quincy would be on the road tonight, but if Duxbury holds court, the Green Dragons will host the quarterfinal game.

The top five schools in Division II South are Hopkinton (17-3), Wellesley (16-4), Falmouth (15-5), Duxbury (14-6) and Oliver Ames (13-7).

The Quincy Presidents girls' program opened the 2011 Division I Girls South Sectional tournament last night with a home game against Taunton HS. The Presidents (17-3) were seeded sixth in the field of 20 and as a result played the #11 Taunton Tigers (14-4) in a first round game.

Quincy, which plays all year and was widely regarded as one of the stronger teams in Division II South, is added to the Division I South bracket because of total female enrollment at the high school.

The Presidents better bring their 'A' game to the tournament. The Division I South bracket is absolutely loaded. The twelve highest seeded schools all finished with 14 wins or more during the regular season.

If Quincy can escape a tough Taunton team in the first round their reward will be a quarterfinal matchup against the winner of the Newton South/Brockton first round contest. Newton South will be the heavy favorite in that first round game as the #3 Lions (19-1) have been the best team in Division I South all winter with their only loss coming against Division I North powerhouse Central Catholic, 73-70, in overtime of the prestigious Comcast Tournament held at Boston College High School two weekends ago.

The top-ten front-runners for a Division I South Sectional crown are New Bedford (20-0), Mansfield (21-1), Newton South (19-1), Wellesley (18-2), Braintree (16-2), Quincy (17-3), Franklin (15-3), Marshfield (18-4), Falmouth (16-4) and North Attleboro (14-4).

Quincy Lady Presidents

Quincy recently finished their most successful regular season in Coach Jeff Bretsch's ten-year tenure as QHS head coach. The team's 17-3 overall record established the Presidents as one of the top teams in Division II South girls' basketball, but, due to the total number of females enrolled at the high school, the program gets bumped up into Division I come tournament time.

As the saying goes, "It is what it is."

And what it means for Quincy is that the path to a potential South Sectional title is about to get brutal.

It began last night with a first round home game versus Taunton High School. The Tigers were seeded 11th overall with a 14-4 record. For a team with 17 regular season wins under its belt, the Presidents' first game of the Sectionals would have seemed better suited for a quarterfinal matchup.

"(Taunton) is not your typical eleventh seed and we are not your typical sixth seed," said Jeff Bretsch in a phone interview with The Sun on Monday. "They are a good team and should present us with a real challenge. We are happy to have earned a home game but we will not be taking them for granted because they play some excellent basketball."

What the Tigers do well, according to Bretsch, is facilitate strong point guard play into a low-post offensive set. Taunton likes to use their size and strength in the paint with an eye towards bullying opposing defenses. On defense, this same power game is used to shut down easy access to the basket, although, and this may end up being a huge factor, this type of defense leaves outside shooting lanes open; a fact that may play into Quincy's hands.

"I feel like Kiley McDonald and Katie Lowry are good enough low-post defenders that we should be able to slow them down on offense," added Bretsch. "And on offense our style matches up well with them. We have the shooters to make the open shots when we get the looks, so if they take away the driving lanes and we can make our shots we should be able to score."

Competing this winter in the Patriot League, Quincy has already played (and won) its fair share of games over quality opponents. This experience gained in the regular season should be advantageous come tournament time.

"We are geared up for this," Bretsch continued. "Hosting a home game is going to be fun and playing against the competition we played this year has given us good experience. We have played in big games already and they only get bigger starting with Taunton."

A victory over the Tigers will most likely set Quincy up with a quarterfinal battle against 19-1 Newton South HS on Friday night. The Lions are the third seed, but they are the favorites to eventually win this Sectional. But Quincy should not be counted out if they happen to make it past Taunton; the Presidents can score with most teams and a hot shooting night could very well propel QHS into a semifinal date early next week.

North Quincy Red Raiders

After wrapping up the regular season back on Feb. 17, Coach Kevin Barrett took his team down to Cohasset this past weekend to scrimmage as a means to get his boys ready for what should be an exciting Division I South tournament.

The Red Raiders (10-10) played a preliminary round road game on Tuesday night against Bay State League opponent Needham HS (11-9); North Quincy was seeded 17th while the Rockets came in as the 16th seed.

According to Barrett, whose program is back in the Sectionals for the first time since the 2007-2008 season, his Red Raiders will have their hands full with the talented Rockets, but match-up-wise, North Quincy stacks up.

"We are excited to get down there and play," said Barrett on Monday. "Needham plays in the Bay State League with teams like Weymouth. As a Weymouth resident, I have seen them play several times on local cable TV and I have also seen them in person. They defeated an excellent Weymouth team earlier this year, so they are going to be tough."

"But I feel like we match up well," he continued. "They are not overly big down low, which has been a problem for us all year being out-sized. What we have to do, the number one thing, is rebound the ball on the offensive and defensive glass. If we can limit them to one shot and done and remain committed and aggressive, all five players on the court, we should be ok."

North Quincy is also going to have to make open shots. In the tournament, guard play and outside shooting usually makes or breaks teams. Fortunately, the Red Raiders have shooters in juniors Dan and Pat Gould, Marquis McClendon and Paul Cunniff who can all score points in buckets. Add in the contributions of junior captain Tim Liuzzo (forward) and North Quincy is a potential matchup nightmare for Needham.

"Dan Gould was one of the Patriot League's leading scorers and Pat finished around 70% from three-point range," said Barrett. "Marquis has played well for us this season and gets us into transition from defense to offense faster than anyone in the league. There is great opportunity for my players to make their mark."

A victory over Needham would set the Red Raiders up with a first round game against top-seeded Mansfield (20-2), but Barrett sees the Division I South field as being wide open.

"In the tournament any team can go on a run," he stated. "A team can get hot and if you have players who shoot well you can beat any team you face. The field looks wide open this year."

Quincy Presidents

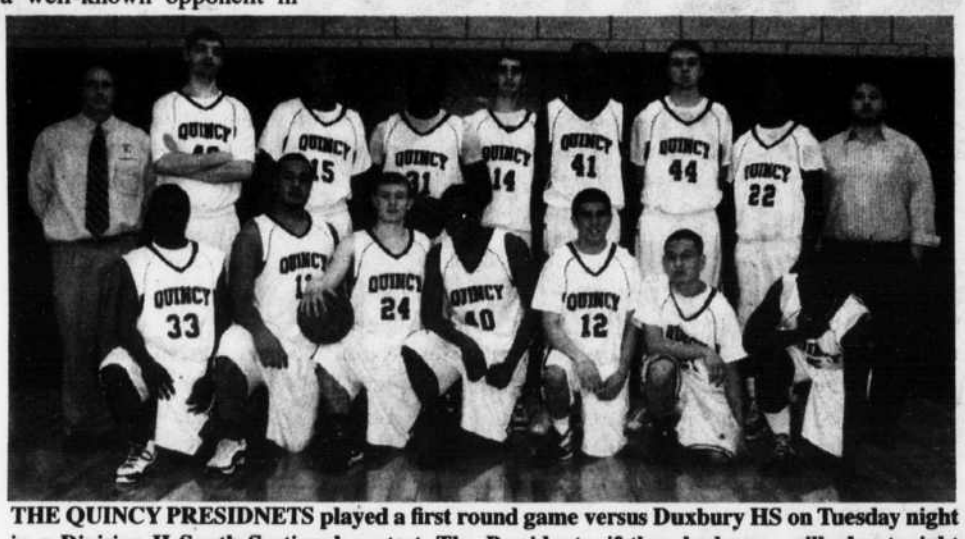
The Presidents played a well-known opponent in Duxbury HS on Tuesday night in the first round of the Division II South Sectional tournament.

The Presidents were seeded 13th and the Green Dragons were the four seed.

Quincy (10-10) is familiar with Duxbury as both teams play in the Patriot League; the Presidents lost to Duxbury 54-40 back in January, but Coach David Parry liked his team's chances in this second go-around.

"They are a long team," he said on Monday, "with all five starters 6'2" or bigger. You could say their only weakness is that they don't have a prototypical point guard and that could be an advantage for us."

"Duxbury really took it to us pretty good the last time we played," Parry continued. "But we did hold them to six points in the second quarter and that is something we will look to build on. Overall, they are a well coached and disciplined. They don't really do a lot of things different, so we know what they want to do. Our biggest challenge will be to rebound the basketball."



Familiarity with the Green Dragons is there for Quincy, but Duxbury has yet to see two players Parry has integrated into his rotation late this season, which may be a game changer. Senior Seth Pullum and sophomore Tykei Hallman bring an added dimension to the Presidents' team.

"We hope that that may tip the scale in our favor," he said. "The pressure will be on them but we have to leave everything on the floor and hit open shots. We have our work cut out for us, but I am happy with our work ethic and how we are playing as a team and that is really what it is all about."

Along with Quincy and Duxbury, the Division II South field is loaded with Patriot League teams. Scituate, Hingham and Whitman-Hanson littered the bracket and each of them could find themselves in the finals.

"It is wide open," concluded Parry. "Any given game any team could win. We are excited about our chances and we are looking forward to matching up with Duxbury again."

The winner of Quincy/Duxbury will play the winner of Oliver Ames/Whitman-Hanson game.

THE QUINCY PRESIDNETS played a first round game versus Duxbury HS on Tuesday night in a Division II South Sectional contest. The Presidents, if they had won, will play tonight (Thursday) against the winner of the Oliver Ames/Whitman-Hanson first round affair. THE NORTH QUINCY RED RAIDERS traveled to Needham High on Tuesday night to play a Division I South Sectional preliminary round game. The 17th seed Red Raiders entered the tournament with a 10-10 record and if they had won against the Rockets, North Quincy will play at Mansfield HS tonight.

Shared Patriot League Crown With Scituate and Pembroke; Seeded Sixth In Div. II Field

NQ Red Raiders Are Ready For Prime Time

By SEAN BRENNAN

Just like an empty net the Division II South Sectional boys hockey title is there for the taking and the North Quincy Red Raiders are ready to pounce.

Some pundits may look at the ten-team bracket and point to the top-three teams: #1 Mansfield (17-2-1), defending Division II state champion #2 Canton (15-3-2), and #3 Franklin (14-4-2) as the programs to beat. This Hockomock League trio brings into the tournament a combined record of 46-9-5, rather impressive on paper, but at closer look many of these wins have come against the lower-tier teams in that league.

The Hockomock is heavy on top with Mansfield, Canton, Franklin and #7 seeded Oliver Ames carrying the torch, but the rest including Stoughton (3-9-1 in league play), Foxboro (2-11), Attleboro (3-8-2), King Philip (4-7-2) and North Attleboro (5-9-2) failed to reach the requisite number of victories for postseason inclusion.

So what does this all mean for North Quincy?

What it means for the Red Raiders is this: If North Quincy (8-4-8) wants to play for a sectional crown, they are going to have to beat Franklin in the quarterfinals (for location and time, visit www.miaa.net and check the South Division II bracket) and then find a way to skate past the winner of the Canton-Oliver Ames/Dedham quarterfinal (OA and Dedham played a first round game on Tuesday night).

The Red Raiders - and Dedham - are playing the role of Hockomock League slayers. North Quincy head coach Matt Gibbons is confident, based on what he has seen out of his team this winter, that they will be ready to face the challenge head-on.

"Mansfield, Canton and Franklin are the top three teams in Division II South and they are all very talented," Gibbons said on Monday. "But we feel like with the regular season we just had (champions of the Patriot League) and the league schedule and the non-league schedule that we played that we are going to be amped up and ready."

"In the Patriot League every game is tough," he continued, "and the level of competition we played out of league especially at the end of the season facing Archbishop Williams (2-2 tie) and Canton (1-0 loss) should bode well. We also played and defeated Quincy (4-1) to claim a share of the Patriot League championship. Our last five games were played in a playoff-type atmosphere."

To get prepared to face off against Franklin, North Quincy only needs to revisit its history for motivation. The Panthers eliminated the Red Raiders, 3-2, in the first round in 2008 and 4-2 in the quarterfinals in 2007.

"A couple of years ago we lost to them," said Gibbons. "They have been a thorn in our side. Franklin is fast; they are tough, they are well coached and (they) always seem to produce strong players but I think we match up well.

"We play with speed, we are a tough team and we have solid defense and goaltending. If we play our best we have a real good shot."

Gibbons is also comfortable with his team playing the role of underdog. If teams want to look past North Quincy they do so at their own peril.

"No one is really talking about us," he said about his Raiders. "We want it to be that no one is going to want to play us. People may look at our record and see those eight ties and question it. For me, that means that we have played a lot of close games and played well in them, and, those games out of league and how we performed shows something to me about my team's character."

For the Red Raiders to advance into the semifinals they will need to be ready to own the opening period, which is something that has been lacking in their game all season. The majority of the eight ties have been the results of slow starts, leaving them having to play catch up hockey.

Fall behind 2-0 against the Panthers and North Quincy could be in for a long night.

"We need to bring energy in the first period," said Gibbons. "That doesn't mean we need to go up 1-0 or 2-0; we just need to feel like we controlled the action with our effort. This team has been a second and third period team all season. The first period has been our Achilles heel."

THE NORTH QUINCY RED RAIDERS enter the Division II South Sectional tournament as a sixth seed. The team plays a quarterfinal contest versus #3 Franklin HS later this week. NQHS finished the regular season as tri-champions of the Patriot League along with Scituate and Pembroke.

One skater who has the ability to get North Quincy off to that fast start is senior captain Brendan Glynn. Glynn is the Red Raiders' most explosive offensive threat; equally important has been the inner strength Glynn has tapped into which has helped him take his role as team leader to the next level. His coach views that overall improvement as both a boost for team morale while also giving Glynn that extra confidence for the playoff push.

"Brendan has stepped up his game. He is not only our best player but he has turned himself into a great captain," praised Gibbons. "It always makes it easier when your best player is also a leader. The team follows his lead."

Senior forwards Jimmy Scribi, Dereck Graham, Mike Nelson and Joe Kowlski also bring contributions to the ice for North Quincy on offense and the defensemen core of (underclassmen) Tim Marks, Mike Adduci, Nick Furey and Rudy Tryon are ready to hold opposing teams at bay.

Between the pipes, junior goaltender James Dunn has been consistently spectacular and provides the Red Raiders with a solid wall on the back end.

"I have a few guys that played significant roles two years ago and the rest of the team has gained playoff-type experience this year while playing the last part of the schedule in a tournament atmosphere," Gibbons noted. "They have bought into the system and we are a better team than people think we are because of it. I can roll out three or four lines; we are under the radar."

A victory over the Panthers will get North Quincy plenty of attention and also a potential rematch with defending state champion Canton.

'If we can beat Franklin I believe we can put a scare into Canton," said Gibbons. "This is a wide open field. If we can get hot and win two games we are going to find ourselves with a opportunity to play for a sectional title."

Vinnie Cameron, Frank Mastroilli, Connor Flynn, James McManus, Colin Kulig, Nick McGaughey, Pat Verhault, James Doherty and Robbie Cameron make up the rest of the 2010-2011 Red Raiders.

Note: The ten-team Division II South Sectionals is as follows: Mansfield (17-2-1), Canton (15-3-2), Franklin (14-4-2), Plymouth North (12-4-4), Plymouth South (13-6-1), North Quincy (8-4-8), Oliver Ames (9-8-4), Coyle-Cassidy (9-9-2), Dennis-Yarmouth (10-10-2) and Dedham (7-12-4).

Annual Kiwanis Tournament Held At The Quincy Youth Arena

AUSTRIA WAS REPRESENTED at the 2011 Kiwanis Hockey Tournament, which was held over the February school vacation week at the Quincy Youth Arena. Several local families hosted members of the Austrian team as Quincy youngsters made new friends on and off the ice.

Eight-year-old Aidan McConnell slowly emerged from the locker room at the Quincy Youth Arena beat and dog tired. He slowly lugged his massive equipment bag behind him, looking as though he was in no hurry to get anywhere soon.

It was McConnell who provided the lone bit of offense with a first-period tally in the Quincy Mite A's 7-1 loss at the hands of the Cape Cod Canal squad last Friday afternoon.

McConnell's second goal of the Kiwanis International Hockey Tournament was as pretty as they come and would make the cut for any highlight film at any level of play. Hustling down the right side, McConnell deked his way past the Canal defense and banged home a short-side tally just inside the right post.

After the game, though, McConnell was hardly impressed with his burst of offense. He simply shrugged his shoulders after the game. His squad had put together a solid effort, but it wasn't enough against a very quick-skating Canal squad. "We could have had more offense," McDonnell said.

The score could have been vastly different if not for the acrobatics of Sam Stone between the posts for Quincy. One of the youngest players on the team, Stone kept the score close in the second period (3-1) with a tremendous save on a breakaway and a terrific glove stop on the rebound shot. Stone didn't let up a bit in the third with a huge stop on another breakaway, along with a sprawling pad save on another high-percentage shot.

"He's probably the youngest kid on the team," said head coach Ralph Richardson. "He's playing great and having a blast."

For Richardson, coaching his son Michael in the tourney was extra special. Richardson played his hockey for Xaverian and then collegiately at Bentley, but before that competed in the same Kiwanis Tournament as a youngster.

"I played in this tournament from mites through midgets," said Richardson. "I'm glad that my kids are into it now. Lots of the parents and coaches played in the tournament."

Pee Wee Pat Quirk was in the stands taking in the Cape Cod/Quincy Mites contest. Quirk's squad, too, was having its problems. "We're not doing well at all," he said.

Quirk's family was one of many who hosted players from Austria who traveled from Europe to compete in the prestigious tournament. Pat's older brother, 14-year-old John, said it wasn't hard to recognize the difference in the style of play between the American and Austrian players.

"It's been a lot fun," said John. "Especially watching the Austrians play. They do more passing and puck work than we do over here."

Kathy Quirk's son Ryan was a member of the Mite A's and found the week to be extremely satisfying and enlightening hosting two Austrian players. The kids spent a lot of time talking hockey with one another and played their share of Xbox. When they weren't playing, they were oftentimes at the rink watching other teams battle on the ice.

"It's been a little tough, but they're (Mite A's) playing hard," said Kathy Quinn. "We're hosting two of the Austrians and it's been a great experience. They're great kids – very polite."

All the hard work by the teams in the Mites, Pee Wee and Bantam divisions came down to the championships on Sunday. Braintree's Bantam squad dominated the competition the entire tournament in outscoring its opponents 21-4. The Braintree Bantams bested a tough Duxbury team 5-3 in the finals to come away with the championship. Weymouth doubled up Cape Cod Canal 6-3 to capture the Mites title and Weymouth did the same to Braintree in the Pee Wee title game, 6-3.

The following are Kiwanis Tournament game results for the three Quincy divisions (Mite, Pee Wee and Bantam). The great folks at the Quincy Youth Arena provided these game sheet results to The Quincy Sun.

Mite Division

The Quincy Mites lost their Kiwanis Tournament opener to Weymouth, 11-0.

The Quincy Mites' roster included Sam Stone, Brendan Bailey, Tommy Page, Peyton McGaffigan, Zachary Holmes, Sal Garcia, Liam Foster, Michael Richardson, Aidan McDonnell, Ty DeGust, Ryan Quirk, Bobby Keegan, Sean O'Brien, Brody DeGust and Rhys Foster.

Quincy vs. Cape Cod Canal (Feb. 25)

Aidan McDonnell scored a first period tally for Quincy, but his team dropped a 7-1 decision to Cape Cod Canal in the Kiwanis Hockey Tournament.

Quincy vs. Woonsocket (R.I.) (Feb. 26)

Woonsocket defeated Quincy, 14-0, in a Mite Division game.

Pee Wee Division

The Quincy Pee Wee squad opened the 2011 Kiwanis Tournament with a game against neighboring Weymouth. Quincy had rough sledding, losing 12-0.

Quincy vs. Seahawks (Feb. 23)

The Quincy Pee Wee's dropped a 9-2 decision to the Seahawks.

Jo-Jo McArdle and Peter Gagne scored third period goals, assisted by James O'Leary and Colin Logan and Paul Blake, respectively.

Bantam Division

Quincy vs. Braintree (Feb. 22)

The Quincy Bantam team lost to Braintree, 4-0, in their Kiwanis Tournament opener.

Quincy vs. Austria – Scrimmage (Feb. 22)

As the host team, Quincy skated with visiting Austria in a Kiwanis scrimmage on Feb. 22. Quincy scored four times in the first period and held on to win 6-4.

Pat Freeman (assist to Eddie Riley), Mike Pugsley (unassisted), Aaron Clancy (J.R. McEvilly assist), and Chris Smith (Brian Ayers assist) lit the lamp for Quincy in the opening period. Bobby Harding (McEvilly assist) and Kevin Mock (Brian O'Callaghan and Freeman had assists).

Quincy, behind third period tallies from Mike Pugsley (two goals) and Steve Ross, skated past Weymouth, 3-2 in Kiwanis Tournament action.

Pugsley also scored a second period goal with assists going to Brendan Cox and Aaron Clancy; Clancy assisted on Pugsley's third period goal and Pugsley and Mike Finn assisted on Ross' eventually game-winner.

Quincy vs. Duxbury (Feb. 24)

JR McEvilly and Mike Pugsley scored third period goals to lift the Quincy Bantams over Duxbury, 6-4, on Feb. 24.

Also scoring for Quincy were Aaron Clancy (two goals), Bobby Harding and Brendan Cox.

Make Everyday Meals A Better Nutrition Choice With Simple Switches

(NAPSA)-Making dinner a family affair is a great way to share time with each other and lets parents make better nutrition choices for their kids. Preparing great-tasting and balanced meals at home is more important now than ever, especially with the release of the new Dietary Guidelines for Americans.

Among other recommendations, the guidelines urge everyone to limit the amount of saturated fat in their diet. Registered Dietitian Pamela Nisevich says that meals at home can be quick and good for your family, and that with a few simple switches, you can save on saturated fat without sacrificing taste.

Here are three simple switches to save on saturated fat that your family will love:

1. Brighten Up Your Mornings-Swap bacon and eggs for oatmeal with a variety of brightly colored berries and fresh fruit. The fruit adds a rainbow of color sure to excite kids and gives the oatmeal a naturally sweet taste to satisfy their sweet tooth.

2. Lighten Your Lunch-Opt for leaner cuts of lunch meat. Dress up turkey, low-fat ham, chicken or roast beef with fresh veggies and low-fat cheese. The savory sandwiches are sure to be a lunch room favorite.

3. Beat the Dinner Doldrums-Make your veggies more exciting: Instead of topping them with butter, switch to one serving of Shedd's Spread Country Crock(r), which has 70 percent less saturated fat than butter and no hydrogenated oils, so there's 0 grams of trans fat per serving.*

*Shedd's Spread Country Crock(r) Original Spread contains 7g total fat and 2g saturated fat per serving.

Here's an easy-to-prepare, great-tasting recipe you can try tonight:

WITH A FEW simple switches, you can save on saturated fat without sacrificing taste in your meals.

MIXED VEGETABLE SAUTE

HEADS UP...

Brain injury is a dreadful consequence of ski and snowboarding accidents, and unfortunately, it is not uncommon. In fact, an analysis of accidents associated with these two sports over a recent two-year period shows that traumatic brain injury accounts for 50 to 88 percent of skiing and snowboarding fatalities. These grim statistics are provided in the hope that they will lead to an increased awareness of the problem and the need for more widespread use of helmets by skiers and snowboarders. According to the study of participants of these two winter sports in this country, those who wear helmets are less likely to suffer a head injury and lose consciousness than those who choose not to wear this protective gear.

Wearing helmets is of the utmost importance for any outdoor sport. Listen To Your Mother: Wash Your Hands

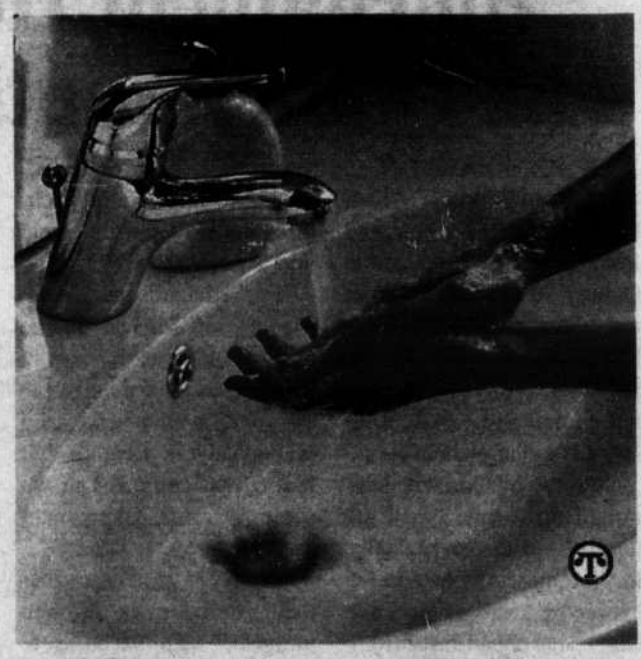
(NAPSA) – Despite the obvious benefits, there are still many people who do not follow good hand- washing habits.

"If we all simply wash our hands frequently and correctly, we can play a huge role in reducing the spread of germs from one person to another," said Paul Santoro, CRNA, president of the American Association of Nurse Anesthetists (AANA). "From a healthcare perspective, the AANA views handwashing negligence as a critical patient safety problem and promotes requiring all health- care professionals to comply with proper hand hygiene standards for their own safety and the safety of their patients."



To help promote hand hygiene, the healthcare experts at the AANA recommend that everyone follow these simple tips on proper hand-washing from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC):

• How to wash: Wet hands with clean running water and apply soap. For 20 seconds, rub hands together to make a lather and scrub all surfaces. To ensure that this is being done for 20 seconds, try humming the "Happy Birthday" song from beginning to end two times. Afterward, rinse hands well under running water before drying them with a paper towel or an air dryer. If possible, use a paper towel to turn off the faucet.

• When to wash: Hands should be washed before and after preparing food, eating, touching people, treating wounds or giving medicine, and treating a sick or injured person. It is equally important to wash hands after activities such as using the toilet, changing a diaper, touching an animal, blowing your nose, coughing, sneezing or handling trash.

In healthcare facilities, adhering to proper handwashing techniques is essential in reducing the risk of exposing patients to the possibility of infections that are transmitted through touch and consequently could lead to dire consequences. Historically, the AANA has taken a strong stance in advocating for patient safety and preventing unsafe health care practices. The association works closely with the CDC to aggressively address vital issues such as infection control and safe injection practices.

For more information, visit www.aana.com or call (847) 692-7050.

TO WASH YOUR hands properly, lather up and scrub all surfaces for about 20 seconds or as long as it takes to hum the "Happy Birthday" song twice.

Are Getting Chilled, Catching Cold Linked?

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My friend and I have an ongoing discussion about how we catch colds. I believe the only way is by being exposed to a germ. My friend agrees, but also says you can become chilled, and that results in a cold. Please settle this once and for all. – L.G.

ANSWER: The only way to catch a cold is to meet up with a cold virus. But let's kick this around a little while it lies there quivering.

Rhinoviruses are responsible for many colds. This virus is passed from one person to another most often via the hands and fingers. An infected person invariably will have virus on his or her hands and fingers. If that person touches another person's hands or fingers, the virus is transferred. All the second person has to do is touch his or her nose or eyes and the virus has found a new home. (The drainage channel for tears siphons viruses into the nose.) It's also possible to spread a cold through sneezing or coughing, but that's a secondary route.

Many colds are preceded by a body chill. That's part of the infection symptoms, and that might be what your friend refers to.

Once a virus lands in a person's nose, the time till the development of cold symptoms is short – eight to 12 hours. Runny nose, nasal stuffiness, scratchy throat, cough and sneezing are typical symptoms. They peak in 48 hours and are gone in about one week. A person is most contagious during the first three days of symptoms, when nasal discharge is at high volume and when it contains the most viruses.

If by "chilling" your friend means being in a cold blast of air or getting your feet wet in frigid weather and shivering as a result, she has a slight point. That kind of chilling constricts the nose's blood vessels and decreases mucus production. It might, therefore, permit cold viruses to mount a more effective attack and can contribute to the ease of catching a cold. All the same, without the virus there is no cold.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Can you give an explanation of and recommendation for cure of a health problem I have? Being over the age of 65 and in reasonably good health, I suffer every winter from painful cracks in my fingertips and the soles of my feet. – R.V.

ANSWER: The cracking indicates that your skin is drying out. You can restore moisture to your fingertips with a light coat – just a dab will do you – of petroleum jelly (Vaseline or another moisturizer) before going to bed. Put Band-Aids over your fingertips, and leave them on all night. You can do the same during the day, but it's a bit inconvenient. In about three days, the cracks should be filling in. Continue this treatment every third or fourth night.

The same thing works for the feet. You don't use Band-Aids, but you do cover your feet with socks before going to sleep. Don't appiy petroleum jelly during the daytime. It might make you somewhat unsteady. It takes longer for feet to heal.

Sermon Series At Union Congregational

For March, Rev. Jack Swanson of Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd. in Wollaston, will preach a Sermon Series "Manly Men," a series of sermons that feature the stories of great men of the faith and the Scriptures that inspired them.

"What makes a man great is not so much what he does but who he is, i.e. his character," Swanson said. "It is written than many men die and leave a name for themselves but many more do not and it is as if they had never been born, yet they shall be remembered for their faithfulness (Ecclesiasticus 44).

"The men to be featured were both famous and obscure. All found their basis for character in their faith.

"William McKinley saw the ravages of war as a young man yet found himself leading his country into a war which he had strived to avoid.

"Saint Paul, once a persecutor of the faith, became her greatest champion. Saint Patrick didn't drive snakes out of Ireland but an evil paganism.

"Jim Elliot turned down a lucrative career for a backwater mission that proved fatal. These were manly men of character and faith.

"This month we'll hear their stories and the Biblical truth that inspired them."

The public is invited to attend the worship services, which take place Sunday mornings at 10 a.m., followed by coffee hour. Union Church is handicapped accessible.

Bethany Congregational

Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center, invites people of all faiths to a Special Lenten Service Series.

Lent is the seven-week period preceding Easter. Each Wednesday evening at 7 p.m. there will be a brief worship service focusing on the Lenten theme of Preparation. The relaxed and informal service is suited for churchgoers, novices and those who have been away from the church for a while.

The service runs March 9 through April 13. For more information, call the church office at 617-479-7300.

Shared Supper, Informal Worship Service Begin Lent At United Methodist

On Ash Wednesday, March 9, the Quincy Community United Methodist Church will have a shared supper and service beginning at 6:30 p.m. with a potluck supper.

Parishioners are asked to bring an appetizer, main course, salad or dessert to share. A brief service of Holy Communion will follow, and ashes will be distributed.

The church, located at 40 Beale St., is handicapped accessible.

'Rock-n-Roll Reunion' Saturday

Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St., Quincy, will hold a dance Saturday, March 5 from 6:30 to 10 p.m.

The theme of the dance – "Remember When..... Rock-N-Roll Reunion" will feature music by DJ. Bill Hedvig and a cameo rock performance by Adam McGhee and Company.

Dine a-la-carte with chef Chris Mendez on burgers, fries, pizza and shakes. Dress the era in 50's and 60's garb.

Contact Joyce Romeri at 472-7446 or 617-773-6424 for tickets or information. Tickets are a $10 tax deductible donation to benefit the Access Fund.

Houghs Neck Congregational

Houghs Neck Congregational Church will mark Transfiguration Sunday during its regular weekly worship service Sunday at 9:30 a.m.

All are welcome to attend.

Pastor John Castricum will preach the sermon "Transformed Hearts." Nancy Jacobs, Ralph Jacobs, Waymon Giggey and June Paul will serve to the Diaconate.

A fellowship coffee hour will follow the service.

Pretzel Sunday At Quincy Community United Methodist

Quincy Community United Methodist Church will observe Sunday, March 6 as the last Sunday before Lent with Pretzel Sunday following the 10:30 a.m. worship service.

Sunday School students will bring baskets of pretzels into the Sanctuary and pass them out to everyone.

Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor said, "We've celebrated Pretzel Sunday for the past five years. I learned about it when a parishioner in one of my former churches found an article about Pretzel Sunday in a magazine and showed it to me.

"I had never heard of Pretzel Sunday before, but it sounded like fun. So, that year the Sunday School students passed out pretzels and everyone enjoyed it. I've been doing it ever since."

Pastor Jarek-Glidden explained that she really didn't know the origins of the custom, but guessed it may have its roots in legend.

"According to folklore, a German monk invented the pretzel as a reward for his students. When they knew their catechism, he gave them a pretzel. The shape is supposed to represent a person's hand crossed over her or his chest in prayer.

"A pretzel has three holes and yet it's still one pretzel – similiar to the shamrock's symbolism of the Trinity. However, as to how the pretzels became associated with the last Sunday before Lent, I have no idea," she added.

The church, located at 40 Beale St., is handicapped accessible.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3310.

Quincy Point Congregational

The sacrament of Holy Communion will take place at the 10 a.m. worship service Sunday at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St., Quincy

It is also Stewardship Sunday - return pledge cards by March 6.

Rev. Ann G. Suzedell will preach the sermon "God has Plans." Deanna Van Schagen will be the deacon of the day. Dick Raymond will be the lay reader.

Coffee and light refreshments will follow the service in the Social Hall.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

An English newspaper asked this question: "Who are the happiest people on earth? These were the four prize-winning answers:

A craftsman or artist whistling over a job well done.

A little child building sand castles.

A mother, after a busy day, bathing her baby.

A doctor who has finished a difficult and dangerous operation, and saved a human life.

No millionaires among these, one notices. No kings or emperors. Riches and rank, no matter how the world strives for them, do not make happy lives...

A wise man once said: "Happiness is impossible without some regard for the happiness of others and can so often be fostered by the smallest acts of kindness – acts that become instinctive and part of our nature if practiced from day to day ...

Another wise man stated that happiness doesn't depend on what we have, but it does depend on how we feel towards what we have. We can be happy with little and miserable with much....

I don't want any big fuss...

We fully understand! A big fuss usually refers to things presumed, but not quite right for the people involved.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might feel more encouraged about changes in your personal and/or professional life. However, it might be best not to rush things but rather work with them as they evolve.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The Bovine's business sense is especially keen this week. But remember that it's always best to investigate before investing. Make sure there are no hidden factors that can rise up later on.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Working on a family project could create tension between and among those concerned. Your good sense and your patience can help reduce bad attitudes and raise positive feelings.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You should be seeing more progress in the development of your plans and more supporters joining in. News from the past could help change someone's long-held position.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) With personal aspects strong this week, Leos and Leonas might want to spend more time with family and others who are especially close to them. Also expect news of a possible career change.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Taking a strong stand can be helpful this week. But be careful you don't cross the line into obstinacy. Best to take a position on facts as they are, not as you want them to be.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You have a strong sense of the needs of others. This week, turn some of that sensitivity into an honest self-appraisal, and let it find places where you can help yourself.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Creating an emotional comfort zone to handle a personal problem helps at first. But by midweek, you'll realize you need to deal with it directly or it could linger for too long.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Turning the page on a mistake to start fresh might not be the thing to do. Better to go over each step that led up to the decision you made and see which one misled you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Goats enjoy a varied diet, but eating crow isn't on the menu -- at least not this week. An embarrassing situation might have gone wrong before you got into it. Check it out.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your sense of honesty might impel you to speak up about a situation you disapprove of. That's fine. But do so without sounding accusatory. You might not know all the facts behind it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Being asked to create a reassuring attitude in the middle of chaos isn't easy, but you can do it. Support for your efforts comes slowly, but it does come. Enjoy an arts-filled weekend.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your honesty about people and issues is expressed in a positive, not painful, way.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Zoning Rules For Boats, Parking, Daycare Debated permitted as a right."

Keenan said daycares are for-profit ventures that may not belong in a residential district but can be vetted through an appeal, "I don't think it's cumbersome. Let's review it on a case by case basis."

The Committee approved the proposed wording with a 6-2 vote. Keenan and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee opposed the proposal.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin recused himself from the discussion as his wife operates a daycare facility.

After the meeting, Gutro noted that the zoning change actually regulates home day care which has not been regulated in the past.

The daycare issue is part of a larger zoning proposal entitled "Home Occupations" which outlines seven requirements for a home occupation to be allowed "as of right."

Those provisions require that such businesses not produce any offensive noises, smoke, odors, and other pollution and "does not produce any customer, pupil, or client trips to the (home) and has no non-resident employees."

Keenan said an accountant or a lawyer couldn't operate, under such limits as one or two clients may visit in a week. In contrast, Keenan said a daycare could have 12 trips for six children every day "as of right."

Laforest asked City Clerk John Shea if home businesses are taxed.

Shea said such business owners register with his office and that form is relayed to the Assessors. The certificate costs $40 and the Assessors charge such businesses an average of $75 for personal property.

"In the past five years, it's tripled," said Shea of the number of registrations. He attributed some of the increase to banking regulations, "You can not open a bank account (without an address)."

ZBA Limits

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi led an unsuccessful effort to strip the ZBA of the power to issue use variances after describing such ZBA's rulings as one allowing the Willard Street billboard and, another, the communications tower in West Quincy.

The city's statute states "You shall not have a billboard," noted Raymondi who said the ZBA ignored that statute and allowed the billboard.

"It puts the discussion back in the public place," said Councillor Joseph Finn.

Bobrowski said a majority of towns have limited the power of Appeals Boards to issue 'use' variances. However, the majority agreed with Ward 3 Kevin Coughlin who fears that such a move could inhibit the development of parcels joining residential and industrial zoning.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci voted with Raymondi and Finn.

Other Issues

Councillors briefly considered parking issues for residences and overnight parking bans on commercial vehicles.

Raymondi suggested that the number of bedrooms, rather than the current measurements in the proposal, determine parking requirements for new housing or converted housing.

However, Keenan noted that building plans could list bedrooms as libraries or media rooms and skirt the parking space requirement.

That issue and questions on the overnight parking of commercial vehicles will be revised after the public hearing set for next Wednesday, March 9 at 7 p.m.

Councillors also plan to discuss residential wind turbines at a future meeting Bobrowski offered councillors a copy of the Town of Douglas' regulations for residential wind turbines.

The Mayor's Zoning Task Force appointed in 2007 recommended the zoning proposals currently under consideration.

The committee has been meeting regularly since the appointments by Mayor Thomas Koch and filed their first proposals last spring.

1,303 Hopefuls Turn Out To Be Extras In Kevin James Movie To Be Filmed At Old QHS

Quincy Was 'Booming' At Hollywood Casting Call

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

The production team for the film "Here Comes the Boom," set to be partially filmed in Quincy, including at the old Quincy High School, is looking for as many as 8,000 movie extras. So the casting call held on Saturday at the Kennedy Center was alive with excitement and activity.

The line started forming two hours before the 10 a.m. call, and parking at The Kennedy Center on East Squantum Street was a commodity. Many of the 1,303 hopefuls – including 700 from Quincy – arrived by bus, some with photos and resumes in hand.

Wannabe Susan Willett of West Quincy said, "I'm here to be in the movie... I brought my son, Kevin, who was in the movie "Underdog." I'm really excited...we've been here since 8:00 this morning, we were among the first people here."

Quincy residents were provided special treatment at the call by being first into the building to be seen by the casting agents. While waiting in line Rhonda

12 Percent Interest Penalty If Action Fails

City To Appeal $3M Judgment In Adams Trust Case

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Solicitor James Timmins announced Tuesday that the city will file an appeal of the $3 million judgment against the city ordered by Judge Robert Langlois in the Adams Trust lawsuit.

"We're working on that," said Timmins, adding, "We do have some particular issues with the decision that we intend to review."

Timmins did not describe any specific issues that the city will challenge in the appeal which must be filed within 30 days of the final court judgment. He said he would release the information after the appeal is filed.

Judge Langlois issued his final judgment on Feb. 25 and the clock on the appeal deadline starts running on that date, as does a 12% interest penalty against the city if the appeal fails.

To date, the city has paid over $600,000 for a court-ordered audit of the trust and the cost of outside council contracted by the city, according to Timmins.

After the court's decision was issued, Assistant City Solicitor Paul Hines cited possible areas for appeal, such as the current incorporated status of the Woodward School and property,

8-1 Vote OK's Mayor's Grant Application

Councillors Seek Cost Of Restoring McIntyre Government Center

Restoring Old City Hall is a great idea and city councillors appear to be solidly behind it.

However, several councillors want to know the timeline and the price tag before committing the city to what could be a multi-million dollar project.

"Is this an $8 million or $10 million project?" Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi asked Monday. "We still don't know what this project is going to cost."

Raymondi spoke as councillors reviewed a request by Mayor Thomas Koch to apply for and disburse grant funds for rehabbing the historic building, officially the James R. McIntyre Government Center.

Councillors approved that authorization by an 8-1 vote.

Raymondi filed the lone vote opposing Koch's request to seek state funds, specifically a $30,000 grant from the Massachusetts His-

Keating: Federal Funds Available For Downtown Revitalization

By JOE REARDON

Congressman William Keating gazed out of the ninth-floor window of the Granite Trust building at the brilliant sunshine, taking in the picturesque scene of the city and several of its neighborhoods. Keating said he can only imagine the majestic view people will have to enjoy when two, 18-20 floor condominiums are built as part of the $1.3 billion Quincy Center revitalization project.

Keating believes the Quincy is the perfect location for such an ambitious project as revamping the city's busiest area. "It's smart development with the infrastructure already in place for that," he said. "It's the model for what you want. You want a vibrant, commercial area. It's what every city wants – attracting people from outside and surrounded by established neighborhoods that have their own identity. How many of these places are in such proximity to Boston? If you were going to design a location, this is what you design."

Keating is currently in the process of seeking as much federal funding as possible to be part of the $50 million state funding. The funds are available, Keating said, and the fact that the project "sells itself" too will help his cause.

"It's harder without earmarking now," Keating said. "However, there are funds available."

Mayor Thomas Koch and StreetWorks, the city's partner in the project, held nearly two-dozen public meetings with Quincy residents regarding the specifics of the project and the people of the city have been very receptive.

"I don't want to say it's (project) been beaten to death, but there's been a lot of public discussion," said Koch. "Folks are ready for it. They want to know when it's going to happen. The stars are aligned. All the ingredients are there. It'll calm everything down traffic-wise and make it more pedestrian-friendly. You'll have the opportunity to drive through, stop and run into a store. And that's going to be great for retailers."

The project as a whole is a massive undertaking, which will put 4,100 construction workers on the job and produce 5,700 permanent jobs when complete. Millions of dollars in tax growth will result in paying for teachers and police officers. $277 million in public infrastructure improvements include underground work, utilities, civic spaces, new sidewalks, parking garages and road construction.

"I think you have a diverse workforce in the surrounding communities that will and help the investment too," said Keating. "If you look through the South Shore you have a lot of people who would love to be working in this area."

Two condominium buildings will be part of the project, each 18-20 stories high. They will be geared to young professionals looking to live in an urban setting and the over 55 demographic that's tired of cutting their grass and shoveling snow. "This will be a good fit for them," Koch said. "I'm very pleased. I'm antsy. I want things to happen right away. I'd love to see a shovel in the ground tomorrow. With a project of this magnitude, the progress we've made is amazing. We're in the process now of the permitting stages."

Re-routing the town brook is one of the first matters on the to-do list because of its proximity to so much of the construction that will be taking place. The move, Koch said, is not a problem or unprecedented. "The reality is it's a culvert now," he said. "It's covered and it's been moved twice before. It's not as though we're moving a virgin brook. That's the big elephant in the room."

StreetWorks has been seeking business tenants active and aggressively for the area. They've gotten the word out that they are looking for new businesses to breath life back into Quincy Center."

Koch is happy with the progress so far, which includes work on the concourse that when done will connect Burgin Parkway with Route. 3A. "I'm pleased with the progress," he said. "This will be a very important year on the permitting side of things."

Beloved Educator 'Very Humbled' By Tribute

NQHS Auditorium Dedicated To Retired Principal Peter Chrisom

By JOE REARDON

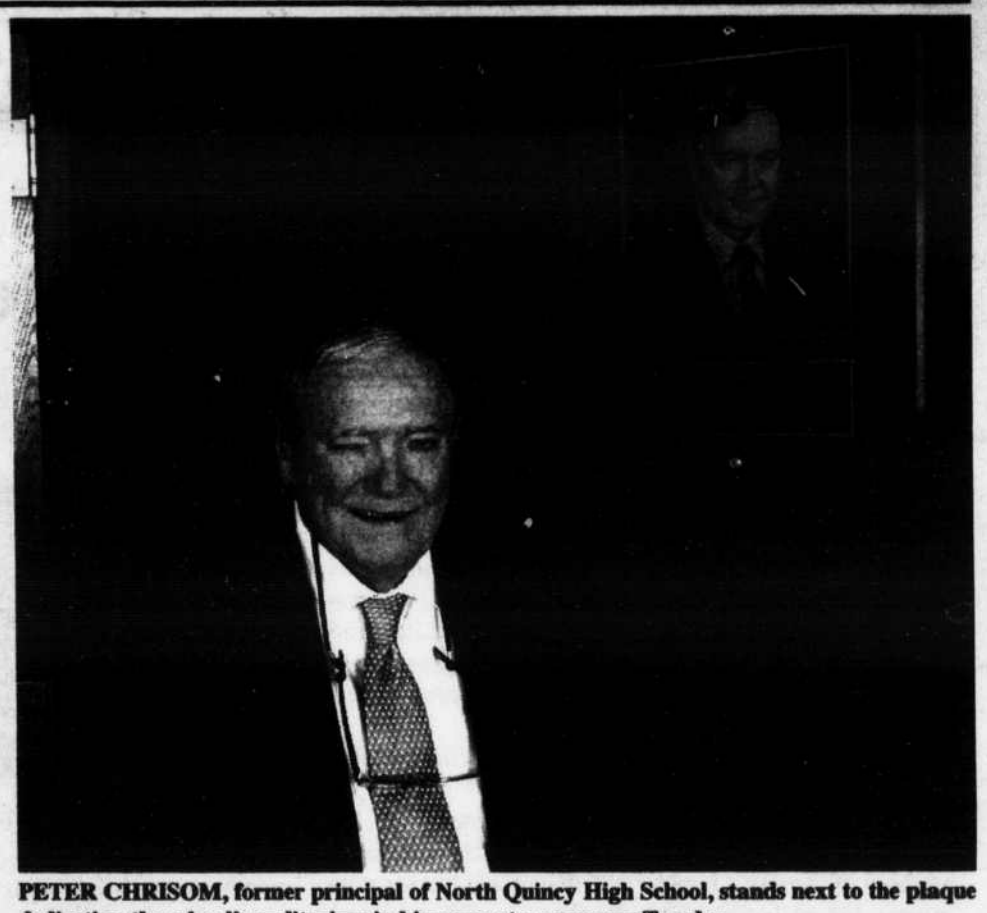
Peter J. Chrisom Sr. couldn't help but be overwhelmed Tuesday afternoon when the North Quincy High auditorium was named in dedication of the beloved principal that served for 26 years.

The auditorium was packed with city officials, family, friends and colleagues of Chrisom Sr., the principal from 1972-1998. A handsome plaque was hung on the wall just outside the entrance to the auditorium.

After the National Anthem was sung by Kaleigh McKeon, dignitaries praised Chrisom Sr., for the mark he has left at North and the thousands of lives he has touched as a history teacher and principal. The Yakatootones, a singing group at the school, belted out one of Chrisom's favorite songs, "September Song" in acapella.

"This is a very difficult time for me with all these awards," said Chrisom Sr. "It's just unbelievable. It's a classy school with classy people in it and I thank you for that. It's a real tribute. I have a million feelings inside me, but the most important is humility. I'm very, very humbled.

"The 28 years here were spectacular."



Principal Earl Metzler said the legacy Chrisom Sr., has left at North cannot be measured. "There were many great things said about Peter Senior over the years," said Metzler. "I found the most powerful statement came from former principal John Walsh. His recommendation letter was one sentence, 'Peter J. Chrisom is the greatest assistant anyone could wish to have.'"

Metzler said it was only fitting that the auditorium be named after Chrisom, who strongly encouraged the arts. "The performing arts at North have always been an important part of the climate and culture of this great school," he said. "Peter Crisom Sr. fed the spirit of an already powerful program and made it the envy of all high schools on the South Shore.

"The dedication of North's auditorium will serve as a constant reminder of what Peter Sr., means to North Quincy High School. I am sure we can recall all the gifts that Peter Sr., has given us. He left a legacy at North."

School Superintendent Richard DeCristorfaro said it was an "honor and privilege" to be a part of the dedication and celebration of the Peter J. Chrisom Sr.,

Milton Officials To Discuss Wind Turbine March 23 At City Hall Public Meeting

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci announced Monday that Milton officials will meet with residents and city officials at City Hall at 7p.m., Wednesday, March 23 to discuss that town's plans for a 450–foot wind turbine project near the Quincy border.

At Monday's council meeting, Palmucci thanked councillors for supporting a resolution asking Milton officials to reconsider the placement of the wind turbine as it will adversely affect Quarry Hills Golf Course.

Palmucci said that Milton Town Administrator Kevin Mearn will meet with Quincy residents and present detailed plans of the project.

Colonial Federal has mortgage money to lend...

In today's market, we are able to especially help...

Restore The James R. McIntyre Government Center

Old City Hall appears on track for a full restoration and rehabilitation.

And that's a good thing.

A request for $450,000 in Community Preservation funding has the support of Mayor Thomas Koch and other city leaders who stress the building is in dire need of work – both inside and out. The historic preservation money – which could be voted on by the Community Preservation Committee as early as next month – would fund further studies and field work required for the preparation of plans, drawings, specifications and bid documents necessary to implement the work.

Let's hope when the project is completed, the building can be referred to as its appropriate name:

The James R. McIntyre Government Center.

In 1985, "Old City Hall" was renamed and dedicated in memory of the city's popular 26th mayor and former state senator. Mr. McIntyre – considered by many the architect of modern-day Quincy – died in 1984 at the age of 53.

McINTYRE

But the name James R. McIntyre Government Center – for one reason or another – never really caught on.

Most still call it "Old City Hall." The adjacent glass annex built during the 1970s is known as "New City Hall."

Let's avoid the name "New Old City Hall" when the project is complete.

And when it's finished, you may not recognize the place – from the inside – anyway.

We're not talking about the much-needed repairs, either.

We're referring to plans to completely revamp and restore the first and second floors of the 167-year-old Quincy-granite structure.

Gone would be the offices located on the first floor which house the city clerk and assistant city clerk as well as the election, vital statistics and license board departments. Those dozen or so city employees would be relocated to "new city hall" or other municipal space. There would likely be some "reshuffling" of offices and meeting rooms in the annex building, too.

On the second floor, the City Council Chamber would be restored to its "Great Hall" status, its original configuration when the building opened as a Town Hall in 1844.

The reconfigured building would also fit in with the long-term scope of revitalizing Quincy Center. That's because the Hancock Common landscape and open space project would eliminate front egress to the building anyway.

So, what would a refurbished James R. McIntyre Government Center look like?

First-floor office space would be converted to municipal meeting rooms where the Zoning Board, Planning Board, Conservation Commission, Park and Recreation Board and School Committee and other city groups would meet. The city council would still conduct their business in the new "Great Hall" upstairs.

Ground floor space would also be used to display important city documents and historical artifacts.

JAMES R. McINTYRE Government Center.

City Clerk Joseph Shea estimates the building currently contains tens of thousands of important – some priceless – documents including the death certificate of President John Adams. They include City Council records dating from 1888 to the present; all License Board records since 1919 and affidavits of registered voters.

SHEA

Shea, the custodian of the city's records and archives, doesn't mince words when he ponders the unthinkable.

"It would be a colossal catastrophe if we had a fire in here," he says sternly and matter-of-factly.

"All of the city's historical records and artifacts and vital statistics need an updated, permanent home without changing the exterior of the building," Shea continues, pointing out the building is listed on the National Register of Historical Places.

"It's costly but the time to do it is long overdue based on the data that we've received from other city leaders."

You don't need a complete walk-through to understand the magnitude of the issue at hand.

Just start in the basement. It looks more like the fraternity house in the film "Animal House" than municipal office space. Wooden floors are rotting out. Vines grow through windows from outside. Floor tiles that saw better days years ago.

All's that missing are Brother Bluto's empty beer cans.

It's a far cry from what it used to be.

At one time, the basement was considered prime office space. It housed the assessors department and the city's police station. There's still a brick-lined jail cell there, too.

Today, part of the basement is the site of the city's mailroom. Two employees work under difficult conditions at best. The area is flood prone; the steam boiler is rusting out and mold spores have been discovered there.

In an inverted way, the basement is just the tip of the proverbial iceberg.

Local consultants including architects, engineers and historians have gone over the building with a fine-tooth comb. And the result isn't pretty.

Outside, the slate roof, copper gutters and downspouts and windows are failing – the building is no longer watertight. Inside, there's outdated electrical, plumbing and heating systems. The building is not handicapped accessible (hence the need for an elevator). You won't find a fire sprinkler anywhere, either.

Proponents of the project visualize a restored government center that "ties in" with the glass city hall annex while serving as a tribute to the city's granite industry.

In fact, the building is irreplaceable since Quincy granite is now longer quarried. It was designed by the renown architect Solomon Willard who also designed the Bunker Hill Monument. Records indicate the building cost $19,115.93 to construct – over a six-month period. Willard, as architect and chief building superintendent, was paid $280.

The building opened Nov. 1, 1844. And it's been the seat of town and city government ever since.

Perhaps the most interesting aspect of the proposed project is the "Great Hall" concept.

When the building opened in 1844, Great Hall was located where the Chamber is now on the second floor – from corner to corner. It included the space where there are currently offices as well as a balcony above the staircase leading into the chamber. In 1921, the Great Hall was reconfigured and office space was added to one side. Those offices – which at one time included the mayor's office – now house the City Council president and clerk of committees.

Restoring the Chamber to its Great Hall status would include a new handicap accessible balcony, extra seating and a stairway to the middle of the hall. There would also be new carpeting, new lighting, new ceiling and new moldings. Seating capacity would expand from 75 to 180. The balcony would add another 50 seats.

The costs associated with the restoration work are pending. Proponents say figures will be determined after the work is put out to bid.

Whatever the price tag – and it could be at least several million dollars – city leaders will seek state and federal grants to help fund the restoration which would be the building's first significant makeover in some 90 years.

But the present building would have looked a lot different had city leaders acted on a report submitted nearly 75 years ago.

That report, issued by the Quincy New City Hall Commission in 1937 to then Mayor Thomas Burgin, lobbied for expanding the building from 15,000 square feet to 25,000 square feet. The report, submitted by Commission Chairman and former mayor William Bradford, included a rendering showing a third floor and granite addition in the rear.

Commissioners – who included businessman Frank Remick, City Councillor Aldo Della Chiesa and Quincy Savings Bank President Clarence Burgin – concluded a new or enlarged city hall would cost $500,000.

But for one reason or another, the project was shelved. Perhaps the timing wasn't right. The nation was in the throes of the Great Depression. The devastating Hurricane of 1938 slammed the city the following year. Then came World War II a few years later.

Of course, the city eventually got a much-needed "new city hall." Former Mayor Joseph LaRaia earmarked a $2.4 million federal grant for the project during his two years as mayor in the mid 1970s. The project was completed during the administration of his successor, former Mayor Arthur Tobin.

Final thought:

The government center sits on land that was deeded to the city by Daniel and Hannah French for $1,000. There was this stipulation: the site "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said Inhabitants."

The city should do whatever it takes to ensure that the present granite building stands on that site for future generations. It will take some money no doubt about it to restore the present building. But that's a better option than having to erect a brand new structure due to some catastrophic incident.

With some much-needed and well-deserved TLC, this city treasure can once again be a shining source of community pride.

And, when the building is restored to its full potential, let's remember to call it the James R. McIntyre Government Center.

Once again – and for all.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1907 postcard showing the old water standpipe on the top of Penn's Hill in South Quincy. The Abigail Adams Cairn is hidden out of view just behind the standpipe. The privately owned Quincy Water Company, founded in 1883, built the tank. It was filled with 400,000-gallons of water from Braintree Dam in Five Corners through their pumping station on Penn Street. Braintree Dam was the primary source of Quincy's water for about 20 years until the Metropolitan water system was built early in the 1900s. Before that people had wells. At 60 feet high for those who climbed its stairs the tower provided a fantastic panoramic view. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Green Light For More Urban Renewal Funds

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor James R. McIntyre enthusiastically received federal approval of recertification of the Quincy Workable Program For Community Improvement.

"This means a great deal to the city as far as continued approval of federal funds is concerned," Mayor McIntyre said; "specifically in the area of housing, FHA housing loans and grants for elderly housing projects. These programs are all contingent upon this approval of a workable program," the Mayor noted.

SHAWMUT TRAIL DEAD BUT SUPER HIGHWAYS IN THE FUTURE

The proposed controversial Shawmut Trail, which would have sliced through Quincy uprooting scores of families, is dead for the next few years.

A similar one or even bigger super-highways, however, still looms as a strong possibility as a long-range solution to traffic congestion.

Mayor-Senator James R. McIntyre disclosed today that he has been assured by State Public Works Commissioner Edward J. Ribbs that, "We are not developing location or design plans for the Shawmut Trail Facility proposal nor is the project programmed for construction."

Mayor McIntyre had vigorously opposed the Shawmut Trail as a "multi-million dollar waste that, would serve no real useful purpose."

Think Of The Taxypayer

Quincy is not in deep enough over their heads with bills, but they want to add to the problem.

Now the council approves more spending for the tearing down and building of a new middle school. They also voted for the taking of three more buildings, off the tax roles, for what?

The school at St. Ann's is in very good shape, but our mayor wants it torn down, so he can build a school to his liking. More waste of taxpayer money.

With the taking of another three buildings, we know our taxes will go through the roof. If the council keeps spending the funds we don't have, the taxpayers will move out and then we have nothing.

The council said that Milton has built three schools, in the time it took the city to agree on one. There is a big difference between Milton and Quincy.

Milton has some money to do what they need or want. Quincy on the other hand has 'NO' money to do what they want.

Quincy has to provide for the homeless, Milton doesn't.

The city has to stop thinking like Milton, and renovate what we already have, not tear down structures just to appease the mayor.

Think of the taxpayer for once.

Quincy's 'Renaissance' On The Backs Of Fixed Incomes

Quincy's renaissance is building on the backs of the taxpayers and seniors who have to survived on a fixed income. We have to depend on our city council to look after us.

I am beginning to lose faith in their ability to stand up to the machine that is in control of Quincy. They are on a fast track to totally destroy one of the greatest cities in America.

Show me a law that all cities need a big downtown? The malls put a stop to that 60 years ago.

What is the sense of having some place you can't get in and out of? Does anyone in their right mind think the new road is going to draw people to Quincy Center? Think again. Five traffic lights and 20 cross-walks will keep traffic at a crawl.

We will be paying almost a half billion dollars in bonds. Before the first shovel of dirt is turned on the new downtown.

Put the Central students in the old high school. Rip down the old Central and build the new school on the old site. Save over $12 million and keep tax paying property on the books. God knows we need that money.

It won't cost $12 million to tear down the old school. And ask the mayor where he got the figure of $50 million to remodel the old high school?

The city should do whatever it takes to ensure that the present granite building stands on that site for future generations. It will take some money no doubt about it to restore the present building. But that's a better option than having to erect a brand new structure due to some catastrophic incident.

With some much-needed and well-deserved TLC, this city treasure can once again be a shining source of community pride.

And, when the building is restored to its full potential, let's remember to call it the James R. McIntyre Government Center.

Once again – and for all.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1907 postcard showing the old water standpipe on the top of Penn's Hill in South Quincy. The Abigail Adams Cairn is hidden out of view just behind the standpipe. The privately owned Quincy Water Company, founded in 1883, built the tank. It was filled with 400,000-gallons of water from Braintree Dam in Five Corners through their pumping station on Penn Street. Braintree Dam was the primary source of Quincy's water for about 20 years until the Metropolitan water system was built early in the 1900s. Before that people had wells. At 60 feet high for those who climbed its stairs the tower provided a fantastic panoramic view. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Green Light For More Urban Renewal Funds

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor James R. McIntyre enthusiastically received federal approval of recertification of the Quincy Workable Program For Community Improvement.

"This means a great deal to the city as far as continued approval of federal funds is concerned," Mayor McIntyre said; "specifically in the area of housing, FHA housing loans and grants for elderly housing projects. These programs are all contingent upon this approval of a workable program," the Mayor noted.

SHAWMUT TRAIL DEAD BUT SUPER HIGHWAYS IN THE FUTURE

The proposed controversial Shawmut Trail, which would have sliced through Quincy uprooting scores of families, is dead for the next few years.

A similar one or even bigger super-highways, however, still looms as a strong possibility as a long-range solution to traffic congestion.

Mayor-Senator James R. McIntyre disclosed today that he has been assured by State Public Works Commissioner Edward J. Ribbs that, "We are not developing location or design plans for the Shawmut Trail Facility proposal nor is the project programmed for construction."

Mayor McIntyre had vigorously opposed the Shawmut Trail as a "multi-million dollar waste that, would serve no real useful purpose."

Think Of The Taxypayer

Quincy is not in deep enough over their heads with bills, but they want to add to the problem.

Now the council approves more spending for the tearing down and building of a new middle school. They also voted for the taking of three more buildings, off the tax roles, for what?

The school at St. Ann's is in very good shape, but our mayor wants it torn down, so he can build a school to his liking. More waste of taxpayer money.

With the taking of another three buildings, we know our taxes will go through the roof. If the council keeps spending the funds we don't have, the taxpayers will move out and then we have nothing.

The council said that Milton has built three schools, in the time it took the city to agree on one. There is a big difference between Milton and Quincy.

Milton has some money to do what they need or want. Quincy on the other hand has 'NO' money to do what they want.

Quincy has to provide for the homeless, Milton doesn't.

The city has to stop thinking like Milton, and renovate what we already have, not tear down structures just to appease the mayor.

Think of the taxpayer for once.

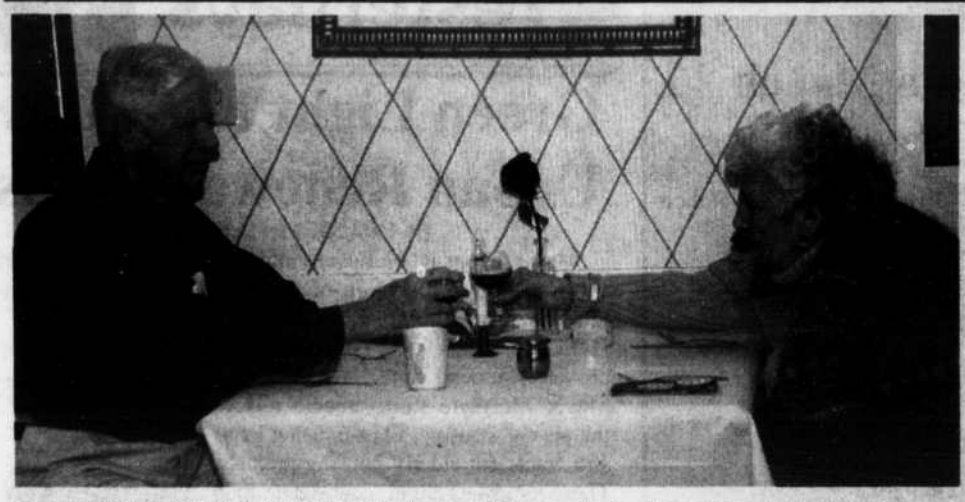
Quincy's 'Renaissance' On The Backs Of Fixed Incomes

Quincy's renaissance is building on the backs of the taxpayers and seniors who have to survived on a fixed income. We have to depend on our city council to look after us.

I am beginning to lose faith in their ability to stand up to the machine that is in control of Quincy. They are on a fast track to totally destroy one of the greatest cities in America.

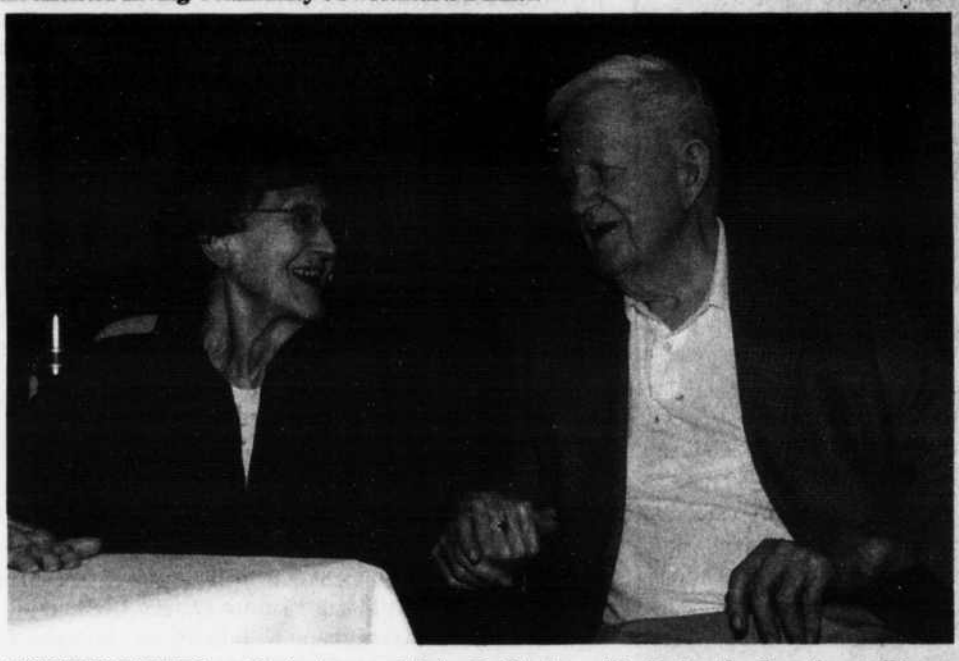
Show me a law that all cities need a big downtown? The malls put a stop to that 60 years ago.

What is the sense of having some place you can't get in and out of? Does anyone in their right mind think the new road is going to draw people to Quincy Center? Think again. Five traffic lights and 20 cross-walks will keep traffic at a crawl.



We will be paying almost a half billion dollars in bonds. Before the first shovel of dirt is turned on the new downtown.

Put the Central students in the old high school. Rip down the old Central and build the new school on the old site. Save over $12 million and keep tax paying property on the books. God knows we need that money.



It won't cost $12 million to tear down the old school. And ask the mayor where he got the figure of $50 million to remodel the old high school?

CONTEMPORARY CHRISTIAN musical group Jars Of Clay will perform in concert Sunday, April 3 at Eastern Nazarene College.

Grammy Award-Winning Group In Concert April 3

Jars Of Clay To Perform At Eastern Nazarene College

One of contemporary Christian music's most widely acclaimed bands will perform in Quincy this spring, as the Grammy Award-winning group Jars of Clay performs a concert at Eastern Nazarene College.

The concert, set for Sunday, April 3 at 7 p.m., will be held in ENC's Lahue Physical Education Center. It will feature songs from Jars of Clay's newest album, "The Shelter," which was released last fall.

Also performing will be artists Matt Maher, Audrey Assad and Derek Webb.

"It's rare for a small school like Eastern Nazarene College to get a tier 1 band like Jars of Clay to perform on campus," said Vice President for Spiritual Development Corey MacPherson, who credited the efforts of ENC student Grace Kabemba and the college's Student Government Association for convincing the band to add an ENC concert to its current tour. "We're pleased to be able to present a quality concert for our students and the community."

Founded in 1993 by four friends at Greenville College in Greenville, Illinois, Jars of Clay has amassed an array of music honors, including three Grammy Awards, numerous GMA Dove Awards and 17 number one radio hits for Christian/Gospel music.

The group takes its name from 2 Corinthians 4:7: "But we have this treasure in jars of clay to show that this all-surpassing power is from God and not from us."

Tickets for the concert are $15 for the public and $10 for ENC students, faculty and staff.

Tickets may be purchased online at www.enc.edu/jars-of-clay.

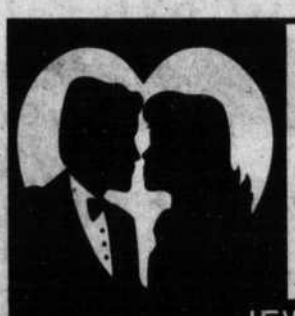
Squantum Elementary Students Raise $1,600 For Charity

Squantum Elementary School students have been collecting pennies and space change recently to benefit and Leukemia & Lymphoma Society.

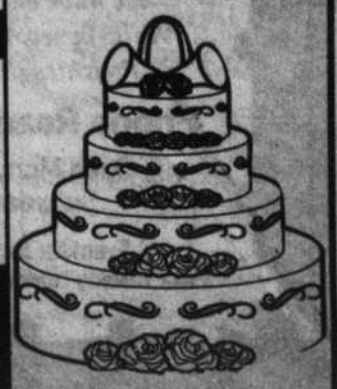
This annual event at the school was kicked off by a Penny Bingo Night followed by a drive running for the month collecting over $1,600 for this cause.

The event was coordinated by Squantum's PTO, parent Debbie Dyer and supporter by the entire school community.

Congratuations to Rebecca Cordero's first grade class for raising the most money and for winning a pizza party sponsored by the Society.



"I am so proud of all our students and and participants in this effort," said Principal Stephen Sylvia. "This is a great community service lesson for our students and the monies raised truly support the missionof the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society."



The mission of the Society is to cure leukemia, lymphoma, Hodgkin's disease and myeloma, and to improve the quality of life of patients and their families.

"These students serve as an example to all of us through their commitment to helping others," said Sharon Kleine, executive director for the Massachusetts Chapter. "Their efforts will help local patients and their families along with funding blood cancer research."

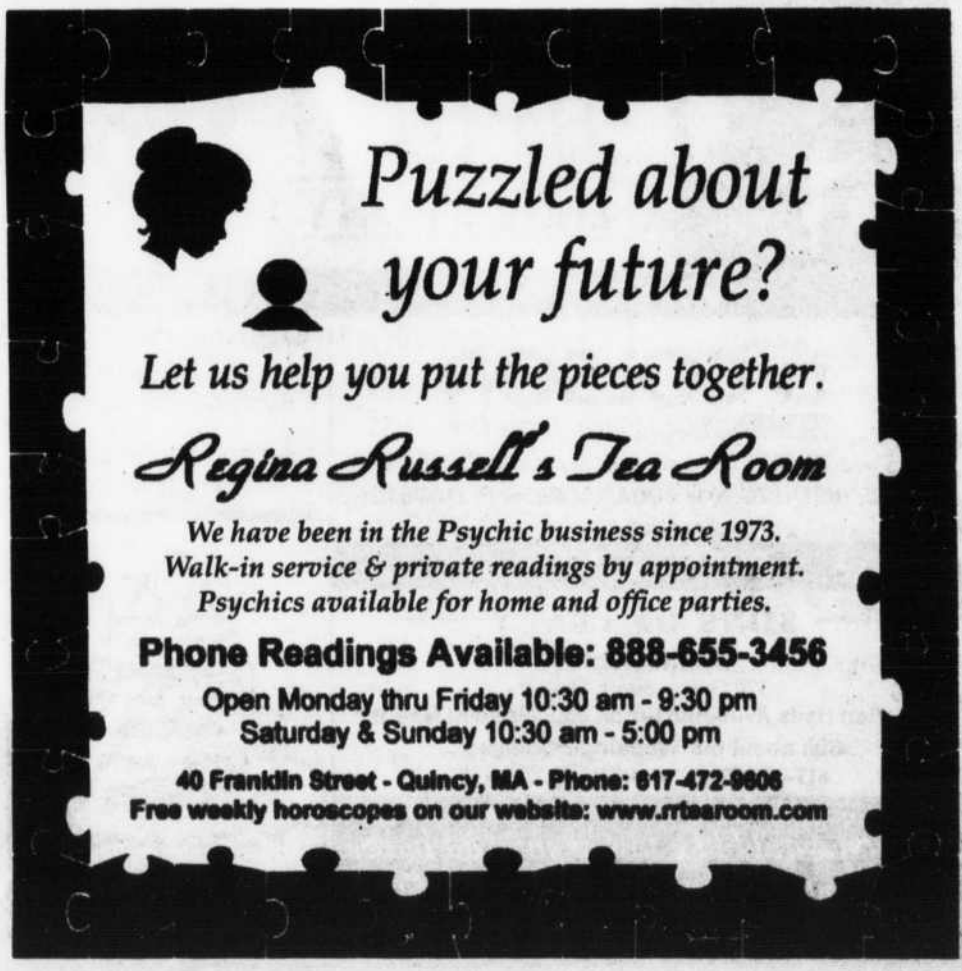
Eastern Nazarene College To Host Book Launch

Eastern Nazarene College will host the Boston area book launch of The Language Of Science and Faith by ENC professor Dr. Karl Giberson and Dr. Francis Collins Friday, March 18 at 7 p.m.

Giberson will present an excerpt from the book and take questions for the audience. A book signing will follow and all profit from book purchases will go to the ENC Honors Program.

The event is free and open to all.



Registration is not required, by seating is limited. To reserve a spot, email carissa.schutz@enc.edu.

In The Language Of Science and Faith: Straight Answers to Genuine Questions, world-renowned scientist Francis Collins, author of The Language of God, and fellow scientist Karl Giberson explain that faith does not mean rejecting science. Together, they break down the misunderstanding by answering dozens of common questions people ask about evolution, Darwin, the age of the earth, the existence of God and more.

Flourless Peanut Butter Cookies

Most dessert recipes contain flour, but I found the easiest peanut butter cookie recipe, and they are made without flour. And so flavorful especially for those who cannot have flour in their diets. With only four ingredients, how easy is that?

I added raisins to it for an additional taste. When I told my co-worker Sean about the recipe, he suggested chocolate chips.

So with this basic cookie recipe you can be as creative as you want.

PEANUT BUTTER COOKIES

1-cup crunchy peanut butter
1-cup sugar
1 egg
1-teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons raisins
Preheat oven to 350 degrees

In a bowl add the peanut butter, the beaten egg and the sugar. Beat until smooth (mixture will be moist). Add the vanilla and the raisins if you prefer. If I were using chocolate chips, I would add about the same amount as the raisins.

I like a thicker cookie, so I use a tablespoon for each. You can make any size you wish, but the cooking time will depend on the size. Check them after ten or 12 minutes, and bake accordingly.

When done, place on a rack to cool.

Hearty Chicken & Sausage Soup

Even though spring is around the corner, the cold weather is still with us. And that is what prompted me to make a soup combining chicken with sausage, a welcome entrée to warm us up.

You can either use a pork sausage or those made with turkey or chicken. I used turkey sausages for this soup, but any preferred kind will do, as it is the combination of the two that is hearty and satisfying.

CHICKEN & SAUSAGE SOUP

2 chicken thighs and legs
4 Italian sausages
1 large celery stalk (cut up)
1 medium onion (cut up)
2 carrots (cut up)
½ pound tortellini (either cheese or meat)
1 bag fresh spinach
Grated Romano or Parmesan cheese
Salt and pepper to taste

Begin by boiling the chicken and sausages tougher, and add the celery, onion and carrots, salt and pepper. Cover and cook for about an hour. Set aside. Wash and cut up the fresh spinach. Cook the tortellini until half done.

Take the meats out of the soup. Now add the spinach, and tortellini. Cut the sausages up in slices and some of the chicken, and return to the soup. Keep some of the chicken for those who like it plain or for chicken salad. Add grated cheese to the soup if preferred.

P.S. Sometimes the tortellini can get overcooked while in the soup, so another way is to prepare the tortellini and set it aside for those who want to add it to their soup.

Free Sceening Of 'Adams Rib' Tonight

A free screening of the 1949 classic film "Adams Rib" will be held tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy, as pat of a month-long celebration of Quincy native Ruth Gordon.

Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn were never more evenly matched than when they brought their sharpened wit and prickly affection to this George Cukor-directed comedy written by Gordon and her husband Garson Kanin.

Gordon and Kanin were nominated for an Academy Award for Writing Original Screenplay and a Writers Guild of America Award for Best Written American Comedy.

The screening is sponsored by The Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

Rum-Soaked Crooks Concert Saturday

The Rum-Soaked Crooks will perform a pungent mix of sailors' chanteys, ballads and ditties spanning four centuries of seafaring songs and poetry, including Cape and Island songs and poetry, Saturday, March 12 at 3 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The three Crooks have shared their songs and stories, both historical and contemporary, at festivals and maritime events across the country and in Europe for the last three decades, and have recorded on the Smithsonian-Folkways and Whaling City Sound labels.

Tom Goux has performed for concert, festival, seminar and workshop audiences throughout the region and across the country for more than 30 years. Chantey singer, tunesmith, and multi-instrumentallist, the short but charming Dan Lanier has worked with The Rum-Soaked Crooks for nearly 20 years. A charter member of the Crooks, Jacek Sulanowski has sung for his supper in many a port and concert venue over the last three and decades.

The concert is sponsored by The Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Co-Conspirator In Quincy Armored Car Robbery Admits On All Counts

A Dorchester man last week admitted to helping two associates stage the brazen daylight armored car robbery on Hancock Street in Quincy that left a guard shot and clinging to life in 2004, according to Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey.

On Oct. 21, 2004, Dennis J. Quirk, 42, of Roslindale and Martin O'Brien, 41, of Malden met at the Dorchester apartment of Brian Smith, 43, to put on fake beards, prep their AK-47 assault rifle and gear up for the armored car robbery they were planning for 10 a.m. at the Citizens Bank at 371 Hancock St. in Quincy.

Based on the joint venture theory, Smith was convicted of two counts of masked armed robbery, armed assault with intent to murder, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon causing serious bodily injury, use of a firearm in a felony, receiving a stolen motor vehicle, larceny of a firearm and unlawful possession of a firearm. Judge Janet Sanders sentenced him to 7 years to 7 years and 1 day concurrent with the 30 to 35 years sentence he is currently serving out of Suffolk Superior Court, District Attorney Morrissey said.

"This was a meticulous, professional investigation by the Quincy Police Department and the State Police detective unit attached to the Norfolk District Attorney's office," District Attorney Morrissey said. "It was also a difficult and complex grand jury investigation handled by Assistant District Attorney Brian Wilson bringing all three of these men to account."

"This was a pre-meditated, brazen crime – just feet from an elementary school – which nearly cost one man his life," District Attorney Morrissey said. "The three players are all serving decades in prison, as it should be."

Quirk and O'Brien ambushed the driver of a Loomis, Fargo & Co. armored car as the driver began to unload a delivery of cash for the bank just moments after 10 a.m., O'Brien, wearing a fake beard and carrying a gun, came running toward him and ordered him to the ground. Seeing Quirk following behind carrying a rifle, the driver drew his handgun but was quickly set upon by O'Brien, and the two wrestled for the driver's gun, Morrissey said.

Quirk, also in a fake beard, approached with the AK-47; O'Brien, on the ground struggling with the guard, shouted "Shoot him! Shoot him!" Quirk stood over the driver and fired multiple shots, one point blank into his leg severing his femoral artery. One of the bullets discharged during the struggle landed in the schoolyard of the Sacred Heart Elementary School across Hancock Street from the bank.

A nurse from the elementary school rushed across the street and managed to slow the bleeding from the driver's leg and an additional wound in his arm, almost certainly saving his life, Morrissey said.

The pair fled the scene with two bags containing a total of $200,000 cash, Morrissey said. Police found the first getaway car, a stolen gold Oldsmobile Alero, behind an apartment complex in Quincy. They swapped getaway cars two more times.

Earlier that morning, a witness driving down Adams Street in Dorchester had noticed two men wearing fake beards and clothing like that of the perpetrators walking from an apartment. That residence was placed under surveillance until the police attempted to execute a default warrant for its tenant, Brian Smith, the next day. Though they did not locate Smith or anyone else inside, strewn around the apartment they found numerous disguises, including fake beards, moustaches, fake noses, and stage make up. They also found ammunition, binoculars and plastic "flexi-cuff" handcuffs. They also noticed Dunkin Donuts coffee cups, including coffee with milk or cream that was not old enough to have curdled and a breakfast sandwich that looked relatively fresh.

The Massachusetts State Police Crime lab tested DNA from one cup and found that it matched O'Brien, and DNA from another cup was found to match Quirk.

The disguises found in the apartment were traced to a costume shop in New York that Quirk had visited and bought items from two and a half weeks prior to the robbery in North Quincy. Cellular telephone records showed numerous calls between phones registered to or used by Quirk, O'Brien and Smith in the days leading up to the robbery, the early morning prior to the robbery, and the days that followed, according to District Attorney Morrissey.

Quirk pled guilty in July of 2008 and was sentenced to 25 to 30 years in state prison, 25 of which was concurrent with a federal sentence on an attempted armored car robbery from the same time period.

O'Brien pled guilty on Oct. 28, 2007 and was setenced to 18 years and one day in state prison, 15 of which was concurrent to a federal sentence on the same armored car robbery for which Quirk was serving 25 years.

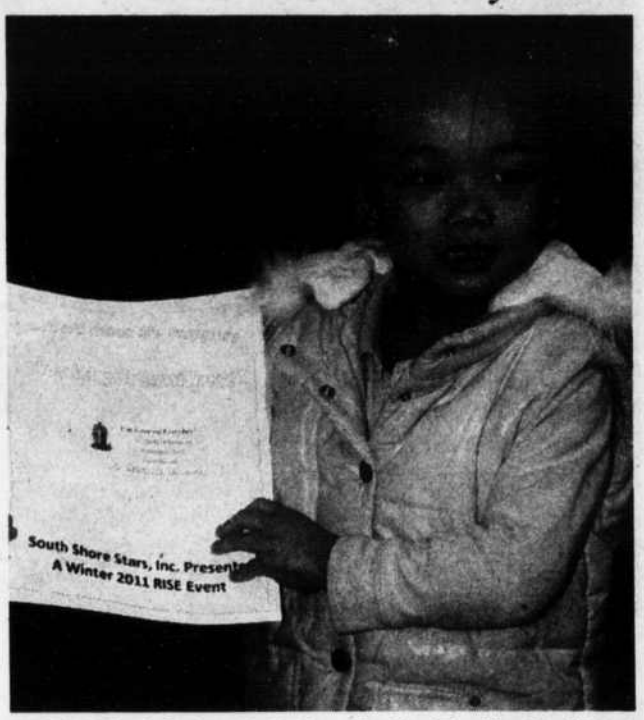
Local Families Get A 'RISE' Out Reading Event

South Shore Stars Literacy Event

More than 50 local families got a 'RISE' out of reading recently, when South Shore Stars hosted a literacy event for members of its Quincy preschool program.



Held recently at the Parker Elementary School, the RISE (Reading Is So Exciting) program gave parents, children and caregivers an opportunity to celebrate reading together in a fun and informal setting outside of traditional school hours.

"We like to involve parents and remind them that they are their child's first teacher," said Stars Early Education Coordinator Debby Rawson, who joined with early childhood consultant Diana Kane to offer parents suggestions for playing an active role in their child's learning. "There are a variety of fun, interactive things parents can do to promote reading readiness and help prepare their child for success in elementary school."

In addition to the reading activities, the RISE event featured a community dinner followed by nutrition and fitness activities designed to emphasize the importance of healthy eating and exercise. On hand to assist at the event were several community volunteers from South Coastal Bank.

"Our RISE program is a good example of how South Shore Stars strives to implement a family support approach to enhance the development of children," Stars Executive Director Sheri Adlin said. "And we were thrilled to have volunteers from South Coastal Bank to help us make the evening run smoothly."

Formerly known as South Shore Day Care Services, South Shore Stars provides comprehensive early education and youth programs that help children reach their full developmental potential. From Early Head Start and preschool to K-12 and summer camp programs, South Shore Stars works collaboratively with families to foster positive youth development.

ERIN LIN of Quincy holds her Healthy Families booklet at South Shore Stars' RISE event.

HELIDA WORNUM and her daughter Camille Monteiro of Quincy were among the 50 local families who participated in South Shore Stars' RISE (Reading Is So Exciting) event held at the Parker School in Quincy.

VOLUNTEERS FROM South Coastal Bank display the free book families received at the RISE event. From left: Stacey Cocco, Lucille Weare, Fran Wong and Tony Drew.

Children's Reading, Discussion Series At Library

Reading children's literature offers adults a chance to visit again the worlds they explored as children, rediscovering memories and uncovering new insights.

The Thomas Crane Public Library will host a free four-part scholar-led reading and discussion series to share adult perspective on childhood favorites old and new. In addition to rereading old favorites, this is a chance to read classics of children's literature as well as contemporary titles that reach today's youth.

The series will be held at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy on the fourth Tuesday evening of each month from March through June.

Discussions will be led by Dr. Susan J. Peterson, Associate Professor of English and Chair of the Humanities Department at Curry College in Milton.

The first session, on March 22, will explore Louisa May Alcott's classic novel, Little Women, which chronicles the joys and sorrows of the four March sisters as they grow into young women in nineteenth-century New England. Copies of Little Women are now available for pickup at the Main Library checkout desk.

Subsequent sessions will include The Secret Garden by Frances Hodgson Burnett on April 26; The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe by C.S. Lewis on May 24; and Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban by J.K. Rowling on June 28.

Registration is recommended, to assure a copy of each book with discussion questions in advance. Call 617-376-1316 to register or for more information. Once you register, you will be registered for the entire series.

Participants may also register for individual sessions after the series has begun.

The series is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

C.A. Bernazzani School Book Awards

The Charles A. Bernazzani Elementary School is accepting applications for two $200 scholarships to be awarded to Bernazzani graduates planning to attend college.

Applications are available at Quincy High School and North Quincy High School, and in the Bernazzani office.

The deadline to submit the applications is April 6.

For more information, call 617-984-8713.

Breast Cancer Awareness Topic March 14

A breast cancer awareness program will be held Monday, March 14 at 10 a.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Dr. Jancice Rothschild of Quincy Medical Center will discuss recommended screening methods and treatment options and answer questions. The program will be presented in English with Chinese interpretation.

All are welcome to attend.

Quincy Medical Center will offer free mammography screenings March 30. For more information, call 617-376-5492.

Breast cancer is the second-leading cause of cancer death in women. Those attending Monday's program will learn about the risk for breast cancer and how early detection can help fight the disease.

The program is sponsored by the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Medical Center, Quincy Asian Resources, South Shore Elder Services, and Greater Boston Chinese Golden Age Center.

Expresses Concerns About Budget Battle

Manet Community Health Center Welcomes Keating

Cong. William Keating was recently welcomed by officers and staff at Manet Community Health Center in Quincy.

Among those on hand for the congressman's visit were Joseph Reardon, president; Alicia A. Gardner, past president; and Manet's Chief Executive Officer Henry Tuttle.

Cong. Keating assumed his new post as U.S. representative of the 10th Congressional district which includes Quincy Jan. 5. This was the Congressman's first official visit to Manet in his newly elected capacity.

Keating attended Manet's "ground breaking" event for the renovation of its North Quincy facility as Norfolk County district attorney last August in recognition of National Community Health Center Week.

During a briefing and discussion, the Congressman relayed his concerns regarding the ongoing budget battle on Capitol Hill, along with his hopes for action by the Senate to redress the House vote of recent, his reassurance of his understanding of our patients' and clients' needs made more dire in this economy, and his pledge to support Manet in its mission.

After the briefing, the Congressman and staff were given a tour of the health center and administrative offices at North Quincy. Manet's North Quincy facility is amidst an alteration and renovation project that has created new job opportunities, and will expand access for 959 new patients over 3,822 unduplicated visits. In calendar year 2010, Manet cared for 13,712 patients, over 51,193 visits. The renovations will yield the addition of seven new patient exam rooms, and will call for the recruitment of two additional primary care providers to Manet. The Manet at North Quincy renovation project has a total cost of 1.7 million. The City of Quincy, Community Development Block Grant(CDBG) program, and the ARRA, HRSA, Capital Improvement Program (CIP) have significantly empowered this is project to move forward.

Driving Force For 28 Years, She Will Continue To Advocate For The Farmer And 'Visit My Friends'

Anneli Johnson Retiring As Director Of Farmers Market

By JOE REARDON

Anneli Johnson remembers well that late night when she was pulled over in central Massachusetts on the way home from a town meeting, where she was making her argument for a farmers market.

Johnson showed the state trooper her Massachusetts Department of Agriculture ID and he let her go with both a warning and a show of support for her passion.

"He said, 'Madam, I want you to slow down and keep on growing'," Johnson said with a laugh.

Johnson slowed down her driving but her passion for advocating farmers markets to towns throughout Massachusetts never waned.

As a little girl growing up in the small town of Turku, Finland, Johnson would go to the market almost daily with her mother to buy fresh fruits and vegetables. In Helsinki alone, there were five markets, including one in front of the president's palace. She also pointed out that a market did business in front of the king's palace in Norway.

"It was a daily event," said Johnson who recently stepped down as the director of the Quincy Farmers Market after 28 fulfilling years. "People go to the farmers market to buy their fruits and vegetables directly from the farmers. The farmers markets in Europe and other parts of the world featured are a very important component of people's daily lives."

Johnson is fiercely proud of her Finnish heritage and has never forgotten her roots. She was in attendance at the 2008 Finnfest in Duluth, Minnesota and had the opportunity to meet Tarja Halonen, the president of Finland. Halonen received an honorary doctorate of Humanities degree from the University of Minnesota.

"She's very nice and down to earth – a tremendously friendly person," said Johnson.

Johnson brought her love for the market to Quincy, where it became a reality in 1982. She believed there was a need for a market in Quincy and that residents would be more than receptive to the idea of buying fresh produce on cool, sunsplashed autumn days. The only hurdle was finding the best location. Johnson worked closely with then Quincy Planner Robert Luongo and the two came up with the Hancock lot.

"Bob and I put our heads together and went to look at the Hancock lot," said Johnson. "We thought it was really a good spot. We had to figure out what day the farmers could come. We sent out the survey to all the farmers and they seemed to have Friday free. Saturday was booked. There was no way we could have it on a Saturday. There were no farmers to be had.

"That's how we started. The city gave the farmers market its full blessing and it's given its full blessing ever since."

In a commendation presented to Johnson from Mayor Thomas Koch for her nearly three decades of service, he said that the Farmers Market was always a highlight of the summers. "Through Johnson's leadership, the opening of the Quincy Farmers Market has become one of the most eagerly anticipated summer events. It is truly an asset to the City," said Koch.

The market was busy in 2010 with 15 vendors on average every Friday, with the high swelling to 30. Along with farmers there were others who made cheese, granola and cookies. "It does have its ebbs and flows," Johnson said.

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH presents Anneli Johnson the City's and the Mayor's Commendation in recognition of her 28 years as the manager of the Quincy Farmers' Market.

Unique to New England, the farmers market is a resource, Johnson believes, should be taken advantage of, particularly when it's in Quincy residents' back yard. "The thing is, they will stay in Quincy if they sell," she said. "That's the whole idea and that was always my biggest concern, to get the word out. Come to Quincy Farmers Market and then go to Stop & Shop. Get your fruits and vegetables. My mantra was always buy local first. It's really nice to shop in the sunshine and meet the real player. I always say, which would you rather see, the movie with the stars on the screen or at the theater and meet the real player? At a farmers market you meet the person who grew it. You have the chance to ask questions, how some things grow. You don't ask a produce manager, 'how do you grow that?'

"It's now the thing to do, but it has taken a long time to educate everybody. It just didn't happen."

As the director, it was Johnson's job to secure vendors for the open-air market and to be sure there was plenty of produce variety. "I'm the go-to person from the city," she said. "I go to winter conferences where I meet the New England vegetable growers. I learn a lot about vegetable growing from the farmers there. I'll say, 'hey, we're missing a couple of farmers. Do you want to come to Quincy?' I'll have papers there ready for them to sign up."

Johnson has always had a good relationship with the farmers in Massachusetts, if not for her friendly demeanor but the deep respect she holds for the individuals who work the land. As a result, a day at the Quincy Farmers Market is a fun, friendly experience for vendors and customers alike.

"I'm going to miss the contact with the farmers and consumers," Johnson said. "I love my customers and farmers. Farmers are my heroes. Farmers are very independent people. They dance to their own fiddle and rightly so. They should be like that. They have the work ethic, the integrity, and the honesty. They portray all the good things of people – farmers. They understand what hard work is. No one's taking care of them except themselves. If they get some kind of government subsidy sometimes when they lose their crop, it's not a subsidy, it's a loan. They may get some low interest loans, but they have to pay them back. They know what it is to work hard and earn a living.

"They have four months to make their 12-month earnings. And no one pays for his or her pension except himself or herself. You can understand why I think farmers are the best people and they have all those qualities we value in an American way of life."

Johnson was also a driving force behind starting Agricultural Tourism in the state. It was the farmers, she said, who came up with the initial idea. "They would call me in Boston and say, 'Hey Anneli, all those tour buses stop just long enough to take pictures of our beautiful farms, pastures and apple trees. They never let the passengers out to shop at the farm stand'," she said.

Working with the Massachusetts travel and tourism office, Johnson began mapping out a strategy for the tourists to take in the farms across the state. Farmers, she believed, had to make the area more tourist-bus friendly by building driveways that gave the buses ample room to turn around and made sure the farms were handicapped accessible.

Johnson is 100% behind the plans for a year-round farmers market as part of the $1.3 billion revitalization project. A year-round market brings with it an array of different produce including root crops, potatoes, winter squash, cider, meats, home-baked breads, organic breads and the chance to take Thanksgiving orders leading up to turkey day. "That can all be done indoors," Johnson said. "It'll be a great indoor opportunity."

Johnson believes the old high school would be a prime location for an indoor market. "I'm not the mayor, but if I was the mayor I'd put it into use."

The future under the new market manager, Janet Little of Houghs Neck, looks bright. And because she's retiring, it in no way means Johnson has had enough of the farmers market's atmosphere. "Of course, you won't be able to keep me away," she said with a laugh. "I have to go visit all my friends."

Auditorium. "Students revered everything Peter did," said DeCristofaro. "There as so many former students I see who ask me how Mr. Chrisom is.

"All of us here today know who Peter is; A gentleman who has established a legacy of caring, supporting, your unselfishness, your guidance, your strong work ethic, your values, your loyalty, your friendship, your leadership and of course your love."

Mayor Thomas Koch and Senator John Keenan praised Chrisom for making North High a great place to learn. Keenan presented Chrisom a Commonwealth of Massachusetts Citation and Koch honored him with a Mayor's Commendation.

"A lot of wonderful things happened to me in this building," said Koch. "No matter who you talk to, whether they worked her or attended here under his leadership, there was nothing but positive things to say about Peter Chrisom. It's a wonderful honor that's well deserved."

Keenan remembers Chrisom as being larger than life when he patrolled the halls.

"I think back to my first day here and the sense you got when you walked through the door, and the sense was that it was a warm, welcoming, well run, well organized place," said Keenan. And all of that goes to the principal at the time.

"When you walked down the hallway you looked at him with respect because he commanded respect, he didn't seek it. It was just the way he was, the way he treated everybody. And that permeated throughout the school. You respected your teachers and respected your peers."

Plan Approved For Hazard Mitigation

The Public Works Committee Monday unanimously approved an updated Hazard Mitigation Plan as presented by City Engineer Shawn Hardy.

Hardy said that his goal is to submit the city's updated plan to FEMA, the Federal Emergency . Management Agency, by the end of March.

Once the plan is submitted, Hardy said that FEMA is likely to release the thousands of dollars in grant money allocated for the Spence Avenue project.

"They're not going to release any funds until this is approved," Hardy told Committee members at the outset of the meeting.

Adams Shore Comedy Night To Benefit Scholarship Fund

The Adams Shore Community Association will host its annual Scholarship Fundraiser Saturday, April 30 at 7 p.m. at the Commonwealth Cafe, 79 Parking Way, Quincy.

The comedy night will feature comedians Dave Russo, Paul Gilligan and Artie Januario.

Tickets are $20. Contact Maureen Lynch at 617-745-9896.

There will also be raffle items, 50-50 drawing, cash bar and appetizers. All proceeds will benefit the Adams Shore Community Association Scholarship Fund.

torical Commission (MHC) whose deadline is March 25.

However, Raymondi was not alone in urging caution before undertaking the rehabilitation of the historic structure.

While councillors firmly supported protecting the 167-year-old structure, several had major questions on costs.

"We have no idea of the specifics of this project," said Councillor Joseph Finn while Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro said, "We need to look and analyze debt projections."

Gutro continued, "Is this the time to embark on this without the context of what the debt would look like? The affordability issue is one we each must wrestle with."

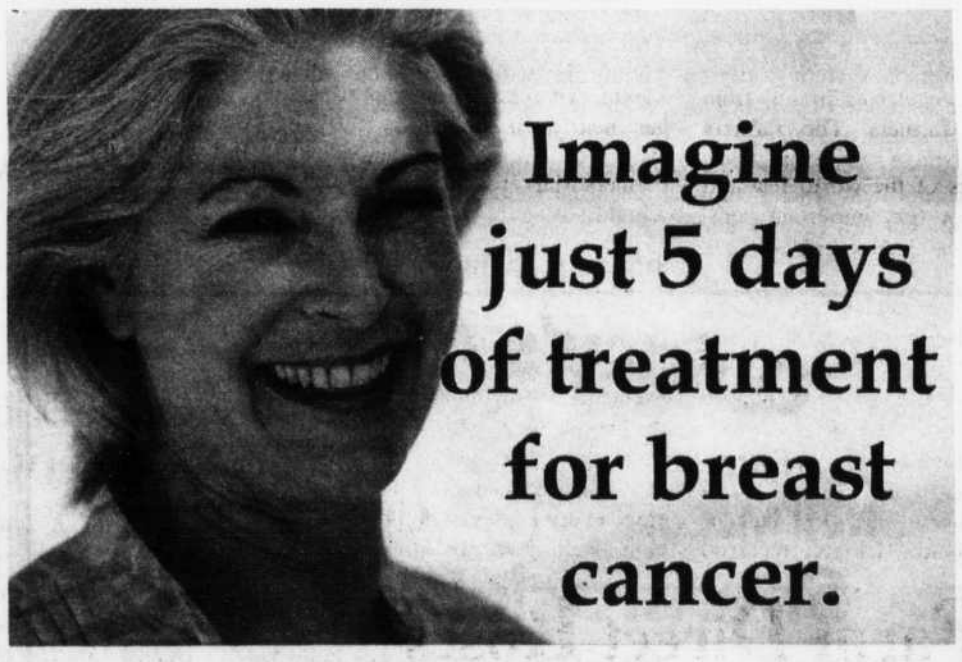
Chris Walker, Koch's policy director, said that one major purpose of the grant applications is to fund the studies to properly gauge the cost of restoring the building.

"We need to get to that point. That's why we're not throwing out a number now. We have to get there," said Walker.

In recent weeks, Koch also filed an application for a $450,000 grant from the city's Community Preservation funds. That grant would allow a detailed analysis of a rehabilitation project.

However, Raymondi recalled that City Clerk Joseph Shea asked councillors not to pursue the project unless all the pieces were in place and not to put such a study on a dusty shelf.

"If you're not willing to commit to this process, don't start," was the advice, according to Raymondi. "Who's going to pay for it? There's just not enough information for me."



Councillor John Keenan said the grant authorization was strictly a detail of an application. "We are authorizing him to submit the application and to expend the funds."

Assistant Solicitor Paul Hines said that approval of the application did not commit the city and was strictly part of a multi-page application with wording geared to private agencies with Boards of Directors.

However, Hines did say MHC would require that the city match any grant award either through the budget or Community Preservation funds.

At Raymondi's request, City Auditor Sue O'Connell researched the issue at the meeting and said that the administration could tap community block funds without further council approval and that she would report further on the question in the future.

City Clerk Joseph Shea filed the most recent report on the condition of the building on Feb. 22 when he described such problems as water leaking through the roof and windows, water near electrical outlets, as well as outdated plumbing, heating, and fire prevention systems.

South Suburban Oncology Center helps you spend less time fighting cancer and more time living.

FIRE SAFETY

By TOM LYONS
Retired Captain, Quincy Fire Department
Fire Prevention Bureau

Call Us!!

I heard of an incident that compels me to sit here and write prior to bed on this Saturday evening. It's proof that educational efforts must continue; that subject matter must be reinforced. There are occasional reminders that there is little time for rest while what's related here is a perfect example of why our efforts at education should continue.

The other day a fire officer came into my office to convey the details of an incident. When his engine company responded to an address, they could detect the odor of smoke from the exterior of the building. There are distinguishable odors that are telltale for certain types of fire. They new at that point that there was a potential serious issue at this location without a visible indication of smoke.

The fire department received the call via a transmitted box auxiliarized to the alarm system within this building. The smoke activated a smoke detector within the building, transmitting a signal to the fire alarm panel within the building; the activated panel transmitted a signal to our telegraph system notifying our fire alarm dispatch of an issue at this address.

Within the building they found a light smoke condition. On the second floor, they found a fan placed within a window. They searched for the source of the smoke condition, which can typically make for anxious moments. The hunt was on, while the men found the source, a ceiling light fixture. The officer told me if it had gone undetected, it would have certainly extended into the floor joists above, extending further into the wooden structure of the building. It could have become a much serious matter if gone undetected or ignored.

But here's the issue. The building housed a unique residential occupancy. There was a house manager. The manager detected the smoke and odor prior to the smoke detector activating, and saw the smoke as a symptom that had to be addressed. Rather than seeing it as an indication of a much serious problem, she saw it as a nuisance to the household environment that had to be dealt with at that moment, she did not embrace the adage where, "there's smoke, there's fire".

She placed a fan within the second floor window, to rid the area of smoke. This is the response of someone with an "optimistic wish". Studies have indicated that there are those instances where an occupant will detect an odor of smoke, and disregard it wanting to believe that the symptom, the condition is not an indication of a serious impending problem. Instead, a "business as usual" mindset is chosen and the problem, or potential problem is ignored for a more normal routine. Fortunately in this instance, the alarm system notified us directly.

This manager was spoken to about her decision or lack there of. Fire loves combustible concealed spaces and a fire within a concealed space can smolder for hours and days without breaking out into a room indicating its presence. Unfortunately at that point it can be too late. It can violently breakout, at the most vulnerable time for occupants, those sleeping during early hours.

If you detect an odor of smoke within your building, call us. If a smoke or CO detector activates, call us. If you've had to use a fire extinguisher within your home to extinguish an insipient fire, call us. If in doubt of a potential emergency condition, call us. Experience has led firefighters away from the pitfalls of an optimistic wish; rather, they focus on discovering and eliminating potential unforeseen hazards. Please recognize when you need us, and call us without hesitation. Thank you for doing so.

Spring Street Sweeping Schedule Begins April 4

The Quincy Department of Public Works announces the Spring Street Sweeping schedule will begin the week of April 4, weather permitting.

With an excess of sand remaining in the street from a heavy snow season, DPW officials said street sweeping is essential to keep streets clean and the city healthy.

Street sweeping is performed by ward and precinct method beginning Monday, April 4 and ending May 25.

To ensure all streets are properly cleaned, residents should make every effort to remove all vehicles from the street on the day it will be swept.

Signs will be posted in the area to be swept midday, the day prior to sweeping.

The schedule is in effect as noted weather permitting and will be posted on Quincy Access TV cable channels 8 and 10 as well as on the city website www.ci.quincy.ma.us.

For more information regarding street sweeping, call 617-376-1957.

as well as the history of the trust which, until 1953, directed funds to the Quincy public schools. Hines joined the city's team on the case in March, 2010.

Attorney Sarah Kim of Bingham McCutchen LLP filed the Adams Trust lawsuit in 2007 on behalf of the Woodward School for Girls.

The suit claimed the city did not adequately protect the trust or properly compensate the Woodward School which was designated beneficiary in 1953.

The Adams Trust dates back to 1822 when President John Adams deeded properties for the benefit of the 'Stone Temple,' the United First Parish Church (Unitarian).

In 1908, the assets of the Charles Frances Adams Trust were joined to the original trust when the Adams Academy (for boys) closed. The city then used the trust funds for Quincy Public schools until 1953 when the Woodward School was named beneficiary.

Ebenezer Woodward, a cousin of the Adams family, founded the Woodward School For Girls.

The suit claimed the city sold eleven of the trust's 15 properties for less than their value, failed to provide proper income to the Woodward School and refused to provide any accounting of the trust to the school

In 2008, Judge Langlois ordered the city to pay for an audit of the trust from 1953 to the date of the lawsuit. In his findings and judgment, the judge wrote that the city's records were so poorly maintained there was no way to ascertain all the facts.

Finn Seeks Investigation Of City's Water, Sewer Bills To Housing Authority

Councillor Joseph Finn Monday asked city councillors to investigate charges that the city's Water and Sewer Department may have "over-billed and collected from the Quincy Housing Authority (QHA) hundreds of thousands of dollars in estimated water and sewer billings."

In his resolution, Finn said that meter readings at Snug Harbor Family Development allegedly document the excess charges as well as bills for "which no service was rendered."

Some of the excess charges may be due to using regular rates for the QHA when billing should have been calculated at rates for tax-exempt properties, according to Finn's resolution.

Councillors did not discuss Finn's charges Monday, but referred his resolution to the Housing Committee and to the Public Works Committee.

MORE THAN 30 Adirondack Chairs were dedicated at Logan International Airport last fall as part of the Art Rocks program. Those in attendance included (L to R) Joe Hajjaan from Harbor Express, Quincy's Mary Lou Fishman and artist Marilyn Reisberg.

TITLED "OUR SUMMER RESIDENTS," a brightly-colored chair brightens up Terminal 6 at Logan International Airport.

Artist Marilyn Reisberg Beautifies Busy Logan Airport

Painted Chair Part Of 'Art Rocks' Project

By JOE REARDON

Add helping to beautify one of the busiest airports in the country to what Marilyn Reisberg has been able to express with her delightful art work.

The Quincy resident has one of the 50 painted Adirondack rocking chairs on display at Logan International Airport, part of the Massachusetts Port Authority's effort to support and promote the work of local artists. Reisberg's cheerful chair is decorated with flowers and a graceful swan sitting majestically in a deep blue pond. Reisberg titled the piece "Our Summer Residence" because the swan's beauty is only seen in the local area during the summer months. The colorful work took Reisberg five hours to complete.

Reisberg found the "Art Rocks" project to be very uplifting and a great opportunity for local artists to show off their talents to people from all over the world "It was very successful," she said. "The chairs are very highly thought of. It was a great honor for me."

Massport executives believe the beautiful and unique artwork will be a big attraction to travels from all parts of the globe.

"Public art is an important element in humanizing the airport environment," said Thomas J. Kinton Jr., the CEO and Executive Director of the Massachusetts Port Authority. "Art helps travelers reduce their stress. When it entertains and inspires, or provides a sense of place for road warriors who visit dozens of airports a year. It cannot help but leaving a lasting positive impression on those who walk through our terminals. It is our hope that this are may even tempt some of those people to sit a while."

Michael Cataldo was the brains behind the idea to beautify what he called the "virgin white chairs" around the airport. The airport's manager of aviation business marketing said that artists were asked to apply to design a chair and the applicants were picked by a review committee. The artists were asked to come up with regional ideas for their chairs.

"It's a great idea and when you pass through the terminal, the chairs are usually all occupied," said Cataldo. "People love them."

Working with UrbanArts Institute at Massachusetts College of Art and Design, Massport received a big response with 70 submissions for the 50 rocking chairs. The feedback on the chairs has been nothing but positive with their depictions of local themes, scenes and landmarks. Paintings on the chair depict such familiar local themes as Boston Harbor, Fenway Park and Plymouth Rock and give travelers a true Boston flavor at the airport.

Quincy's Chris Myers found the process of designing a work of art to be painted on a rocking chair very rewarding. A Harvard student majoring in landscape architecture, Myers buried himself in the project from the start. He worked on the intricacies of painting images that would be conducive to both vertical and horizontal surfaces. All told, the design process and actual painting took him 11 hours.

Myers painted the image of an Egret, to symbolize both flight and a bird that is found in marshy habitats, much like the area Logan was built on in East Boston. "The Egrets are around here everywhere," said Myers. "It's a pretty obvious choice because of the flight connection."

Myers said having his decorated chair in the airport is a thrill and a good way to get local artistic talent noticed in the area. "It was definitely cool," he said. "More than anything, it's good to get local art out in the public. There's a whole lot of art, but not a lot of places for it."

THE BACK OF the "Our Summer Residents" chair is decorated with colorful flowers and vines.

Painting has always given Myers a chance to express his creativity and he believes a degree in landscape architecture, which he'll receive in the summer of 2013, is also an outlet as well. "It (painting) gives me a chance to relax and think creatively," he said. "You still do a lot of drawing (in landscape architecture) and put a lot of thought in."

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, Feb. 19, at approximately 2:24 a.m., Officers Robert Sweetland, Benny Chen and Michael Eddy were dispatched to the area of 63 Hall Place for a report of suspicious males in the area.

LT. DAN MINTON

The caller stated that three males wearing dark clothing were in the driveway of 55 Hall Place near a motor vehicle and may have taken something from the car.

Upon arrival, Officer Sweetland stopped the three males walking up the driveway of a house on Hall Place. Officers Chen and Eddy arrived on scene. The Officers pat-frisked the suspects for weapons, finding a retractable razor knife and two disposable razors in the pants pocket of suspect #1. He also had two unopened 12 ounce Bud Ice Beer cans in his sweatshirt pockets, a key to a Ford Taurus, identified by a mechanic's tag, a black sharper image folding shovel, a handicapped parking placard and a box of birth control pills.

Suspect #2 was searched and he had an IPOD. Suspect #3 had his ID, safety glasses, an inhaler and keys. Suspect #1 and #2 said they lived on Vassall Street in Quincy and suspect #3 lived on California Avenue. All three stated that they were walking form North Quincy to a party somewhere on Copeland Street. When asked if they knew anyone who lived on Hall Place, they said no.

Officer Eddy checked the area where Officer Sweetland stopped the three suspects. In the driveway was a new pump with a hose on the snow bank. Officer Eddy read them their Miranda rights and questioned the suspects. Suspect #3 was asked where he got the pump from and he stated, "I'm not the one you should be asking," then motioned with his head toward the other two suspects.

Suspect #3 then blurted out, "You might want to look at that van" as motioned to the corner of Hall Place and Crescent Street. Suspect #3 said that he met up with the other suspects earlier and they showed him the pump, asking if he could use it. Officer Eddy questioned suspect #1 about his possession of birth control pills and he responded, "I may hook up with a girl tonight and don't want to get her pregnant." He said the pills belong to "my friend", but when asked the name, it did not match the name on the pill container. Suspect #1 changed his story, stating that he found them on the ground near the former Mass Fields School in Wollaston.

When asked who's car key he had, suspect #1 said he found it on the ground "about 150 feet back that way" towards the low numbers of Hall Place. He stated the disposable razors were his and that he carries them "in case he has to shave." He added that he found the shovel near where he found the key. The handicap placard had the owner's name on it, so QPD Communications looked the name up and found his address. Officer Sweetland asked suspect #1 who owned the placard and he said it was his uncle's, but the name was incorrect. All three suspects were handcuffed.

Officer Eddy asked suspect #2 where he got the pump from and he said he found it down the street, in the opposite direction of the van that suspect #3 mentioned.

Suspect #2 said he kicked it all the way down the street, but the box had no damage to it. When asked how it ended up in the yard where they were stopped by the Police, suspect #2 said he was a punter on his high school football team and kicked it up there. When asked how the pump, hose and box ended up separate from each other, the suspect said,

"I told you, I punted it in there." When asked how the hose ended up thirty feet away in the opposite direction, the suspect stated that he kicked the pump in the driveway and the hose must have gone in the air the other way. Suspect #1, an 18 year old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for "Minor in possession of alcohol and two counts of breaking and entering a motor vehicle in the nighttime." Suspect #2, a 19 year old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for two counts of breaking and entering a motor vehicle in the nighttime (3 counts).

Suspect #3's information was taken and may result in charges pending further investigation. He is a 17 year old Quincy resident. Just prior to leaving, Officer Sweetland learned from suspect #1 that he and suspect #2 both

Neighborhood Housing Services Forum Addresses Foreclosure Crisis

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore recently hosted a "Donuts with the Delegates" breakfast recently to update local lawmakers on how the foreclosure crisis is affecting the region.

Held at Neighborhood Housing's Quincy headquarters, the event was attended by state Rep. Bruce Ayers and Rep. Tackey Chan of Quincy.

Representatives from the offices of Congressman William Keating, Sen. John Keenan (D-Quincy) and state Rep. Garrett Bradley (D-Hingham) were also present at the session, which focused on ways in which Neighborhood Housing and other organizations can serve as a resource to both legislators and the general public on topics such as the ongoing foreclosure crisis.

"We shared some local housing statistics and observations, including the dramatic increase in the past year in the number of foreclosures in Quincy and Weymouth," Executive Director Robert Corley said. "We also noted that while subprime loans were behind many of the initial foreclosures, we're now seeing a lot more that are driven by continued unemployment."

Attendees also discussed upcoming housing legislation, including a bill that would use state tax credits to attract private capital for community and economic development, and a bill that would require all mortgage servicers doing business in Massachusetts to provide homeowners with the name and contact information for an office open 40 hours a week– a change, Corley said, that would make it easier for homeowners to work with lenders to prevent foreclosure.

BRUCE AYERS

TACKEY CHAN

"When someone is in danger of foreclosure, Neighborhood Housing will work with the lender to arrange a loan modification – but many times, the big national banks just don't respond in time," Corley said. "This bill would make it easier for the state to ensure that these banks respond quickly, thereby helping to speed up loan modifications and help local families keep their homes."

Legislators were surprised to learn, Corley added, of the number of programs and services offered by Neighborhood Housing Services to assist homeowners in danger of losing their home to foreclosure. In addition to offering free foreclosure prevention counseling clinics, the agency offers first-time homebuyer workshops designed to educate local residents on buying and maintaining a home.

"If there had been more homebuyer education programs in the beginning, many of the foreclosures we've seen wouldn't have happened," Corley said. "Through our first-time homebuyer programs, we can help new homeowners figure out how much they can really afford and help them learn the strategies needed for responsible home ownership."

Neighborhood Housing Services also offers a homeowner repair program that provides loans of up to $30,000 for needed home repairs. The agency is also collaborating with a number of South Shore cities and towns to find regional solutions to the local foreclosure crisis.

"The most important thing to tell homeowners is, 'Don't wait until you're in foreclosure to call us,'" Corley said, noting that many desperate families deplete their life savings and run up large credit card bills in an attempt to stay afloat, only to find themselves in a worse financial position when they face foreclosure. "If homeowners come to us early on, they'll be in a lot stronger position to negotiate a loan modification that may allow them to keep their home."

Lost First Round Home Game, 62-54;
Presidents Return Four Starters in 2011-2012

Quincy Eliminated From Division 1 South Sectionals By Taunton

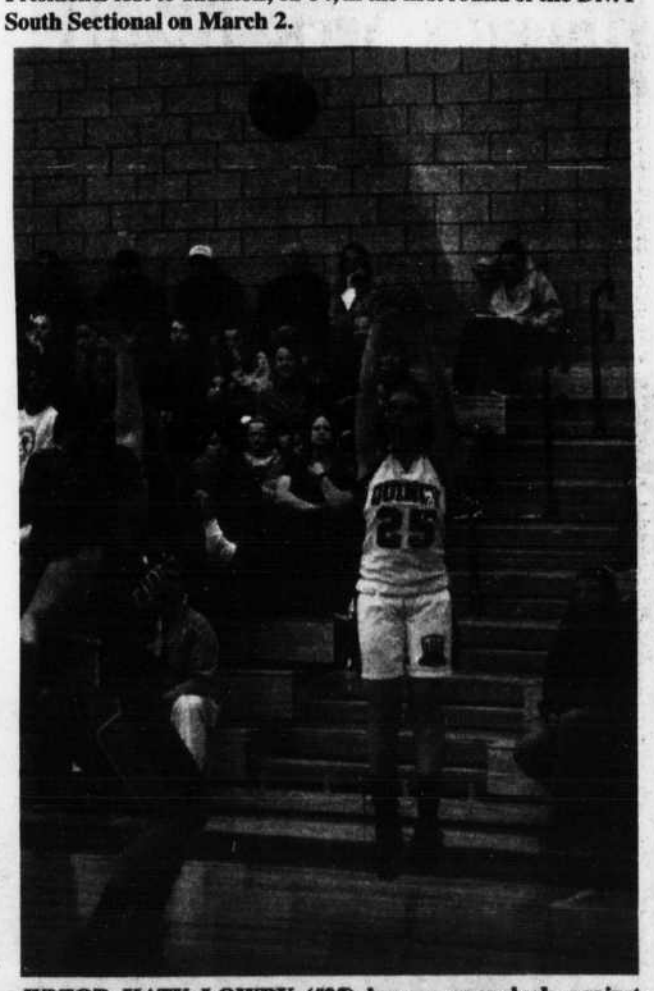
By SEAN BRENNAN



Quincy's season came to an abrupt end on March 2 following a 62-54 loss to Taunton High School in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectional basketball tournament.

It just wasn't the Presidents night.

Trailing the Tigers, 52-41, with less than two minutes remaining in regulation, Quincy suddenly found an offensive spark. A three-pointer from junior Kiley McDonald (25 points, 15 rebounds) cut the Taunton lead to 52-45; a steal and subsequent jumper by junior Katy Lowry pushed the score to 52-47, but a clutch bucket by Taunton's Gracie Harrigan (20 points) gave the Tigers enough of a late-game cushion (55-48) to close out the Presidents, ending their magical season at 17-4 overall.

JUNIOR KILEY McDONALD (#34) goes up for two of her game-high 25 points versus the Tigers. McDonald and the Presidents lost to Taunton, 62-54, in the first round of the Div. 1 South Sectional on March 2.

JUNIOR KATY LOWRY (#25) has an open look against Taunton. Lowry and the Presidents lost to Taunton 62-54 in a Div. 1 South first round game played at QHS.

Looking back, several factors played into the first round defeat.

Quincy, and for that matter, Taunton, both began the game cold from the field. The contest's opening four minutes were a collection of missed layups, short jumpers and nerves; at the midway mark of the tilt's first eight minutes the Presidents held a slim 8-6 lead. That lead would not last.

Taunton's Lauren Perra hit back-to-back three-pointers to give the visitors a 12-8 advantage – a lead that the Tigers would hold onto until Quincy took back the scoreboard for the final time in the third quarter (28-26) on a two-pointer from McDonald.

At the end of the first quarter, No. 6 Quincy and No. 11 Taunton were knotted up at 12-12. McDonald was Quincy's leading scorer with five points.

"(Taunton) did a great job on defense," said QHS coach Jeff Bretsch. "They started out in a 2-3 zone and it looked like we were going to handle it and we were getting great shots and feeling good about it. We missed a bunch, but we knew if we kept shooting we had a chance to win the ballgame.

"Their 2-3 zone ended up giving us problems. We had a tough time getting our outside shot; we got some of those (looks) but they just didn't go in. I thought that we struggled to find our rhythm."

Quincy's offensive woes continued in the second quarter. A 14-14 score quickly became a 21-14 Taunton lead. The Presidents had multiple scoring chances, but the inside defense and rebounding of the Tigers' 6'0" trio of Harrigan, Angie Martinez and Taylah Pelote forced Quincy into unconventional shots whose rebounds always seemed to end up in the visitors' hands.

A three-pointer by Quincy's Nicole Lamie, right before halftime, made the score 23-19 Taunton at the break.

"They do have shot blockers," stated Bretsch about the Tigers' size down low. "I scouted them and talked to a lot of people and I knew that they were big. They have three six-foot girls on the roster. I was proud of how we played in what you may consider a mismatch with the size they had. We struggled to hit our shots early although we had good looks but they just wouldn't go down."

At the start of the second half, Quincy came out and went on a mini-5-0 scoring run, highlighted by a deep three from senior Kori Sorensen, regaining the advantage 24-23, but the Tigers roared right back, tying the score at 28-28, before ending the third on a 10-3 run to take a 38-31 lead into the game's final eight minutes.

"Taunton hit a bunch of big shots and I have to give them credit," Bretsch said. "In the first half those back-to-back threes were devastating and in the second half Harrigan just wouldn't miss."

Two minutes into the fourth quarter the Tigers had expanded their lead to 44-34.

Timeout by Quincy.

The short breather seemed to ignite the Presidents as Sorensen connected on another three-pointer (44-36), but, again, Taunton had all the answers.

A killer three-pointer from Erica McGreevey upped the Tigers advantage to 48-36, which the road team quickly expanded to 50-38. With 1:57 left in regulation, Quincy trailed 52-41 before going on the late 6-0 scoring run which brought them back to within 52-47.

But time was not on Quincy's side. Taunton had survived the Presidents finally assault and walked off the court with a 62-54 Division 1 South Sectional victory.

This was not the result that Bretsch was hoping for after his program finished the regular season at 17-3 and claimed second place in the Patriot League, but, on a positive note, the majority of his team will be back next season. Quincy graduates three seniors and returns four starters.

That is the good news.

"I am just so proud of my team because we got down by a lot with four minutes to go," he said in praising his young team. "They played their hearts out and never quit. They never hung their heads; none of that stuff that can happen happened when the pressure was on. Sometimes the shots don't go in and you can't control that."

"We didn't make a ton of shots but we didn't have a lot of turnovers and we didn't play sloppy," Bretsch continued. "They are learning and getting better every game. I don't think a 17-4 season is anything to sneeze at. We would have been glad to advance a little bit in this tournament because we felt like we had a good enough team to do it, but I am incredibly proud of them.

"I don't think anyone saw them coming into this year and being this successful. So it is a good sign for next year."

With talent in juniors Juli Tomer, Maria Berberan, Katy Lowry, Victoria Wallace, Nicole Lamie, Emily Nguyen and Kiley McDonald returning to the hardwood for Quincy next season, the future looks bright, but the Presidents will be hard pressed to fully replace the contributions of graduating seniors Kori Sorensen, Stella Edwards and Christina Cahill.

"I can't even express how much we are going to miss Kori," said her coach. "She is more than just a three-point shooter. She is the heart and soul and she is all guts. She is the girl that you want on your team when the game is on the line. We are going to miss her leadership and everything about her; she is just a special player."

"My other seniors, too," Bretsch continued. "Stella Edwards was my everything backup and Christina Cahill was great. I am going to miss them like crazy. The seniors deserve all the credit."

SENIOR KORI SORENSEN (#33) leaves the court for the final time near the conclusion of last week's first round game against Taunton. Sorensen, a team captain, is one of three seniors who played in their final high school game versus the Tigers; the others were Christina Cahill and Stella Edwards.

Tryouts Begin The First Weekend of May At O'Rourke Field; Quincy Post #95 Has Cancelled Team

Morrisette Post #294 To Be The Only American Legion Baseball Team In Quincy This Summer

By SEAN BRENNAN

This summer Morrisette Post #294 will be the only District 6 East American Legion Baseball team in the City of Quincy.

The city's other American Legion team, Quincy Post #95, last week, officially cancelled its long-standing program for the upcoming 2011 season.

"We held a meeting last night (March 3) and it was decided that for this season the team has been cancelled," said Quincy Post #95 Manager Al Marobella last Friday. "Our building has been sold and the new road being constructed, right outside of our front door, has killed us. We hope to have a team back soon."

So, what does this mean for prospective American Legion ballplayers in the city? What it means is, that, if you are a Quincy resident, between the ages of 16-19, and would like to play American Legion Baseball, you now are required to come and tryout for Morrisette Post #294.

Though not ideal for a city with a population as large as Quincy, the current situation is set in stone - Morrisette will be the only District 6 East American Legion team playing baseball this summer in Quincy.

The Quincy Sun sat down with Morrisette Manager Steve Maze last Friday to get his take on the comings-and-goings of American Legion Baseball in Quincy and to iron out what every player and parent needs to know about the fast-approaching 2011 season.

What does this all mean for American Legion Baseball in Quincy?

First of all, I encourage Quincy Legion to come back. I am upset that they are not there because with them it gives more kids the chance to play Legion Baseball, which is elite level baseball. Whatever their situation is, I wish them the best in that situation. I hope things work out for them and hopefully they come back. I want it to be known that Morrisette is supportive of Quincy Post #95.

What this basically means, is that any kid who is between the ages of 16 to 19, that wants to play American Legion Baseball, and lives in the City of Quincy, must tryout for Morrisette before anyone else or before being released to anyone else.

What should potential Morrisette American Legion candidates expect at tryouts?

You should expect more numbers. You should expect a much, much stiffer competition and you need to look forward to playing for an elite, finally, an elite baseball program in the City of Quincy.

If someone didn't play for Morrisette last year are they at a disadvantage?

No. Every kid will have an equal opportunity whether they played last year for Wollaston, Morrisette or Quincy Legion, it doesn't matter what high school they go to. I am not going to play favorites. Everyone will have an equal opportunity to make the 18-man roster. It doesn't matter if they are 16 or 19, it doesn't matter if they played for me last year, and it doesn't matter if they played for Quincy Legion. Everybody starts at zero.

If a player comes to tryouts and doesn't make the team, what are some of the options they have to play at a high level of baseball this summer in the City of Quincy?

One great option is Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth run by Bob Griffin. He is going to have two teams this year. There is always somewhere else to play competitive baseball in Quincy. There is opportunity for kids to play baseball outside of Morrisette. I fully expect to have the 18 best players in the city from ages 16 to 19 on my team.

Everyone interested in playing American Legion in Quincy has to tryout for Morrisette.

With the potential to have the 18 best 16 to19-year old ballplayers from Quincy on one team what should the players and the fans be expecting this summer?

It is tough to say months and months beforehand but I expect superior baseball. It is an 18-game schedule and I expect the kids to rise to the challenge, to rise to the occasion. I expect great things this year.

This year is going to be fun. I'll tell you what, it is going to be interesting, but the pressure is going to be on my staff and myself. I have to put the right nine guys on the field but we should play solid baseball all season.

This will be a competitive year.

With this change are you expecting any issues, team-wise, this season?

I believe that winning solves problems. I believe that we have to get off to a real good start. I now have a number of schools that I have to put together; they are all going to have to trust each other. They are going to have to buy in and they going to have to unite as one team.

Important Note

Morrisette Post #294 is scheduled to begin tryouts the first weekend of May at O'Rourke Field in Quincy. Questions should be directed to Manager Steve Maze at morrisetteball@aol.com.

Quincy Finished Season At 12-11 Overall, 9-6 In Patriot League; Program In Excellent Shape Moving Forward

Presidents Out Of Div. 2 Sectionals Following 52-47 Loss To Duxbury

By SEAN BRENNAN

A 52-47 loss to Duxbury High School in the first round of the Division 2 South Sectionals ended Quincy's hopes for a long tournament run, but despite this setback, the Presidents' boys basketball program is moving in the right direction.

"We came up a little short at the end," said QHS coach David Parry on Monday, "but we played with that 'never say die' attitude and kept plugging away. We trailed by 13 points in the fourth quarter and I went to a smaller lineup and we started using our diamond full court press and we ended up coming all the way back and taking a 47-46 lead on a jumper from Ryan Schultz with under three minutes to play."

"Duxbury ended up rallying back to win; they are a strong team. But my guys are a resilient bunch," continued Parry. "I thoroughly enjoyed coaching them in that game and throughout the season."

Quincy, which entered the Div. 2 South playoffs, as the No. 13 seed finished the season at 12-11 overall and 9-6 in the Patriot League. Parry will have to retool – and reload – his program next winter as he loses a number of key seniors in Brian Malger, Ryan Schultz and Kevin McDonagh, but he has pieces in place with a solid foundation of returning players such as Jalen Green, Jaquan Harris and Zerick Fadairo.

"We are going to miss the leadership that these seniors brought to the court," Parry said. "Brian has been our floor general and our backbone for the past three years on both offense and defense; Ryan, a first-year varsity player, brought the team a toughness that we needed. He had a great year and became a Patriot League All-Star for his efforts, and Kevin, like he always seemed to do, came on at the end of the season, when the games really meant something and played his best when the lights were bright."

"The younger guys because of some changes later in the season that we had to make got the opportunity to gain some valuable experience," continued Parry. "We have talent returning."

The Quincy program, after qualifying for the post-season for a second straight year, is now, according to Parry, a team that should not only challenge for a tournament spot every year but on top of that they should continue to compete for league titles.

"The program is headed in the right direction," he stated. "We are excited about the future. Although this season wasn't a total success, we did have a chance to play for a Patriot League title and after making the tournament for a second straight time, we have a lot to build on. We should no longer hope to make the tournament. I feel like this is a team now that should expect to be there and hopefully next season have more success once we get in."

For Parry, one of the best aspects of being a head coach at the high school level is the relationships he gets to develop with the players under his watch. This year's team was no different.

"The relationships that you build last forever," he said. "I told the kids that no one can take away the memory of that final game against Duxbury. For my seniors it was their last high school game and even though we lost, we left it all out there. That is something they should be proud of and for the underclassmen, hopefully, the will take that memory into the off-season and come back next season hungry to do even better."

Local Marathoners Eschewing Treadmills, Instead Training On The Roads And Hills Of Quincy

Quincy Runners Battle Mother Nature In Preparation For The Boston Marathon

By JOE REARDON

Winter running doesn't just give the average runner the blues; it affects some of the best in the world.

During the winter of 1976 while training for the Olympic marathon trials, four-time Boston and New York City Marathon champion Bill Rodgers was a quarter mile into a run on a cold, wintry morning when the brutally tough weather got to him.

After a winter of a steady diet of snow, sleet and bitter cold, Rodgers had had enough. He turned around, headed back to his house, and began running in place inside.

At the time, Rodgers said running in the extreme weather twice a day, seven days a week was both mentally and physically depressing. Of course that was a bizarre case of the winter doldrums and Rodgers certainly didn't spend the frigid months cooped inside, but it does go to show that running in the snow and cold can drive any runner a little batty, if only for a short period of time.

LAURA SHUFORD puts in her miles along Wollaston Beach. Shuford has stayed away from the treadmill this winter, preferring instead to log her mileage in the unforgiving winter weather.

Quincy Sun photos/Joe Reardon

In his running diary dated Jan. 31, 1973, Rodgers showed he has no love lost for the wintry weather. "Cold brrr! out – 10-degrees or so. Ran around Jamaica Pond. 1st run – Ran at "Y" for 2nd run – it was about 0-degrees."

Local marathoner Hassan Haydar has made it a point to run outside this winter as much as possible training for April's Boston Marathon. He sets out in the dark at 6:30 am to run the hills of the quiet Squantum neighborhoods, bucking the wind and cold in the process. Haydar shrugs his shoulders and simply accepts the fact that abysmal conditions go hand in hand with running in New England during the winter months. As a competitive runner you either adapt or get left behind.

On the days where the roads are too dangerous to train on because of ice or snow, Haydar moves inside and does his workouts on the dreaded treadmill.

Speed workouts, he freely admits, are a particular headache on the treadmill, but they're an integral part of Haydar's 55-60 mile weeks in preparing for the Hopkinton-to-Boston classic.

This winter has been especially rough, but Haydar's confident that he'll be fully prepared come Patriots Day morning in Hopkinton.

This year's Boston should be a big one for the accomplished marathoner. Haydar clocked a Boston best of 3:22:15 in the 2009 race, but it was at last fall's Bay State Marathon in Lowell where he stepped it up a notch on the notoriously fast route along the banks of the Merrimack River. Haydar ran a near-perfect race in capturing the 60-and-over division with a swift 3:11:22.

Haydar remains optimistic the worst of the winter weather has passed and training will become that much easier.

"Everybody will be ready for Boston," said the soft-spoken Haydar. "It's good that we got it (snow) in January because February is when you start ramping it (training) up.

"I would describe this running season as a deep depression. Trying to chart out a long run of 15 or 20 miles is almost impossible. You have to be flexible. You have to go back to the treadmill and say 'I'm sorry what I said, I love you now.' It's awful running on a treadmill."

Maureen Lamie has found the treadmill to be pure drudgery, but like Haydar, agrees that this winter has made running on the machine a necessary evil. "It's a little more challenging because I've had to go on the treadmill and I don't like the treadmill," she said. "I usually can't do more than six (miles) because I'm at my breaking point."

Lamie had the race of her life at Boston last spring and sliced more than a minute off her previous best with an impressive 3:26:51. She'd like to better her mark this time around as well, despite the harsh weather she's had to deal with the past two months.

A couple of Sundays back, Lamie went out for her weekly long run with the intent of cruising around the path that circles scenic Jamaica Pond. When she reached the pond, though, Lamie found the path to be an icy mess, forcing her to run on the side of the busy Jamaica Way road.

Lamie incorporates speed workouts into her runs on the roads, alternating half- and three-quarter mile repeats. She hasn't done as many high-quality speed sessions this winter because of the icy conditions. "I can do them as long as I can find someplace that isn't icy," Lamie said.

Despite the challenge this winter has presented, Lamie's fitness level is as good as it was this time last year and she has incorporated cross training on an elliptic machine as part of her weekly regiment. Her mid-week 10-mile runs took a hit because of the storms, but Lamie is keeping a positive outlook about the weather. This month her training switches gears as Lamie begins incorporating running the Newton Hills on the Boston course into her training schedule.

"Could it get any worse?" she said of the harsh winter.

Laura Shuford simply refuses to run on a treadmill and plans her workouts according to the weather conditions. She has run through every storm this winter, while at the same time maintaining her 65-mile per week schedule. Shuford believes it's a matter of common sense once you head out in the weather.

"It's doable," said Shuford, who swam at Auburn University on a full scholarship. "The streets have been clear and that's a positive. It was slow (on the storm days). You just slow down and take your time. It beats a treadmill."

LAURA SHUFORD is hoping to run under 3:30 at this April's Boston Marathon.

Shuford had a brilliant race last year at Boston in just her second marathon. She never faltered along the 26.2-mile route in clocking a stellar 3:32:56. Her personal best was short lived however as she dashed across the finish line more than six minutes faster in 3:26:30 at the Burlington Marathon in Vermont a month later.

Shuford has taken the frigid days in stride as well. She packs on layers of clothing and within a mile of running she begins to warm up. "I wear so many layers that I don't stay cold for very long," said Shuford.

Despite a hamstring injury she sustained last October while running the Cape Cod Marathon, Shuford is confident she can run anywhere from 3:00-3:30 in April. She's steadily maintained her 20-mile long runs, all within the city's borders, and intends to do at least a few workouts on the Newton Hills leading to fabled Heartbreak Hill near Boston College.

Kim Driscoll, the Health and Well Being coordinator at the South Shore YMCA's Quincy branch, said the 20-plus treadmills at the YMCA are in use from morning until night, but marathoners in training still need to get outside to do their longer runs.

This winter has been the most challenging Driscoll has seen in years. "It's brutal," said Driscoll, whose lone Boston effort resulted in a sub-4-hour clocking in 2005. "It's not even a matter of running on the snow and ice. It's the high snow banks and no sidewalks. The marathoners are always out. Right now their long runs are up to 16 miles."

Keryn Mahoney has moved inside on a few occasions and run up to 10 miles on the treadmill, but is concentrating on her hill workouts from now until the third Monday in April in preparation for the lung-searing Newton Hills.

In her first Boston two years ago, Mahoney ran steadily the entire way to finish in a very respectable 4:37:58. At the time, she was living and training in San Diego, so there were no issues with snow, cold, ice, slush and all the nuisances that go hand in hand with winter in New England.

This time around, it's been a completely different story. Mahoney has opted on a few occasions to train on the treadmill to ensure a quality training run, but the majority of her focus has been toughening herself for the hills she'll have to take on starting at 18 miles.

"I'm mostly been running on the treadmill in the bad weather," said Mahoney, who clocked a 4:37:58 at Boston in 2009 in her first and only marathon. "I'd like to run between 4:20 and 4:30."

Once a week, Mahoney puts her head downs and attacks the steep Ricciuti Drive incline that leads up to Granite Links. She's also run the four miles of Newton Hills from the Newton Fire Station to Boston College in anticipation for the marathon.

Mahoney's brother, Brian, has grown to enjoy running on the treadmill, particularly during his speed workouts. His toughest workout, six times 10 minutes at faster than race pace, couldn't be done on snow or ice.

"It's brutal but it's actually a lot of fun," Brian said of his stomach-churning workout. "I've gotten to learn to love the treadmill this year."

Brian has never been more focused on a race than he has been for this year's Boston. In last year's race, he improved his personal best by a whopping 18 minutes, but it was still a bittersweet experience because he missed his goal of breaking four hours by a scant 52 seconds.

This time around, he doesn't merely want to break the 4-hour barrier; Brian wants to leave it in shambles.

"This year I want to get way under four hours," Brian said. "To come within 52 seconds last year only makes me that more determined."

Brian believes the stormy weather could be over and done with for the winter. He pointed out that the Farmer's Almanac is predicting good weather heading towards springtime. "Somebody read in the Farmer's Almanac that it was supposed to be bad up until the middle of February," Brian said.

Pat Foley is coming off a 4:01:12 personal best from last year and has done several cross-training activities, such as boxing, basketball and elliptical, to go along with a weekly run up the notoriously tough hills of Quarry Street. Foley knocked 18 minutes off his time last year and is hoping to get under four hours this go around.

Foley, though, looks at the wicked winter, as tough as it has been, as a big plus as the marathon draws closer. "It's only going to help you," he said. "You're working out in worse conditions than you'll race in. I have to knock 73 seconds off somewhere."

Free Basic Boating Courses Provided By QPD

The Quincy Marine Unit, in partnership with the Massachusetts Environmental Police, will be presenting three Basic Boating Safety Courses at no cost to the public. These courses are designed for persons of all ages, regardless of boating skill.

Courses are nationally approved and course completion will allow persons to legally operate a boat in states requiring Basic Boating Safety Courses. Everyone who completes the course will be issued a Basic Boating Safety Certificate.

Completion of the course by persons between 12 to 16 years of age will allow them to operate a motorboat without adult supervision. You must be at least 12 years old to register for the class. In addition, some insurance companies offer policy discounts for customers that complete a Basic Boating Safety Course.

All of the courses will be taught at the Houghs Neck Maritime Center, located at 137 Bay View Ave (next to the Quincy Yacht Club on Sea Street).

The three courses will be taught on the following dates:

Saturday afternoon class 12-4 p.m., March 26, April 2 and April 9;

Tuesday evening class 6-10 p.m., April 12, April 19 and April 26 and,

Saturday morning class 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., April 30, May 7 and May 14.

To register for a course or for more information, call the Massachusetts Environmental Police at 508-759-0002.

North Quincy Finished With 8-5-8 Record; Share of the Patriot League Championship

Season Ends For Red Raiders With A 5-2 Loss In Div. 2 Quarterfinals

By SEAN BRENNAN

Monday afternoon Matt Gibbons was driving home from work his mind wandering as he tried to figure out what to do without the daily routine of hockey activities.

Over the last 3-½ months, Gibbons has known exactly what to expect in the hours after school let out. He would meet with his North Quincy Red Raiders, or with members of his coaching staff and get down to the business of preparing for the next game.

This routine came to a sudden halt last Saturday at the Gallo Ice Rink in Bourne after North Quincy lost a competitive 5-2 game to Franklin High School in the Division 2 South quarterfinals.

"That was a tough loss," he said. "We were confident going into the game that we could play with them. Unfortunately, as had been the case all season, we fell behind early (3-1 after one period) and despite playing much better in the second and third periods we just couldn't dig ourselves out of that hole."

"Give Franklin credit," Gibbons continued. "Up and down (they) were probably the best team we had seen all season. They have speed; they can shot the puck and they are skilled. But I felt like we played them evenly after the first four minutes, it just didn't turn out the way we had hoped."

A minute-plus after the puck dropped, the No. 3 Panthers rattled the No. 6 Red Raiders' cages when defenseman Keith MacKay blasted a slap shot over the right shoulder of North Quincy's James Dunn to give Franklin an immediate 1-0 advantage. The suddenness of the goal may have stunned North Quincy but it didn't take long for the Raiders to strike right back.

Fifty-five seconds later, senior captain Dereck Graham found open ice in the Panthers' zone and, off of a feed from fellow captain Michael Nelson, slapped the puck through the pads of goalie Bill Spillane, knotting the quarterfinal game up at 1-1. For a moment, Graham's tally had softened Franklin's initial blow.

That moment lasted all of 17 seconds. The Panthers (15-4-2) clawed right back as senior Tom Carlow scored two goals in a span of ten seconds and Gibbons was forced to call a timeout four minutes into North Quincy's first playoff game in two years to halt the momentum that was building. It worked. The Red Raiders picked up the pace on Franklin and skated the period's last 12 minutes on equal ice.

"Their first goal came off a great shot and I thought we did a good job dealing with it," he said. "Dereck scored to tie it but then they scored two goals ten seconds apart. You could feel the tension on the bench so I called a timeout to settle us down and I thought we came out and controlled the rest of the first period. Credit to the guys, they could have folded but they didn't."

North Quincy stood skate-to-skate with Franklin in the second period. The Panthers ended up outshooting the Red Raiders 12-10, but the period's scoreboard favored North. Senior forward Brendan Glynn sliced the deficit down to 3-2 at 9:14 after corralling a turnover deep in the opposing end and stuffing a close-range shot by Spillane.

"We came out determined to start the second period," stated Gibbons. "We didn't dominate them but we played better in the second and third periods, which was the type of team that we were all season. After Brendan scored we felt good heading into the third."

Franklin had the first quality scoring opportunity in the decisive final period. It came on an early breakaway that was stoned by Dunn. The Raiders' junior net-minder was solid all season, posting a 1.90 GAA during the regular season, so it came as no surprise to Gibbons that Dunn played huge in an elimination game. "After the first few minutes of the game, James settled down. He made some big stops that kept us in it."

As the game clock ticked down North amped up the pressure looking for the equalizer, but when Panthers' junior Nick Bertoni barreled down the ice and scored with 7:15 left, the Raiders found themselves down 4-2. Franklin's Mark Teehen's empty-net goal closed out the scoring.

"We gave everything we had but got beat by a better team," said Gibbons. "It's just disappointing especially for my nine seniors. The locker room was emotional after the game. I don't think we left the arena for hour."

"The loss still hurts," he continued. "But if I were to step back, overall it was a great season. Our goals were to qualify for the tournament and win a league title. We made the postseason and ended up earning a share of the Patriot League championship."

Gibbons took over the hockey program at NQHS in October of 2009 and his Raiders struggled to a 6-12-2 record. With a season of head coaching experience under his belt, Gibbons and his staff began this year looking to mold this edition, as cliché as it sounds, into a "team." And the process worked. North Quincy was a team defined by toughness, grit and togetherness.

"These guys were awesome and I couldn't be prouder of them," the coach said. "They have set the president for future North Quincy teams. They played as a 'team' and not as individuals. We did it our way."

Playing in their final high school games were seniors Brendan Glynn, Jimmy Scribi, Dereck Graham, Michael Nelson, Vinnie Cameron, Frank Mastroilli, Connor Flynn, Joe Kowlski and James McManus.

Last night at the Gallo Ice Arena No. 5 Plymouth South (14-6-1) played No. 8 Coyle-Cassidy (10-9-2) in a Division 2 South semifinal while No. 3 Franklin (15-4-2) played No. 7 Oliver Ames (10-8-4) in the other semifinal game. The sectional final (TBA) will be held later this weekend.

Final North Quincy Stats

Brendan Glynn (18 goals, 13 assists, 31 points); Dereck Graham (9, 13, 22); Nick McGaughey (4, 2, 6); Vinnie Cameron (8, 0, 8); Michael Nelson (5, 9, 14); Robbie Cameron (1, 0, 1); Joe Kowlski (2, 4, 6); Frank Mastroilli (0, 2, 2); Jimmy Scribi (0, 3, 3); Pat Verhault (0, 2, 2); Connor Flynn (1, 0, 1); Michael Adduci (1, 4, 5); James Doherty (0, 1, 1); Tim Marks (3, 4, 7); Rudy Tryon (1, 8, 9); Nick Furey (0, 8, 8).

Quirk Chevrolet To Sponsor Quincy Youth Baseball/Softball

Quirk Chevrolet, in the spirit of community collaboration and teamwork taught through youth sports, is supporting Quincy Youth Baseball & Softball, this spring, through the Chevy Youth Baseball Program.

This sponsorship will include both monetary and equipment donations during the 2011 youth baseball season.

Over the course of the season, Quirk Chevrolet will donate equipment to the league which includes: equipment bags, baseballs, softballs, catcher's gear, batting helmets, ball buckets, umpire's equipment, coach's kits and first aid kits.

"We are looking forward to a great season with Quincy Youth Baseball & Softball that will be filled with exciting games and an enhanced experience for the teams through the equipment and cash donations," said John Fagerlund of Quirk Chevrolet. "Chevy Youth Baseball is just one example of how committed our dealership is to supporting the youth and families in the Quincy community."

Dennis Page Wins Bert Kettle Classic

On Saturday, March 5 in Rangeley, Maine, Dennis Page, of Bennington, New Hampshire, grandson of Leonora Coose, of Quincy, won the Rangeley Lakes Loppet Men's 25K Bert Kettle Classic.

Page's winning time of 1:40:11 earned him the title by a margin of 5:48.

Page skis for the Dartmouth Outing Club and he also recently won the inaugural Claremont Arrowhead Triathalon, which consisted of snow shoe up Mt. Arrowhead, a downhill ski and a 6K Nordic race.

Meet The New Dietary Guidelines

(NAPSA)—The numbers can seem scary: More than 81 million Americans have cardiovascular disease (CVD) and more than 23 million have diabetes, which is a strong risk factor for CVD. There are, however, simple steps you can take to help keep yourself and your family out of such statistics, according to the new Dietary Guidelines for Americans 2010.

"Heart disease can be prevented 80 percent of the time with a healthy lifestyle," noted Suzanne Steinbaum, D.O., cardiologist and director of women's heart health, Heart and Vascular Institute, Lenox Hill Hospital, New York. "An ounce of prevention by choosing the right types of fat, carbohydrate and protein as well as physical activity can lead to a pound of cure ... without extra pounds."

Here are tips on how:

- Eat a balanced diet of nutrient-dense foods, mainly plant based.
- Be mindful of portion sizes and total daily calories.
- Eat two servings of fish a week and choose lean meats.
- Aim to be physically active at least 30 minutes a day.
- Don't smoke and try to avoid secondhand smoke.
- Get adequate sleep and minimize stress.
- Make simple dietary swaps like water instead of soda pop, skim or fat-free dairy products in place of full-fat versions and canola oil rather than other oils or solid fat.

WELL-BEING IS about taking ownership of your health and taking small steps each day to improve it.

The government's new dietary guidelines call for saturated fat intake to be less than 10 percent of total daily calories, replacing those calories with unsaturated fat. Lowering saturated fat intake to 7 percent of total daily calories can further reduce the risk of CVD.

"The key to lowering risk of both heart disease and type 2 diabetes is to replace saturated fat with health-promoting mono- and poly-unsaturated fats," said Jim Painter, Ph.D., R.D., chair, School of Family and Consumer Sciences, Eastern Illinois University. "Such replacement decreases total and 'bad' LDL cholesterol, improves insulin responsiveness and reduces markers of inflammation. However, replacing saturated fat with refined or sugar-dense carbohydrates may actually have the opposite effect."

Fortunately, there's an everyday cooking oil that perfectly fits the dietary guidelines: canola oil. With the least saturated fat and most omega-3 fat of all cooking oils, canola oil delivers on heart health. In fact, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration authorized a qualified health claim for canola oil regarding its potential to reduce the risk of heart disease when used in place of saturated fat. The types of fat consumed are more important in influencing the risk of CVD than the total amount of fat in the diet.

To register, call 617-376-5492 or email Jennifer Deneault, RN at jdeneault@quincymc.org. Last day to register is March 18.

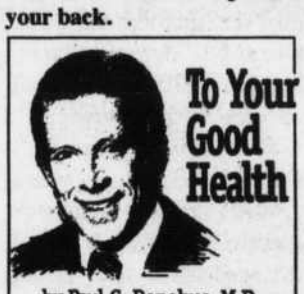
Driving And Back Pain

(NAPSA)—Humans may have been sitting since the caveman days, but apparently we're now doing something wrong that's giving a lot of us chronic lower back pain.

Like what? Driving, according to experts.

Millions of Americans experience the most common form of back pain—muscle tension—and it turns out being behind the wheel of a car puts drivers at great risk for it since they're in a static position at the very time their sense of awareness is most heightened.

"Driving requires constant tension, which can itself create the scenario for muscular pain," says Dr. Gerald Clum of the Foundation for Chiropractic Progress.



Not helping the situation are today's tipped-back seats, which cause pelvises to roll back from trying to see straight ahead at a 15- to 20-degree angle. A chiropractor can help treat your pain, but here's some tips in the meantime:

- Sit near the pedals, with your arms bent slightly in a 10 a.m.–2 p.m. position on the wheel.

DRIVING CAN be a pain in your back.

- Don't stash a wallet or other items in your back pocket when sitting.
- Break up long journeys.
- Place a small pillow in the small of your back to improve posture.

Hepatitis C Can Lead to Liver Cirrhosis

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: When he was 20, my son came down with hepatitis C. He's never said how he got it, but he was running around with a very wild bunch then. He still has the virus at age 27. Should he be treated? He never was. I wonder what's in store for him, and if he can marry and have a family. Can he? – C.S.

ANSWER: Worldwide, 175 million people are infected with the hepatitis C virus. In the U.S., 4 million carry it. Between 70 percent and 80 percent of infected people will harbor the virus for life. Of that number, around 20 percent develop liver cirrhosis in 20 years, and a smaller number are stricken with liver cancer. Hepatitis C is the most common reason for a liver transplant.

People catch the virus in a number of ways. Sharing needles to inject drugs is one way. Health-care workers can get it from an accidental stick with a needle used on an infected person. Before 1992, blood transfusion was a major source of infection. Tattooing or body piercing by unlicensed practitioners or those who do not adhere to sterile techniques is another route of transmission. Sex with multiple partners is a possible way of contracting the illness. Sex with a single partner who has the virus is not a common route of passage. Your son can marry and possibly but not likely infect his wife, and will not infect his children.

This young man has to establish himself with a doctor. Lab tests will show if his liver is suffering any damage, and blood tests give a reliable estimate of how great a number of viruses is circulating in his blood. Treatment will hinge on that information. A liver biopsy might be necessary. Some doctors feel all who show evidence of current infection ought to undergo treatment.

He should completely abstain from alcohol. Drinking puts his liver in further jeopardy.

The booklet on hepatitis A, B and C explains these common infections in detail. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue – No. 503W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Can. with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: How does someone with AIDS die? How long does one live after being diagnosed with AIDS? Can a person with AIDS cook for his or her family without fear of giving the virus to loved ones? – D.R.

ANSWER: AIDS kills in a number of ways. It so weakens the immune system that an infection brings death. Or the weakened immune system allows the growth of a cancer that proves fatal. AIDS also can interfere with the production of proteins and other body materials needed for life, and the person wastes away.

The incredible progress made in the treatment of AIDS allows most infected people to live 30 to 40 years after the diagnosis is made, very close to a normal life span. This is possible in countries where people have ready access to the many AIDS medicines.

People with AIDS can cook for their family without any fear of transmitting the virus.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE DENTAL FACELIFT

The "dental facelift" is a non-surgical approach to improving the contours and dimensions of the face, with the comprehensive and coordinated application of veneers on tooth surfaces. As a result of this cosmetic procedure, patients not only emerge with more youthful, whiter smiles, they have added volume to their faces that helps fill in sunken cheeks and shrunken lips and jaws. To understand how this can be accomplished, it is important to look at the teeth as playing a major role in the framework of the face. As we age, teeth wear down and the jaw recedes, which leads to decreasing facial height and a slackened appearance. By building up tooth surfaces with veneers, the face can be subtly reshaped.

Veneers are ideal for teeth that are too small, too big, or have uneven surfaces. Feel free to contact us with any questions about veneers, or to schedule a consultation. We believe it is our responsibility to share our acquired knowledge and understanding of oral health with each and every patient, one on one. All of our patients are individuals, and as such will achieve our goal in different ways and at different paces. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule your next dental checkup. Let us keep that winning smile. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. A dental facelift restores the cusp tips of the teeth to rebuild the bite, which increases facial height and improves chewing ability.

FALLING SHORT OF EXPECTATIONS

Every year, an estimated 60,000 Americans choose to undergo back surgery for the treatment of pain. According to a new study, many back-surgery patients find that the procedure actually leaves them in worse shape than before surgery. To study back surgery's effects, researchers reviewed the records of 1,450 workers who were diagnosed with disc degeneration, disc herniation, and radiculopathy (nerve compression in the spine that leads to numbness and weakness). Half the people studied underwent spinal-fusion surgery while the other half had no surgery. After two years, 26% of the back-surgery patients returned to work compared with 67% of the non-surgery patients. Moreover, researchers noted a 41% increase in the use of painkillers (opiates, in particular) among the back-surgery patients.

Chiropractic has an excellent record with disc sufferers, often saving them from the bleak prospect of surgery. Chiropractic care is also often effective at helping those who already have gone through surgery. As a patient of the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, you will be fully educated as to how we can help. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we strive to bring you back to optimal health and function as quickly and effectively as possible through the use of non-surgical, drug-free chiropractic care. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Back-pain sufferers are encouraged to explore non-invasive, conservative forms of treatment such as chiropractic before opting for surgery, which should be viewed only as a last resort.

Temple Beth El, B'Nai Shalom To Hold Purim Celebrations

Purim is the holiday that celebrates how the Jews of ancient Persia were saved from extermination at the hands of Haman, an evil advisor to the King.

Purim's heroine is Queen Esther, who persuaded the king to save the Jews and punish Haman instead. The story appears in the Book of Esther or "the megillah."

Purim customs and practices include dressing up in costumes, making noise with graggers to drown out Haman's name during the megillah reading, and eating Hamantaschen, a triangle shaped cookie.

This year, Temple Beth El of Quincy and Temple B'Nai Shalom of Braintree will hold joint celebrations.

On March 19 at 6:30 p.m., Cantor Seth Grossman will lead the megillah reading at Temple B'Nai Shalom, 41 Storrs Ave., Braintree.

On March 20 at 10 a.m., a musical celebration led by Rabbi Navah Levine, will be held at Temple Beth El, 1001 Hancock St., Quincy.

For more information, contact Temple Beth El at 617-479-4309 or visit www.templebethelquincy.org.

The programs are free of charge and refreshments will be served.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Much has been written about aging... Some humorous; some serious. We came across a little gem we thought you might enjoy as much as we did. It is titled, "IT'S LATER THAN YOU THINK."

"Everything is father than it used to be. It's twice as far to the station for instance, and they have added a hill, I've noticed. Seems to me they are making staircases steeper than they used to make them in the good old days. And have you noticed the small print they are using? Newspapers are getting farther and farther away when I hold them, and I have to squint to make out the news. No sense in asking to have them read aloud. Everyone speaks in such a low voice a person can hardly hear them.

The barber doesn't hold a mirror behind me any more so that I can see the back of my head. The material in my suits is always too skimpy around the waist and in the seat. And shoe laces are so short they are all but impossible to reach.

Even people are changing. They are so much older than I am. I ran into an old classmate the other night, and he had aged so he didn't recognize me. I got to thinking about the poor old fellow while I was shaving this morning. While doing so, I glanced at my own reflection in the mirror. Confound it! They don't have the same kind of glass in mirrors any more! ...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Consider moving beyond the usual methods to find a more creative means of handling a difficult on-the-job situation. Avoid confrontation and, instead, aim for cooperation.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Seasonal change creates a new look for the outdoors. It also inspires Taureans to redo their own environments, and this is a good week to start redoing both your home and workplace. Enjoy.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A misunderstanding needs to be straightened out so the wrong impression isn't allowed to stand. If necessary, offer to support the use of a third party to act as an impartial arbitrator.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A career change offering what you want in money and responsibilities could involve moving to a new location. Discuss this with family members before making a decision.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Feeling miffed over how you believe you were treated is understandable. But before you decide to "set things straight," make sure the whole thing wasn't just a misinterpretation of the facts.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Showing you care makes it easier to build trust and gain an advantage in handling a delicate situation. What you learn from this experience also will help you understand yourself better.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Planning for the future is fine, especially if you include the roles that family members may be asked to play. Don't be surprised if some hidden emotions are revealed in the process.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Making choices highlights much of the week, and you have a head start here, thanks to your ability to grasp the facts of a situation and interpret them in a clear-cut manner.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Carrying a torch can be a two-way situation: It can either keep you tied to the past or help light your way to the future. The choice, as always, has to be yours.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your watchwords this week are: "Focus." "Focus." "Focus." Don't let yourself be distracted from what you set out to do. There'll be time later to look over other possibilities.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A workplace opportunity might require changes you're not keen on making. Discuss the plusses and minuses with someone familiar with the situation before you make a decision.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Love and romance are strong in your aspect this week. If you've already met the right person, expect your relationship to grow. And if you're still looking, odds are you'll soon be finding it.

BORN THIS WEEK: You approach life in a wise and measured manner, which gives you an edge in many areas.

OBITUARIES

Paul E. Kelleher Sr., 90
Retired U.S. Postal Service Worker; Veteran

A funeral Mass for Paul E. Kelleher Sr., 90, of Quincy, a retired U.S. Postal Service employee and Navy veteran of World War II, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Kelleher died Sunday.

He served in the U.S. Navy during WWII and was a member of the Quincy Morrisette Post 294.

Mr. Kelleher worked for the U.S. Postal Service in the Back Bay for 30 years, retiring in 1975. Before beginning his career at the Post Office, Paul began what would be a 50 year relationship with Schlossberg-Stanetsky Memorial Chapels in Canton. He served as a part time employee during his time at the Postal Service and later joined the staff full time.

Beloved husband of 65 years to Viola (O'Donnell) Kelleher of Quincy. Devoted father of Marie Collyer and her husband Walter of FL, Paula Moore-Kelleher of Quincy, Nancy Gavin and her husband Peter of Quincy, Richard Kelleher and his wife Mary of Holliston and Paul Kelleher Jr. and his wife Tracy of Somerset.

Cherished Pa of 10 grandchildren and 2 great-grandchildren. Loving brother of the late Marie McCartney, Francis Kelleher and Albert Kelleher. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Mr. Kelleher's family describes him as a dedicated family man. He will be sadly missed by all who had the pleasure of knowing him.

Visiting hours were Wednesday from 4 to 8 p.m. in the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Burial will be in New Calvary Cemetery, Boston.

Della Fontana, 90
Former School Crossing Guard

A funeral Mass for Della May Anna (DeBeaumont) Fontana, 90, of Braintree, formerly of Quincy, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 9 a.m. in The Church of Saint Clare, Braintree.

Visiting hours were held Wednesday from 4-8 p.m. at the Mortimer N. Peck – Russell Peck Funeral Home, Braintree.

Mrs. Fontana died March 4 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

Born in Boston, she was raised in Quincy and graduated from North Quincy High School. She resided in Braintree for 70 years and during the 1950s she was one of the first school crossing guards under a program initiated by Police Officer Wynot.

Wife of the late Leopold "Leo" M. Fontana, who was the original owner of Leo & Walt's Sunoco Station on Quincy Avenue; mother of Leopold "Leo" M. Fontana, Jr., and his significant other Karen of Rockland, George Fontana of FL and Mary E. Fontana and her husband Edward Amirault of Braintree; grandmother of Richard Fontana and his wife Kara of Marshfield, James Gilberto and his wife Maureen of North Weymouth, David Gilberto and his wife Lisa of North Weymouth and Holly Fontana of Rockland; sister of the late George Walter DeBeaumont.

Interment will be at a later date in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Dr., Braintree, MA 02184.

Noria W. Milner, 90
Former Secretary For Boston Trust Bank

A funeral service for Noria W. (Meserve) Milner, 90, of Braintree, formerly of Quincy, will be conducted today (Thursday) at 12 p.m. in the Blanchard Funeral Chapel, Whitman.

Visiting hours were held Wednesday from 3-7 p.m. at the Blanchard Funeral Chapel.

Raised and educated in Whitman, she was a Quincy resident for 20 years, before moving to Braintree 35 years ago. She worked as a secretary for the Boston Trust Bank in Boston until her retirement.

Wife of the late Oscar Milner; mother of Nan Milner of Braintree and the late Lt. David Milner; sister of Marilyn Rogers and her husband Hank of Plymouth; grandmother of Peter Woodland and her late great-granddaughter Kylee Woodland; daughter of the late Everett L. and Marion E. (Waite) Meserve.

She is also survived by several nieces and nephews.

Interment will be in Northville Cemetery, East Bridgewater.

Diane Kadanoff, 73
Former Director Of Norwell Public Library

Funeral services for Diane (Gordon) Kadanoff, 73, of Quincy, were conducted Monday at Stanetsky Memorial Chapel, Brookline.

Mrs. Kadanoff died March 5.

Born in Chelsea, she lived in Quincy. She was a graduate of Girls Latin High School, Simmons College and University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana. She was an advocate for free speech who abhorred censorship in any form.

Mrs. Kadanoff served as Director of the Norwell Public Library for over 20 years and was active in the leadership of the American Library Association, was an active feminist, poker player and member of OLE.

Mother of Marcia Kadanoff of CA, Felice Kadanoff of FL and Betsy Kadanoff of Winthrop; grandmother of Sasha Mironov of Cambridge; mother in-law of Rich Mironov and Jon Grossman; sister of Myrna Gordon Goldberg of NY; aunt of Arielle Goldberg of NY; niece to Rae and Jordan Silin of Newton and Cookie Stark of NY.

Memorial donations may be made to LAMDA Legal at www.lamdalegal.org or to the American Diabetes Association at www.diabetes.org.

Dora B. Pompeo, 84

A funeral Mass for Dora B. Pompeo, 84, of Quincy, was celebrated Tuesday in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Ms. Pompeo died March 5 at the Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center in Quincy.

Born, raised and educated in Quincy, she was both a lifelong resident of Quincy and parishioner at St. John the Baptist Church in Quincy. She loved children and was the focal point of her sisters' lives. She will be profoundly missed by her sisters and will leave an irreplaceable vacancy in their hearts.

Daughter of the late Pasquale and Carmela (Montopoli) Pompeo; sister of Rosina A. "Rose" Pompeo, Antonietta T. "Anne" Pompeo and her sister in-law Lillian (Clancy) Pompeo, all of Quincy, and the late Caravita "Katy" Ricci and her late husband Riccardo, Virginia M. Pompeo, Felice Pompeo, Nicola Pompeo and his late wife Rose (Nardo) Pompeo and Raffaele Pompeo and his late wife Clara (Pallucio) Pompeo.

She is also survived by many nieces and nephews, grandnieces and grandnephews and great grandnieces and great grandnephews.

Interment was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Saint John the Baptist Church, c/o 21 Gay St., Quincy, MA 02169.

broke into the van and stole the pump. Officer Eddy located the owner of the van by knocking on the door.

The victim said he left the doors unlocked and was missing a utility pump. He described the pump and identified the one the Officers had as his. He stated that he did not think anything else was missing. While at the station, Officer Eddy made contact with the owner of the birth control pills via telephone. She stated that her car was broken into sometime around 10:30 p.m. on Feb. 18th. She noticed that her driver's door was open and her birth control pills were missing. She did not immediately report the break. The owners of the other property were not located. Suspect #2 stated that the IPOD belonged to his sister, but the name on the IPOD was different than the name that the suspect provided of his sister. Nice Work!

In this case, leaving vehicles unlocked creates opportunity for thieves to access your vehicle. In a recent case where there was actual forced entry into vehicles, the attraction was a leather briefcase sitting on the seat. As always, lock your car door and remove valuables in plain sight.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer 3 consecutive days, and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. J.C. 3/10

Solomon confessed "I've never done this before... I'm glad that they're using Quincy high school, where my daughter and son went to school. This will be fun!"

Paul Pound, who grew up in Squantum was also new to film extra-work. "I never did this before. I'm unemployed, I have all day, every day, I'm a large man and I figured I'd take up a lot of space on the screen."

Nancy Casinelli and her brother Robert Swanson both felt nostalgic about getting into the film. "I saw this on the front page of The Sun and I called my brother and told him 'Hey, we're both Quincy residents and we both went to Quincy High, this would be a nice thing to be part of."

Bill McMahon said that he, too, saw an article in The Sun and with his tiny bit of experience decided to give it a shot. "I did a thing on "Cheers" once, sitting at the bar and having a fake drink – we were supposed to greet Norm when he entered the bar, but that's about it for my screen experience."

The comedy is set to begin filming in late March and will star Kevin James, Salma Hayek and Henry 'The Fonz' Winkler and will be directed by Frank Coraci, who directed "The Wedding Singer" and "The Water Boy."

Mark Carey, commissioner of the Quincy Film Bureau, has been working extensively with Boston Casting and with the Mayor's Office to make this experience a success for Quincy.

Anticipating perhaps more than a thousand people, the casting call was opened up to residents of other cities a few days earlier. Carey said, "Today we have separate lines for Quincy residents, non-Quincy residents and a line for actors' union members.

"This film will require about 8,000 extras; there are crowd scenes, so we will probably employ every Quincy resident who wants to be in the film. Much of the movie will be shot in Quincy—this is a big, big movie."

Barbara Coleman, who happens to live adjacent to the casting-call venue said, "I'm a Kevin James fan, I watch King of Queens every day since God knows when—I love him—I'm very much hoping to be a Quincy extra, I don't care what I do. You want me to sweep the floor, I'll do that."

Johnny Igoe, retired from GE, is enjoying his senior years. With a wink and a smile he said, "I love acting, it's in my blood, I have a natural talent. I always wanted to do it, but I think it was wishful thinking, but here it is a reality!"

Eighteen-year-old Nicole Bannister of Houghs Neck and her friend Nikki Ingram both just graduated from North Quincy High. Bannister said, "I thought this seemed like a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity, we wanted to have some fun, see what happens, this is something different."

Merrymount's Patti Lencki, who thought this sounded like a fun thing to do, was previously in an independent film in which she got to speak three words, words which she still remembers!

Having appeared as an extra in the movie "A Civil Action" which filmed partly in Quincy, Karen Glass of Germantown was in the Quincy-resident line at the casting call. "I love movie stars, I collect their pictures, Kevin James is a very funny guy."

Lorraine Miner, a 1975 Quincy High Graduate from Adams Shore was lured to the casting call by her love for Kevin James. "I keep watching him in "Paul Blart: Mall Cop" –I watch it over and over...it was filmed here at South Shore Plaza, you know."

Carey said he feels that the movie's filming here will benefit the city in many ways and is doing whatever he can to assist the movie's production team, such as finding locations for shoots, and even in locating living space for cast and crew.

"I've met with the assistant director of the film, and the location team, who are the first ones on the scene anyway. This is a grand experiment, we didn't know what it was going to bring a few years ago when trying this out.

"We are the first city-film office in the state – every movie that has come here in the last three years has contacted this city, whether we have a location for them or not."

Carey emphasized his wish that the film tax-credit in the state of Massachusetts stay alive because the tangible results of all the money that will have been spent in this city after the filming has completed here will be an absolute benefit to this economy.

'Kids Have Fun And Enjoy It'

Broad Meadows Students Learn Community Service Can Make A Difference

By JOE REARDON

A school project assigned to the 102 seventh graders at the Broad Meadows Middle School opened the eyes of students to making a difference by performing community service in the city.

Started by since-retired teacher Donna Willoughby, the community service project has remained alive at Broad Meadows.

"She felt that community service was something everyone should get a taste of," said seventh-grade teacher Maureen Kazolias. "The kids had fun and enjoyed it."

The community service projects the kids picked out were diverse and numerous. Among the projeets were raking leaves, delivering sweets to the city's fire stations, helping girl scout troops put together food baskets, working as library assistants at the Snug Harbor School, assisting teachers with "chores" at the Atherton Hough School, shoveling locations in Merrymount, Germantown, Houghs Neck, Wollaston and Quincy Point, doing beach cleanups at Wollaston, Merrymount, Baker and Perry, wrapping books at Borders to raise money for the humane society, filing books and helping younger kids to find books and prepare crafts at the Adams Shore Library.

Majority Applaud Mayor's Vision To Solve Overdue Projects In Tough Economy

Councillors Debate $25 Million Capital Improvement Plan

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City councillors may have suffered some sticker shock at the $25 million price tag for Mayor Thomas Koch's Capital Improvement Plan and may still reject the bond, but the majority said Monday at a joint committee meeting that they applauded the mayor's vision in proposing long overdue projects despite today's tough economy.

Councillor Joseph Finn opened the joint meeting of the Public Works and Finance Committees Monday for the initial review of Koch's proposal by noting this is the first attempt to address the city's major capital needs in ten years.

However, Finn and other councillors described their concerns about the funding in this tough economy. Finn said that he would schedule a number of additional meetings on the proposal.

At Monday's meeting, Councillors focused on drainage, flooding and seawall problems and questioned the city's consultant

Edgewater Drive Seawall Repair Meeting March 23

Together with the Mayor's office, Ward 1 Councilor Margaret Laforest will hold a neighborhood meeting Wednesday, March 23 at 7 p.m. at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church Lower Hall, 300 Manet Ave., Quincy, regarding the proposed Edgewater Drive Seawall Assessment and Repair that's included in the Capital Improvement Plan currently being reviewed for approval by the Quincy City Council.

The deterioration of the Edgewater seawall has been evident for years and emergency repairs were completed on a small section in 2010. Mayor Koch has identified Edgewater Drive as a priority in the proposed Capital Improvement Plan.

This project has been deemed urgent and has an estimated cost of $4.5 million. Project Description: The Edgewater Drive Seawall and tide gate system (two gates – one across from 163 Edgewater and the other at the end of Turner Street) have eroded over time and

D.A. Morrissey Announces Prom, Grad Safety Grants

To help keep students safe during this year's prom and graduation season, the Office of Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey will help sponsor safe, responsible, and alcohol-free post-prom and post-graduation activities and events administered by local school systems, parent groups and community organizations.

As part of his "Project Prom Sense" and "Operation Graduation" programs, D.A. Morrissey will provide up to $250 in grant assistance to local communities to support qualifying safe, post-prom and post-graduation activities.

"The high-school parents and community organizations that coordinate these types of events should be commended for taking such a practical approach to prom and graduation safety," stated D.A. Morrissey. "They deserve our support."

Grant funds will be used to supplement revenues raised from private and other sources. For more information, contact the District Attorney's Juvenile Unit at (781) 830-4800 x285.

After Beaching In Squantum, Young Harp Seal Dies

By JOE REARDON

Marine biologists are still trying to find out why a young, female harp seal died after beaching itself in Squantum and then headed back into the waters of Quincy Bay last Tuesday evening. The carcass was discovered on Saturday morning on the Quincy Bay side of Squantum.

"Mortality is pretty high among seals, particularly young seals," said Tony LaCasse of the New England Aquarium.

Cardinal Not In Attendance, Despite Invitation

Star Of Sea Friends Hold Fourth Town Meeting

The Friends of Star of the Sea held their fourth "town meeting" Sunday at Squantum Elementary School. It was the fourth official meeting of the Friends of Star of the Sea since 2004, when the group was established.

The meeting was held in response to the Feb. 17 press release from the Boston Chancery, announcing Cardinal Sean O'Malley's intention to conduct a web-based survey consultation of the Catholic faithful that were parishioners at Star of the Sea and six other closed churches.

The purpose of the consultation (as announced by the Chancery) is to assist the Cardinal in determining whether or not a Decree of Relegation to Profane Use should be issued on the church. If a decree is issued, the parish property might be placed on the real estate market.

AN EMPTY CHAIR awaits a representative from the Archdiocese of Boston.

A CROWD OF 150 gathered at the 4th Town Meeting of the Friends of Star of the Sea this past Sunday at Squantum Elementary School.

"We were hopeful that the Cardinal would come to hear our concerns in person, rather than relying solely on an Internet survey," said Sean Glennon, co-chairperson of the Friends of Star of the Sea. "The term 'consultation' by definition, means a 'discussion' or 'meeting'. I'm very disappointed that he did not attend, or at least send a representative."

A crowd of 150 came out to express their objection to the possible sale of their church, and vowed to keep up the fight in the event that a Decree of Relegation is issued against Star of the Sea church.

Friends Co-Chairperson Maureen Mazrimas said, "from a spiritual, social and financial standpoint, a decision to sell Star of the Sea is both short sighted and counter-intuitive. At a time when the Archdiocese is rolling out its Catholics Come Home initiative, it's important that those returning are truly coming 'home' and not moving in with the neighbors."

If a Decree of Relegation is issued, the Friends say they are ready to appeal. In fact, they have already retained the same Canonical Advocate as was used by eight parishioner groups in the Diocese of Allentown, PA and three parishioner groups in the Diocese of Springfield, MA – all of which were successful in their appeals. As a result, those churches will be reopened as worship spaces.

The Friends are also exploring the possibility of filing a case through the Massachusetts Trial Court if Cardinal O'Malley attempts to sell their church.

"We have a copy of an affidavit filed by Bishop William Skylstad of the Diocese of Spokane, which clearly states, under Canon Law, that bishops do not own parishes, and that parish assets cannot be used to settle debts of a diocese," said Glennon. "Furthermore, the land upon which Star of the Sea sits was bought and paid for by former parishioners of Star of the Sea." The Friends argue that the intent of these donors should be respected and honored by the Chancellor of the Archdiocese.

The Friends expect the Cardinal to issue a decision regarding Star of the Sea within the next month. They have also asked the Cardinal to provide for the celebration of Mass on Easter Sunday, which falls on April 24 this year. If the Cardinal denies their request, it will be the first time in 87 years that a Catholic Mass will not be celebrated in Squantum on Easter Sunday.

In the event of a denial, the Friends say they will hold their own Catholic Eucharistic celebration, using hosts consecrated by sympathetic priests in good standing in the Archdiocese. The Friends held a similar liturgy this past Christmas Eve, after being denied a priest.

The Friends encourage all residents in the neighborhoods of Squantum and Marina Bay to participate in the Cardinal's consultation survey at 2011Consultation.org, prior to the March 18 deadline. More information about the Friends may be found at marystaroftheseа.org.

DIAMOND DELICACY

There is little question that diamond jewelry is nearly always positioned at the top of a woman's list of desirable pieces for her jewelry wardrobe. Among the most popular items in this esteemed category are diamond earrings, both because they are so eminently wearable and because they attract so much attention. After all, people cannot help but look at dazzling sparklers that are so closely aligned with the eyes of the wearer. This helps explain the enormous popularity of diamond chandelier earrings in recent years. Most recently, this trend has shifted to the less-weighty, more refined look of simple diamond drops. The understated look of sparkly diamonds dangling from the ears provides just the right touch of flash.

Diamond earrings mean a lot to a woman. They are more than just a piece of jewelry. So, if you are considering buying a pair, make certain that the type of earrings you buy are as precious as the exquisite woman who will be wearing them. These dazzling pieces are displayed in our showcases at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. Our professional and knowledgeable staff will work with you to make sure you have the best buying experience possible. If you have any questions about the jewelry we offer please feel free to contact us at 617-773-3636.

Re-Routing A Must For Downtown Revitalization

Street-Works' Town Brook Plan Draws Mixed Reviews

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Nearly 100 persons filled the Community Room at Thomas Crane Library last Wednesday for a public review of Street-Works' proposal for improving and re-routing Town Brook, the first step in the $1.3 billion revitalization of Quincy Center.

Richard Heapes, Partner and Co-Founder of Street-Works, the New York developer overseeing the Quincy Center project, outlined his firm's $14.9 million Town Brook improvement plan after describing the current conditions of the underground Town Brook as pretty much muck and mire.

"There's a world of trouble going on in that brook that's got to be fixed before downtown (project begins) or you'll never get a redevelopment permit," said Heapes who then matched his words with slides showing sewerage floating through the underground waterway, building foundations opening into the brook, illegal piping and drifting trash.

"Environmentally, it's not a very pretty place," said Heapes.

Street-Works' environmental plan includes daylighting portions of the brook, a small pond and park at the site of the current Quincy American Legion Post 95; re-routing the brook parallel to the Concourse, and over four and one half acres of green space, including 400 mature trees, through-out Quincy Center.

Heapes planned to file Street-Works' Town River proposal with the state's office of Energy and Environmental Affairs on March 15 for vetting under MEPA (Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act).

That will be the first of nine local, state and federal government boards and agencies, such as Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) and the Army Corps of Engineers which must review and approve Street-Works plan or an alternative.

Heapes said the process will take 12 to 15 months and construction could begin in April 2012 if the agencies move swiftly and if there are no challenges along the way.

That appears unlikely as observers at last week's meeting described their concerns with Street-Works plan, ranging from environmental issues to flooding concerns.

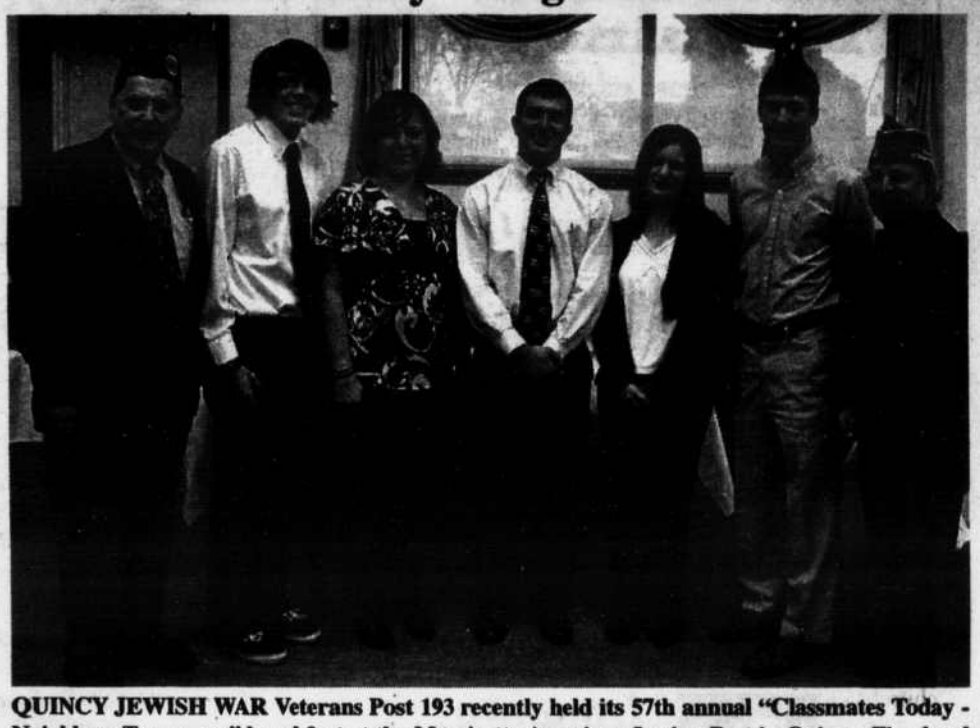
St. Mary's Parish Convent Development Topic March 24



Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci will host a community meeting Thursday, March 24 at 7 p.m. in St. Mary's Church Hall, 115 Crescent St., to discuss the parish's desire to develop their property.

St. Mary's Parish wants to sell the existing convent building to a developer for development. The parish is seeking input from residents.

While no specific project will be discussed, because none has been proposed, Palmucci said St. Mary's Parish would like feedback from area residents as to what type of project they would be comfortable with in that location.

All interested residents are invited and encouraged to attend.

'Classmates Today - Neighbors Tomorrow'

QUINCY JEWISH WAR Veterans Post 193 recently held its 57th annual "Classmates Today - Neighbors Tomorrow" breakfast at the Morrisette American Legion Post in Quincy. Five local students were honored by the JWV Post for exemplifying brotherhood in their daily activities. Boston Archdiocese Genealogy Records Seminar

The Thomas Crane Public Library is hosting a free series of programs on genealogy and family history at the main library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center, during March.

Sessions are held Monday nights at 7 p.m. No registration is required.

On March 21, attendees will learn about the resources in the Archdiocesan Archives that are most useful to genealogists, and regulations governing their access and use.

Archivist Robert Johnson-Lally will describe what researchers are most likely to find and what they probably will not find and make the collection finding aid available for attendees to consult. There will be time for questions and answers.

Johnson-Lally has been the Archivist and Records Manager of the Archdiocese of Boston since 1994. He is a member of the New England Archivists, the Society of American Archivists, the Association of Catholic Diocesan Archivists and the American Catholic Historical Association.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On March 24, 1765, Parliament passes the Quartering Act, which required the colonies to house British soldiers in barracks provided by the colonies, local inns, livery stables, ale houses, uninhabited houses, outhouses or barns. Forcing colonists from their own homes was not the intent of the law.

• On March 21, 1871, journalist Henry Morton Stanley begins his famous search through Africa for missing British explorer Dr. David Livingstone. When Stanley found him on Oct. 27, he stepped forward and stretched out his hand: "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?"

• On March 25, 1911, flames engulf the Triangle Shirtwaist Company factory in New York City, killing 145 workers. Only one elevator was operational in the 10-story building. There were two stairways down to the street, but one was locked from the outside. The inside fire hose was rotted and its valve was rusted shut.

• On March 26, 1941, Italy attacks the British fleet at Suda Bay, Crete, using manned torpedoes to sink a British cruiser. Known as the "Chariot," the manned torpedo was ridden by "pilots" to "drive" them to their targets in the harbor.

• On March 23, 1962, Pakistan's governor, Ayub Khan, gives first lady Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy a horse she nicknames "Black Jack." Jackie chose "Black Jack" to serve as the ceremonial riderless horse during Pres. Kennedy's funeral.

• On March 27, 1973, the actor Marlon Brando declines the Academy Award for Best Actor for his performance in "The Godfather" as a protest against Hollywood's portrayal of Native Americans in film. The first performer to turn down a Best Actor Oscar was George C. Scott, who declined to accept his award for "Patton" in 1971.

• On March 22, 1983, the Pentagon awards a production contract worth more than $1 billion to AM General Corporation to develop 55,000 High Mobility Multipurpose Wheeled Vehicles (HMMWV). Nicknamed the Humvee, the rugged vehicle was designed to transport troops and cargo. In 1992, a civilian version of the Humvee, known as the Hummer, went on sale.

Mayoral Race 2011: Koch And ???

Mayor Tom Koch will officially announce this spring that he's running for a third term.

No surprise there.

The bigger question: will he have an opponent this fall?

KOCH

Koch, who unseated former Mayor William Phelan in 2007 and won re-election two years ago in a rare political rematch, will kick off his re-election bid in April or May, a source close to the mayor says.

As far as an opponent, two names generally surface:

Phelan and School Committee Vice Chairwoman Anne Mahoney.

PHELAN

MAHONEY

If this is Vegas, the odds appear long that Phelan would mount another challenge to Koch – this year anyway. Mahoney – on the other hand – could be an even-money wager.

First Phelan.

There's one political – albeit subtle – sign suggesting the three-term former mayor will someday seek City Hall's third floor office again. Phelan's official mayoral portrait is not hanging with the city's other former chief executives along the corridor of the third floor of City Hall. He's been asked by Koch to submit a photo but apparently has declined. Some perceive that as a signal he's not done with City Hall yet.

In any event, Phelan's next stop is not 1305 Hancock Street – it's Holbrook.

Selectmen there recently hired Phelan as the interim town administrator. His three-month term begins March 21. After that stint is over, Phelan could then apply for the permanent position.

If he's offered and takes the permanent job, Phelan obviously would sit the 2011 mayoral election out.

But if he declines the permanent town administrator job, that would significantly fan any political speculation flames. And, coincidentally, it would be about the same time of year that he tossed his hat in the mayoral ring last time around – June to be exact.

As for Mahoney, she's been seen around town at various functions. Earlier this year she said she's keeping her options open about any potential campaigns in the fall.

Mahoney was re-elected to a second four-year school committee term in 2009. She would not have to risk her school seat to run for mayor – which is what Phelan – then in his first term on the School Committee – did when he unseated Sheets 10 years ago.

And she wouldn't be risking her school seat, either, if she opted to run for the open councillor at-large seat being vacated by John Keenan. Keenan was elected state senator last fall and continues to serve on the council but he will not run for another term on the City Council.

Mahoney has good name recognition in Quincy and has been a proven vote getter in the School Committee races topping the field in 2005 and 2009. The races for councillor at-large and School Committee are similar in that there are three seats up for grabs. The three highest vote getters win seats.

A councillor at-large seat would give Mahoney a higher political profile than the school committee in terms of overall city government. The council is also perceived as a political springboard for higher office – notably mayor. (Disclaimer: the last two mayors did not come out of the council. Phelan was on the school committee when he defeated James Sheets in 2001. Koch stepped down as executive director of the Park, Cemetery and Forestry Department to challenge Phelan in 2007.)

If there is a mayoral contender on the horizon, he or she should be cognizant that mayoral campaigns are getting more expensive to wage.

Consider the 2009 mayoral campaign. Together, Koch and Phelan raised a combined $488,254. Koch raised the most – $325,805 while Phelan raised $162,449. The two candidates spent $508,831 with Koch outspending Phelan by a two-to-one margin: $346,984 to $161,847.

Koch's ability to raise cash didn't diminish in 2010 – an "off year" in the city election cycle.

The mayor raised $177,000 during a 12-month period, January to December last year. About $75,000 went to retiring debt from the 2009 campaign; another $50,000 was given in charitable contributions. Koch's balance was about $25,000 at year-end.

According to Mahoney's last campaign finance report filed in January, she raised $10,685 during 2010. She spent $6,720 and had a balance of $5,782 as of Dec. 31.

If Koch is unopposed, he'd become the fifth Quincy mayor to win re-election uncontested on the ballot. The others: Tom Burgin in 1940, Francis McCauley in 1983; James Sheets (1991, 1993 and 1997) and Phelan in 2005.

THE RACE for the open Ward 5 council seat has attracted another candidate.

John J. Rodophele, Sr., 62 Grenwold Rd., Quincy, a retired mechanical designer and engineer, says he will be a candidate for the seat being vacated by Doug Gutro who is running for councillor at-large.

RODOPHELE

"I'm definitely going to run. I'm in the process of getting my campaign committee organized. I'm looking forward to going door-to-door and meeting the residents in Ward 5," Rodophele says.

Rodophele, a lifelong Quincy resident, is a 1959 graduate of Quincy High School. He served eight years in the Massachusetts National Guard and worked for Stone and Webster Engineering for 35 years before retiring.

A real estate agent, he is an active member of the Adams National Historical Neighborhood Association and a member of the Torre Dei Passeri Social Club.

He and his wife, Patricia Oliverio Rodophele, have two children: Lisa Rodophele and John L. Rodophele, Jr.

A FUNDRAISER in memory of Stephen O'Donnell, former Quincy Public Works commissioner, will be held Friday, March 25 at 6 p.m. at the Quincy Lodge of Elks, Quarry St., West Quincy.

O'DONNELL

The event will celebrate the life of Mr. O'Donnell – also known as "Steph" – who passed away last fall.

The fundraising committee made up of friends and family members of Steph's suggest a donation of $25 at the door. There will be musical entertainment provided by D.J. Mark McGillicuddy, a silent auction, and 50-50 raffle.

To purchase tickets, donate an auction item or for more information, contact Stella Mahoney at 617-763-4809 or Chris Bell at 339-237-8075.

QUINCY'S SAM MELE, former Red Sox standout and longtime major league baseball scout, thinks the Red Sox have all the right ingredients – solid pitching, strong hitting and sound defense – to win the World Series this fall.

MELE

"If they don't win it all, there's something screwy," Mele says. He also thinks the Sox will face the Philadelphia Phillies in the Fall Classic.

"I think the Phillies have the pitching and pretty good hitting to win the National League," he predicts.

Mele, who managed the Minnesota Twins to the American League Pennant in 1965, says he's excited by the Red Sox off-season acquisitions, notably outfielder Carl Crawford who joins the team after playing for Tampa Bay.

"Can you imagine Carl Crawford and Jacoby Ellsbury on the bases together? They'll be first and third all the time. They can steal any base at any time. And they're both pretty good outfielders, too."

GAS TIP of the week from AAA Southern New England: Fuel is part of the total cost of vehicle ownership, so fuel conservation should be an important factor when choosing a new vehicle. Consider whether the car, truck or sport utility vehicle under consideration is bigger and heavier than necessary. Compare the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) fuel economy ratings on the vehicles you're considering.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1911 postcard showing the Fore River Bridge erected in 1902 by the Fore River Ship and Engine Company. The bridge was built in less than one year when it became necessary to allow the first U.S. Navy heavy cruiser built by the company to pass out of the shipyard. The opening on the previous wooden bridge was too narrow for the ship to pass through. The 100-foot center truss section of this bridge was built upstream in the shipyard on barges and floated to its resting place on a high tide. It had one trolley track down the middle of two travel lanes, one in each direction. The bridge opened for ships when the center section was rotated on its axis. This bridge lasted until 1936 when a new much wider four-lane bascule bridge was built alongside it. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Beacon Hill Report - An Update From Sen. John Keenan

By State Senator
JOHN F. KEENAN

It's been a bit of a whirlwind since I was sworn in 8 weeks ago as your new state senator.

After taking the oath of office on Jan. 5th, I began filing legislation, settling into a temporary office, reviewing the more than 5,000 pieces of legislation filed by other legislators, and begun work relating to my committee assignments. I have also responded to dozens of constituent requests, and met with more than 100 groups and advocates trying to learn about all the disparate issues and concerns facing the residents and businesses of the Norfolk and Plymouth Senate district, and the entire Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

I have filed a number of bills for the upcoming legislative session. Perhaps most important, is the home-rule petition allowing the $1.3 billion Quincy Center redevelopment project. This project will not only revitalize downtown Quincy, but the entire region, creating 5,700 new jobs in the city, 1 million square feet of new office space, and 570,000 square feet of new shopping and dining space. If successful, this project will also create a new blueprint other cities and towns can follow to work hand-in-hand with private developers to rebuild aging public infrastructure and revitalize their communities.

I have also filed a pair of public pension reform bills. One bill would prevent an elected official from retiring one day from an elected position and collecting a pension, and then being re-elected the following day and collecting a salary on top of the pension. I also have proposed stripping law enforcement and inspectional personnel convicted of federal crimes from being able to collect contributions made toward their retirement. Law enforcement and inspectional personnel convicted under state law already lose both their pensions and contributions.

JOHN F. KEENAN

In addition, I have sponsored legislation that would:

- Establish tougher penalties for those convicted of three serious felonies (Melissa's Bill)
- Establish tougher penalties for those convicted of multiple serious sex crimes
- Make it illegal to try and disarm a police officer
- Force utility companies to remove double poles quickly, or face stiff daily fines
- Allow cities and towns to use Community Preservation funds to renovate and improve existing parks
- Require parents to be notified if their underage child is treated for a drug overdose

In February, I received my committee assignments. I have been named the Senate Chairman of the Senate Chairman of the Joint Committee on Mental Health and Substance Abuse, and the Vice-Chairman of the Senate Committee on Bonding, Capital Expenditures, and State Assets. I was also named to the following committees: Financial Services, Judiciary, Revenue, State Administration and Regulatory Oversight, and Veterans & Federal Affairs.

While each of these committee will come with their own challenges, being named Co-Chairman of the Joint Committee on Mental Health and Substance Abuse has already been a very rewarding, yet humbling, experience for me. Considering the opiate epidemic swallowing the communities I represent, and the non-discriminating reach of mental health issues in our society, I recognize and appreciate the importance of this appointment

I am also reminded on a daily basis of the sobering reality of our state's fiscal picture. Facing a projected deficit of approximately $1.7 billion means that tough decisions will have to be made during the upcoming budget process.

I am thoroughly enjoying my work at the State House and in the Senate District. The prospects of moving the Commonwealth forward despite the tough economic times will be challenging, but worth the effort.

If anybody has a concern, issue or is in need of assistance relative to a state government matter, contact me at my Senate office by calling (617)-722-1494, by e-mail at john.keenan@masenate.gov, or by mail to Senator John F. Keenan, State House, Room 413B, Boston, MA 02133.

Snow Blankets City As Spring Arrives

By FRANK McCAULEY

This Week
67 Years Ago

Springtime arriving at 1:49 p.m. on Monday, March 20 had to wade through an eight-inch snowfall. Quincy's 35 plows had been clearing snow and snowdrifts since the early morning hours. Public Works Commissioner James P. Donovan said as soon as the snowfall stops, he would take on extra manpower to dig the city out.

At the Fore River Shipyard in the midst of furious blasts from wind whipped snow, an LST was launched on schedule at 7:30 a.m. The hull slid into the water without further incident.

Many Quincy school children remained at home although classes in all schools were held. Trains were battling to keep on schedule while buses and streetcars dropped behind in some instances.

SONS OF LEBANON AND AUXILIARY UNVEIL HONOR ROLL IN PROGRAM

The Sons of Lebanon and Auxiliary (men and women of Syrian extraction) unveiled the honor roll plaque bearing the names of 27 of their men in the armed forces of the United States with fitting ceremonies at the Sons of Lebanon Hall on Lebanon Street in Quincy Point.

The unveiling was executed by Peter S. Antoon, president of the Sons of Lebanon and Mrs. Mary Thom, president of the auxiliary unit. Present at the unveiling, which attracted a large audience, was Sgt. Michael W. Nahas, United States Army, who was home on a ten-day furlough from Camp McKain in Mississippi.

250 TO 500 FLYING FORTRESSES RAID SOUTHWEST GERMANY

A medium sized force of U.S. heavy bombers smashed Southwest Germany for the second time in three days while hundreds of lighter Allied planes battered widely scattered targets in Western Europe.

The striking force was estimated at between 250 and 500 Flying Fortresses and Liberators escorted by hundreds of fighter planes.

Major General James H. Doolittle commanded the English Air Force, which participated in the raids.

'Dancing With Angels' To Benefit Special Needs Fund

Old Colony Elder Services, a non-profit elder services agency serving elders and their families in 23 communities throughout the greater Plymouth county area, will hold its second annual "Dancing with the Angels" benefit event Saturday, April 2 from 6:30 to 11 p.m., at the Tirrell Room, 254 Quarry St., Quincy.

Attendees will enjoy hors d'oeuvres, lively dancing and the music of the 14 piece White Heat Swing Orchestra. There will also be a dancing competition featuring the Visiting Angels staff doing Latin dancing.

The fundraising event supports the Special Needs Funds of Old Colony Elder Services and South Shore Elder Services (based in Braintree).

The Special Needs Fund helps frail elders throughout the area who cannot afford the basic necessities of life such as food, shelter, medicine and heat. Elders who have health issues may be unable to prepare meals, shop for food, or complete simple tasks such as washing clothes.

Last year's "Dancing with the Angels" event raised more than $15,000 for seniors in need.

"Although government funding covers a substantial portion of our services, there are still many elders who are not eligible for services yet have critical needs," said Old Colony Elder Services Executive Director Diana DiGiorgi.

"It is only through the generous support of individuals and businesses in the community that we are able to fulfill our mission of helping older adults live independently in their own homes for as long as possible."

Tickets for this swinging event are $50 each and may be purchased at Old Colony Elder Services. For more information about this event, contact Lucille Dallaire at OCES (508) 584-1561.

Quincy Animal Shelter Fundraiser March 25

The Quincy Animal Shelter will hold a fundraiser Friday, March 25 at 7 p.m. at Port 305 Marina Bay, 305 Victory Rd., North Quincy.

The event will raise funds for the shelter's animal care needs. All proceeds from the fundraiser will go directly to the shelter.

The event will include a buffet compliments of Port 305's chef and staff, a silent auction which includes an overnight stay, original art and more. There will also be live entertainment throughout the evening.

Tickets are $35 per person and can be purchased online at www.quincyanimalshelter.org, at the Shelter on Broad Street or at the door.

The Shelter does not receive any local, state or federal funding and is a recognized 501(c)(3) non-profit organization which relies entirely on donations and fundraising to provide the special care that is given to every cat and dog that stays at the shelter while waiting to be adopted.

For more information about the event or the shelter, call 617-376-1349.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Zucchini Stuffed Chicken Breasts

These days everyone seems to veer towards a healthy way of eating. And so when I recently made stuffed chicken breasts, I used a vegetable instead of bread stuffing, which got raves.

Any vegetable can be used, but I used zucchini, which was satisfying, practically fat free, especially when the skin is taken off.

ZUCCHINI STUFFED CHICKEN BREASTS

2 or 3 chicken breasts (depending on size)
2 cups shredded zucchini
1 onion shredded
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese (optional)
Salt and pepper
3 tablespoons olive oil

Shred the zucchini on the shred side of the cheese grater. The same with the onion.

In the hot oil, sauté the onion and add the shredded zucchini, the salt, pepper and cheese. Cook until blended.

Stuff each chicken breast, and place in a greased baking pan, and bake covered in a 350 degree oven for 25 minutes and uncovered for 10 to 15 minutes. I served it with rice and asparagus spears.

'City Of Presidents' Seasonal Walk

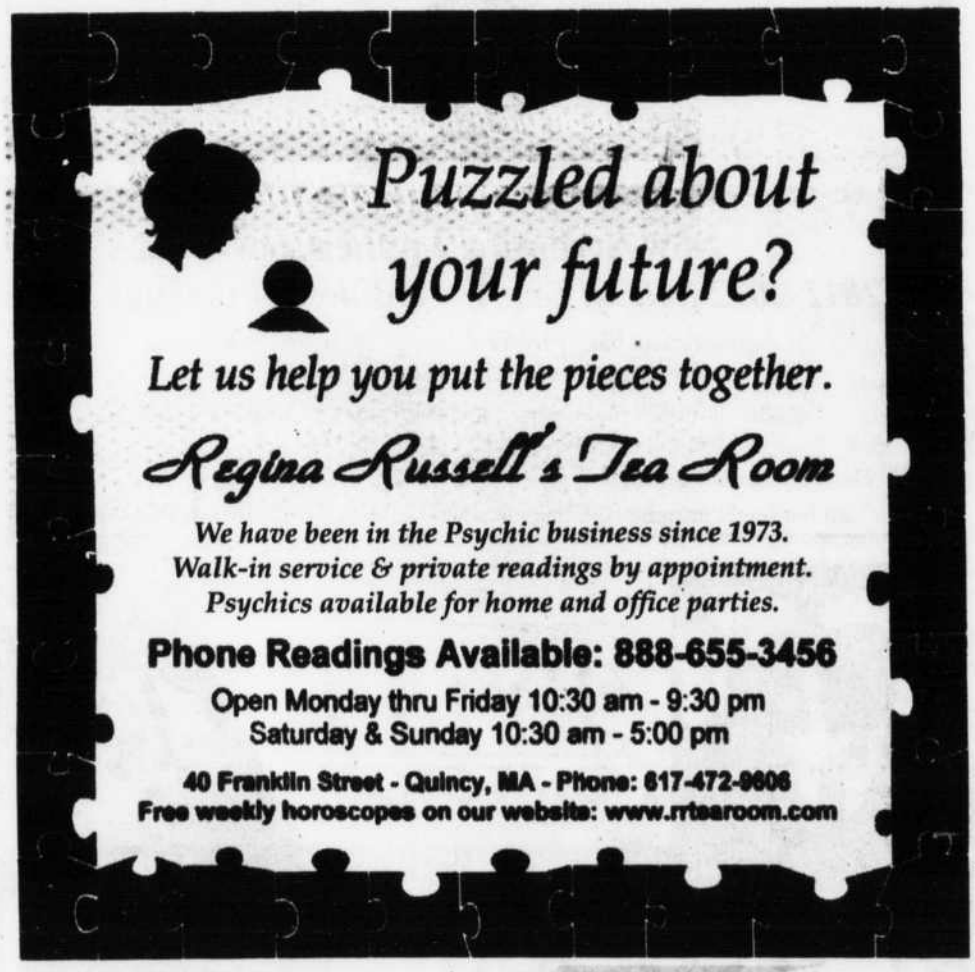
The Walk 'n Mass Volkssport Club is sponsoring a seasonal walk in the "City of Presidents" April 19 through Nov. 5.

The walk route explores Quincy's downtown area and coastline. Notable historic sites include the 14-acre Adams National Historical Park and the Dorothy Quincy home.

The route is ten-kilometers (6.2 miles) on city sidewalks and paved trails. The trail is rated easy suitable for strollers but not for wheelchairs.

The start point is the Visitor Center (Galleria at Presidents Place), 1250 Hancock Street, Quincy, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. (617-770-1175). Ask for the Walk Box at the Visitor Center counter.

Volkssporting events promote "Moving together toward a healthier America" by providing non-competitive sporting events free to the public.



Volkssporting also offers an achievement awards program. For further information call 508-857-2176.

Aquarium staff was in the area on Tuesday evening to check on the seal, which moved very close to the road. LaCasse said the seal was a normal weight and appeared healthy. He said there could have been any of a number of causes of the seal's death and possibly more than one. LaCasse also said it is important to study the dead seals so any trends can be documented and followed.

"If there's a dead seal somewhere, we'll collect him," he said.

Adult harp and hooded seals have swum in from Canada for a mid-winter holiday in greater numbers than usual. Marine animal rescue staff with the New England Aquarium in Boston has been busy monitoring these super-sized seals from Salisbury to the South Shore over the past two weeks.

The seals stay in the area from December through March before making swim to the Gulf of Maine, and then pressing ahead to Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Labrador.

However, juvenile harp seals that normally make up the vast majority of the visiting Canadian seals are nearly absent. Canadian wildlife officials in the early winter reported a very significant die-off of young harp seals there from an unknown source.

Surprisingly, that health problem does not seem to affect older animals as adult harp seals have been seen on Massachusetts beaches in significantly higher numbers than usual.

Canadian marine biologists have been performing necropsies on the dead seals, the results of which can take a long time. "It didn't appear to be food availability," said LaCasse.

The Quincy area, LaCasse said, is a prime area for the seals because of its variety of habitats including sandy beaches and marshes. "Quincy has been the jackpot," he said.

LaCasse said some seals take a couple of days to rest. "They're like a marathoner."

But this can pose a problem as passers-by assume that the seal cannot move and is in distress.

Actually, the vast majority of seals are fine. People frequently approach the animal too closely and disturb its rest. This can be unhealthy for both people and the seal. Some of these seals are larger than any bear in Massachusetts. Getting close to any 300-400 pound wild animal is not wise. Seals are not generally aggressive, but they will defend themselves if they feel threatened, and they do bite. Coming too close to a seal is actually illegal under federal law. The Marine Mammal Protection Act considers disturbing a seal harassment, and violators can be subject to large fines.

Instead, enjoy watching the seal from a safe distance of 150 feet. Good binoculars will give you a front row seat. Do not offer the seal food, do not pour water on it or try to cover it with a blanket. Watch it quietly and closely observe its location, size, coloring and behavior. Please call the Aquarium's Marine Animal hotline at (617) 973-5247 with your information.

Common problems for resting seals are dogs running on beaches. Many beaches only allow dogs during the cool and cold months. If you see a seal or your dog starts excitedly barking at something, leash and quiet the dog, as it is likely to create a high stress situation for all involved.

Beyond the injuries from a possible fight, dogs and seals rarely encounter each other, and they each may carry innocuous pathogens that are not a problem for the host, but might have dire disease consequences for the other. In the 1980s, a variation of canine distemper nearly wiped out the harbor seal population in the Baltic Sea off of Scandinavia.

Harp seals are by far the majority of the wintertime visitors, but another regular seal species visiting Massachusetts are hooded seals. This seal can weigh up to 700 pounds, but most of the young adults seen in New England are in the 300-pound range.

The home range of both harp and hooded seals are on the ice floes off the Canadian Maritime Provinces. As the warm weather starts to arrive in late March and early April, these seals will not find the oncoming spring attractive and will swim back across the Gulf of Maine.

Edgewater Drive Seawall Repair Neighborhood Meeting March 23

are in need of repair.

Although a Department of Conservation & Recreation (DCR) assessment report estimated the full cost of repair at over $30 million, the city will invest $4.5 million in designing, permitting and construction repairs to the Edgewater Drive seawall system including, but not limiting to, replacement of undermining sections, revetment replacement, capstone modifications, and earthwork modifications along the land side.

The two gates intended to relieve land side flooding will also be modified.

Funding for this project will be provided through debt financing. This project will reduce the City's Drainage Department costs associated with the management, cleanup, and repairs caused by flooding. This project will also improve the flooding conditions that impact many residential property owners.

Calls City's Appeal In $3M Judgment In Adams Trust Case 'Doomed Strategy'

In October of 2009, Mayor Koch is on the record as saying that "There has been no mismanagement of (Adams) funds."

On Feb. 18th of this year, however, Judge Langlois issued a scathing ruling against the City of Quincy over its decades of mismanagement of the Adams funds. Per even but a quick reading of Langlois' Findings of Fact, it is impossible to view the City's oversight of the Adams funds as anything other than appalling.

Now, however, City Hall plans to appeal the Court's decision. Not on facts, mind you, as the facts are damning. Rather, the administration in City Hall intends to appeal over esoteric legal technicalities such as the current nature of the Woodward School's incorporation as well as over points of law that the trial court has already as well as correctly decided.

Given that there is no legitimate way to argue against the core finding of the Court – that the City of Quincy sorely as well as variously long mismanaged the Adams fund – why then is City Hall opting to appeal Judge Langlois ruling at an annual cost to the local taxpayers of nearly $400,000.00 a year in interest penalties PLUS surely hundreds of thousands of dollars a year more in additional legal fees?

The only viable explanation is to delay payment. Per state law, the City can roll budgeting for and thus the payment of court judgments into the next immediately following fiscal year.

Accordingly, if the City can keep the appeal alive until this coming July 1st, it can so hold up budgeting for the payment of the judgment until Fiscal Year 2013. And, for every additional July 1 thereafter that the appeal is still ongoing, a further year's delay in making payment is possible.

While it is readily possible to fathom how pursuing an all but assuredly doomed appeal does help City Hall out when it comes to its budget planning, it is all but impossible to view pursuing an appeal as anything other than further tarnishing at great expense the sordid reputation of the City of Quincy.

The Adams deserve better. Much better, as a matter of fact. Accordingly, shame on City Hall for planning to perpetuate the inexcusable per what is all but assuredly a doomed strategy.

Quincy Republican City Committee Elects New Officers

The Quincy Republican City Committee recently elected new officers for the coming year.

At the committee's March 8 meeting, Dianna Smith was elected the committee's new chairman. She succeeds Jennifer McCauley Logue, who chose not to run for re-election after completing three terms as the committee's chairman.

"Since joining our committee, Dianna has been one of our most dedicated volunteers," Logue said. "I know she'll do an outstanding job as city committee chairman."

A registered nurse at a Boston hospital, Smith moved to Quincy with her husband, Sean, in 2006.

"I've gotten more politically active in recent years, as I am increasingly concerned about government spending," Smith said. "I basically believe in the principles of the Republican Oath, which emphasizes limited government, free enterprise, personal responsibility and equal rights, justice and opportunity for all."

Other Republican City Committee officers elected at the meeting include Vice Chairman Trisha Lydon-Prasinos, Secretary Robert Smith and Treasurer Matthew Keswick.

The Quincy Republican City Committee meets on the second Tuesday of the month in the second floor community room at Roche Brothers supermarket. For more information, visit www.quincymassgop.com.

'Inside Daisy Clover' Film Screening Tonight

A free screening of the 1965 movie "Inside Daisy Clover" will be held tonight (Thursday) at 6:45 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The film is part of the "Remembering Ruth Gordon Film Retrospective" this month.

"You're Gonna Hear From Me," a 15-year-old gamine Daisy Clover sings from the silver screen to an adoring public, although in the 1930s, "star treatment" can go all the way from being discovered to being discarded.

Natalie Woods plays the title role with gusto in this blend of Hollywood stardust and melodrama that also costars Robert Redford and Quincy native Ruth Gordon, who won a Golden Globe award and an Oscar nomination for her work as Daisy's mother.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

The film series is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

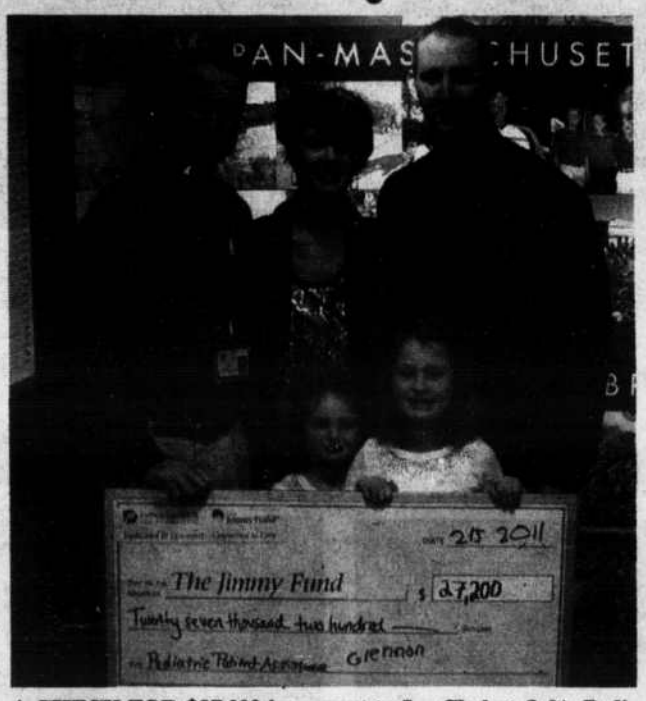
$27,000 Donated Pediatric Patient Assistance Fund



Glennon Family Christmas Party Benefits Jimmy Fund

Over $27,000 was recently raised at the Glennon Family Christmas Party to Benefit the Jimmy Fund. All proceeds directly benefit the Pediatric Patient Assistance Fund at The Jimmy Fund/ Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

This was the second year of what has become an annual event. It was organized by Sean and Jo-Anne (Hidalgo) Glennon in honor of their seven-year old daughter, Avery. Avery was diagnosed shortly before her first birthday with optic glioma, a cancerous tumor that is growing around the optic nerve in her brain. Avery endured 13 months of chemotherapy, which has successfully shrunk the tumor by 30 percent.

Throughout their ordeal, The Jimmy Fund/Dana-Farber Cancer Institute was and continues to be extremely supportive of The Glennon Family and they wanted to do something to "pay it forward" for other families who find themselves in a similar situation.

"When a child gets cancer it can mean a huge financial loss for a family," said Sean Glennon. "We started this fundraiser in 2009 in the hopes that it will help alleviate some of the financial concerns that parents face when they have a child who is ill. We were thrilled to raise $22,000 the first year and to surpass that amount this year was outstanding. We are constantly amazed and humbled by the generosity of the Quincy community."

A CHECK FOR $27,000 is present to Joe Chabot (left), Pediatric Resource Program Manager and manager of the Pediatric Patient Assistance Fund by the Glennon family: Jo-Anne, Sean, Annabella and Avery Glennon.

The Pediatric Patient Assistance Fund provides financial support to families who have a child undergoing treatment. This includes direct and immediate assistance via prepaid gift cards (gas, grocery, CVS, and more).

"This incredibly generous donation to the Pediatric Patient Assistance Fund at Dana-Farber will provide much needed relief to hundreds of Jimmy Fund Clinic patients and their families," said Joe Chabot, Pediatric Resource Program Manager and Manager of the Pediatric Patient Assistance Fund. "Thank you for helping us to help our patients and their families."

Three Quincy Lions Honored With Melvin Jones Awards

Quincy Host Club For Lions Mid-Winter Conference

The Quincy Lions Club was the host club for the 51st Annual Lions Clubs International District 33K Mid-Winter Conference held Feb. 18-20 in Dedham.

An estimated 550 individuals attend the conference. The conference began with an evening "Mardi Gras" theme party, hosted by the Quincy Lions Club. Prizes were awarded for the best costumes.

Saturday's events included a business meeting, leadership training, exhibition, and youth speech contest.

The Quincy Lions Club was honored to have been represented in the speech contest by Meghan Peterson, from Quincy High School, who qualified for the district-level competition after winning at the club, zone, and region-level contests.

Quincy's region is comprised of 10 clubs, including Boston, Charlestown, Hyde Park, Hingham, Hull, and Weymouth. Only five students advanced to the final competition, to represent the five regions in the district. Lion Christine Cedrone Logan was the contest chairwoman for the Quincy club this year.

MEGHAN PETERSON, a senior at Quincy High School, participates in the Lions Clubs International annual Youth Speech Contest.

The highlight of the entire weekend was the annual Melvin Jones Awards banquet, held on that Saturday evening. Induction into the Melvin Jones Fellowship is the highest honor awarded to an individual by Lions Clubs International. The Quincy Lions Club honored three of their own - Tom Hogan, Steve Mansfield, and Tom Zukauskas - by inducting them into the Melvin Jones Fellowship. A $3,000 donation to the Lions Clubs International Foundation (LCIF) has been made by Quincy Lions in honor of these three very deserving individuals. LCIF is the official charitable organization of Lions Clubs International, and it allows Lions from all over the world to carry out large-scale humanitarian projects.

Dave Sawyer, a Quincy Lion, was presented with the District Governor's award for his role as Conference Chair for the Quincy Club. This particular position was especially daunting this year, given Quincy was the host club of the entire conference. Sawyer was assisted by Quincy Lions Club President Loretta McTiernan.

"I am so grateful to Dave and Loretta for their invaluable support leading up to, and during the conference," said District Governor Joyce Hogan. "I couldn't have done it without them."

Hogan – also a Quincy Lion - is Governor of over 1,900 Lions in nearly 50 clubs throughout the Greater Boston area.

The awards banquet concluded with the presentation of a "Quincy" blanket, given to Lions Clubs International Director Dr. Sonja "Sunny" Pulley, from Portland, Oregon.

Donations received during the conference totaled more than $120,000, which will be used to support humanitarian efforts in the district, across the country, and around the world.

Lions Clubs International is the largest service organization in the world, with over 1.35 million members in more than 45,000 clubs in more than 200 countries and geographic areas.

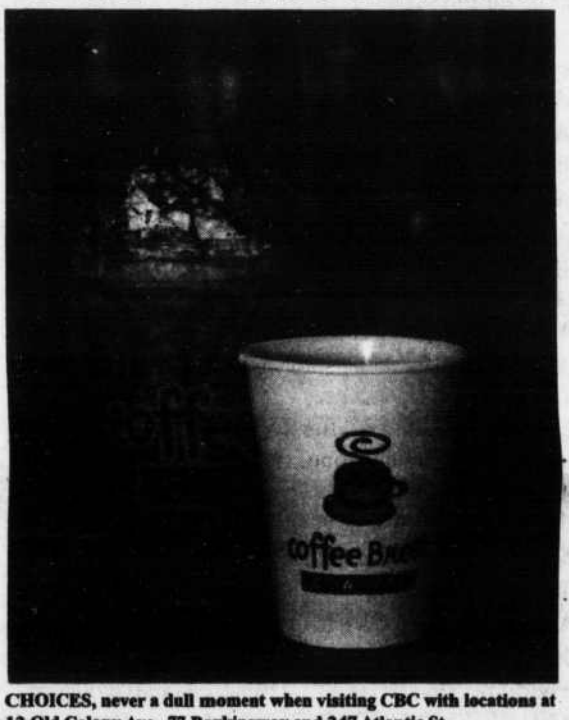
Coffee Break: We Love Our Beans & Our Customers



Q: Why is your coffee so good?

A: Less than 1 percent of all coffee grown earns the level of specialty grade. Because of its limited supply, only independent coffee shops can offer it. A large coffee chain would not be able to secure the amount they need for thousands of locations. Our roasters are also independents who buy these top quality lots and roast in small batches, delivering fresh beans multiple times per week. A giant commercial roasting facility sweeps more beans off the floor than our roasters produce all year!

Once the beans come to our shop...

We treat them with the love & respect they've earned. They remain in whole bean form until seconds before brewing. The water is properly filtered to remove any bad taste or odor. They are portioned, ground and brewed in small batches at 197 degrees directly into state of the art airpots that keep it hot & fresh. Our coffee never sits on a burner! Thankfully it never sits at all, we sell so much.

Our sugar is always melted for iced coffee, and always stirred for hot. We love our beans, and our customers.

CHOICES, never a dull moment when visiting CBC with locations at 12 Old Colony Ave., 77 Parkingway and 247 Atlantic St.

America's Most Wanted Contest

America's Most Wanted is sponsoring a contest called, "America's Most Wanted Allstar" for First Responders.

A long time friend, retired Quincy High School Teacher Jim Flahive entered my name (Lieutenant Dan Minton) into the contest in hopes of winning and using the money to fund Quincy Police Department community outreach programs.

Mr. Flahive and retired Officer Bob Hanna co-created the Quincy High School Student Police Academy in 1992. The Academy is now a certified program under the direction of Teacher Brendan Welch.

The winning Police Department will receive a $10,000 prize, to go towards our programs. To win, the Officer must have the most votes.

Supporters can vote daily, at www.amw.com/allstar by searching for the Officer's name (Minton) and clicking on the photo. Again, all money prizes will go directly to Quincy Police Department programs. Please support this great cause!

Beware The Chimney Sweep

Beware the chimney sweep: residents have called to tell me that they have received calls from a chimney cleaning company stating that it's time to have their chimney cleaned again. The problem: They don't have chimneys. When the potential victims tell the caller this, the caller abruptly hangs up.

If you have information on the above crimes, drug activity or any crime, please call the Quincy Police Detective Bureau at 617-745-5764 or log onto the following website: http://tinyurl.com/ytf6td.

To report suspicious drug activity, call the Drug Hot-Line at 617-328-4527. You will not be required to identify yourself, but it could help. To make an appointment to view the Registered Sex Offenders book, call Detective Cindy Walsh at 617-745-5751.

To contact the Crime Prevention Officer for tips or comments, my direct line is 617-745-5719. My e-mail address is dminton@ci.quincy.ma.us --Lt. Dan Minton

Entries in the Quincy Police Hot Spots are compiled and submitted by the Quincy Police Department.

They are published by The Quincy Sun as a public service to make local residents more aware of any crime activity in their neighborhood. Questions concerning the Hot Spots list should be directed to Crime Prevention Officer Lt. Dan Minton, 617-745-5719.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, March 1, at approximately 1:45 p.m., Officer Michael Powers was dispatched to the area of 17 Quarry St. for a report of a man staggering up the street, knocking on people's doors asking for work.

LT. DAN MINTON

The caller stated that the male "doesn't look right." A description of the male was provided and within seconds, the officer located the suspect at the front door of 37 Quarry St.

Officer Powers asked the suspect what he was doing and he stated he was trying to raise money for college by performing odd jobs for residents. When asked where he lives, the suspect responded, "I don't know" and when asked who he lived with, he said, "My boy." When asked his "boy's name", the suspect said he forgot the name.

The suspect then became very uncooperative and expressed his displeasure with the Police, referring to the Officer as a "Pig" numerous times, laced with profanity. A pat-frisk of the suspect uncovered Firm Grip utility gloves, three condoms, a cell phone with a dead battery, a nail clipper, loose change, a Charlie card ticket and $55 dollars in bills.

At this time, Officer Jamie Karvelis arrived on scene to provide back up and recognized the suspect from a call earlier in the day, (10:18 A.M.) when he and Officer Joe McGunigle responded to Braintree Cooperative Bank for a man possibly "drunk or high," lingering around the vestibule. After questioning the suspect, he was sent on his way in his friend's car. He appeared sober at the time and did not have the money and other possessions he had on the second call.

The suspect again told the officers that he had $85 on him and was trying to raise $22,000 for college. When told that he actually had $55, the suspect again started calling the Officers "pigs" and accused them of stealing his money. The suspect behaved in a very excited manner, flailing his arms when he spoke as he made wild accusations. The suspect was advised to sit down on the front steps and settle down, which he did for a brief moment.

When Officer Powers asked the suspect when he was last arrested, he said, it was over a year ago. When asked about Breaking and Entering offenses on his record, the suspect did not answer. According to his criminal record, the suspect had 21 adult offenses and 63 on his juvenile record, mostly associated with B&E's, larcenies, and receiving stolen properties.

Officer Powers reviewed the record with the suspect, who then said, "Yeah, I also have a lot of A&B's on there from beating up a bunch of f@#$%^& pigs." He added, "And I'll do it again if I have to." At this time, the suspect jumped up from the front steps in an aggressive manner as if he was directing this threat toward the Officers. He was advised to settle down once again, but this time there was no reasoning with him. He continued to scream and yell profanities at Officer Karvelis, pointing his fingers in an aggressive manner, as his arms flailed uncontrollably.

A small crowd started to develop as neighbors came out of their houses and vehicle traffic, including a full school bus, stopped to watch.

Since the suspect would not heed the warnings, Officer Powers placed the suspect in handcuffs and then transported him to the police station for booking. The suspect refused to answer where he picked up the items in his pockets, that he did not have on the earlier call. The suspect, a 19 year old Quincy resident, has an open Duxbury case of "Receiving Stolen Property", with a court appearance next month.

The suspect was arrested last May in Quincy for Breaking and Entering in the Nighttime with Intent to Commit a Felony. At the station, the suspect was charged with, "Disorderly Conduct."

Nice Work!

Joseph Shea, PE, Senior Vice President of Woodard & Curran, at length. Shea prepared the plan in concert with city engineers.

Shea described efforts to address the city's numerous drainage and flooding problems through a 'holistic' approach which, if successful, attacks the major source of excess water or tidal invasions and solves other problems rippling from the same source.

Improvements ranged from repairs as simple as cleaning a waterway or drains to installing tide gates to new sea walls and replacing a 30 inch drainage pipe with a 66 inch pipe.

The engineers "chose 14 projects and basically put them on the fast track" said Shea.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin, Councillors Daniel Raymondi, Ward 2; Brian Palmucci, Ward 4; Margaret Laforest, Ward 1; and Doug Gutro, Ward 5, questioned Shea about remedies for the problems in their districts.

However, Gutro said he would need specifics on the costs and expenditures for each project, "I'm looking for backup. What are we buying?"

In addition, Gutro suggested that the holistic approach should also include zoning changes and tree planting initiatives.

And Raymondi warned councillors, "We should not be (spending) money for plans and design unless we're committed to making sure that the flooding is fixed."

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee suggested that councillors address the plan in part, "break it up a bit. Do the greatest good for the greatest number of people."

In this economy, McNamee said, "People are getting clobbered."

By the meeting's end, however, both Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci appeared ready to support the entire plan which addresses not only flood controls but, also, school building needs which Laforest said shouldn't be postponed.

Laforest recalled the problems decades back when the roof collapsed at Central Middle School. She was a student at the time and there was confusion throughout the system during the juggling of assignments. Now the costs are even higher, said Laforest.

Palmucci described the devastation in Ward 4 after the floods last March.

While he admitted to 'sticker shock,' Palmucci said, "The cost of inaction is far greater."

Palmucci said the March floods affected over 300 households in his ward alone and 12 families were homeless with one family just now moving back.

"I will not pick one project over another," said Palmucci who described meetings in his community and "how relieved people were to see that something was actually being done here."

The Capital Improvement Plan includes the following projects, ranging from costs of $100,000 to $4.5 million.

- Edgewater Drive Seawall Assessment and Repair ($4.5M)
- Seawall Assessment and Cost/Benefit Study ($500,000)
- Inspection and Cleaning of Furnace Brook ($2.5M)
- Miller Street, Cross Street, Furnace Avenue Area Flood Control Station ($500,00)
- Alrick Road Pumping Station and Drainage Modifications ($900,000)
- Black's Creek Capacity and Tide Gate Enhancements ($800,000)
- The Sagamore Creek Tide Gate ($810,000)
- North Quincy Area Drainage System Cleaning ($1.3M)
- Division Street Pump Station Upgrades ($150,000)
- Two Broad Street projects ($650,000 & $590,000)
- Circuit Road/Spence Avenue Area ($730,000)
- Centre Street Drain Pipe Realignment ($100,000)
- Sachem Brook and Sachem Street Tide Control System ($350,000).

Street-Works Will Buy Legion Post For Town Brook Daylighting Plan

The Quincy American Legion Post property at Revere and Mechanic Streets will feature a small park by a daylighted portion of Town Brook under current plans by Street-Works – the White Plains, N.Y. developer undertaking the $1.3 billion Quincy Center Revitalization.

Gene Prorok, Commander of Quincy Post 95 AL, said Tuesday that the Legion board and Street-Works had reached an agreement, but he declined to disclose the details.

"We have signed a purchase-and-sale agreement," said Prorok, adding that Quincy Post 95 AL will stay in Quincy and keep its charter. Prorok said the board has not located a new property.

QUINCY AMERICAN LEGION Post property at Revere and Mechanic Streets will feature a small park by a daylighted portion of Town Brook under current plans by developer Street-Works undertaking the $1.3 billion Quincy Center Revitalization.

The red brick building, home to the legion post since its construction in 1934, still sponsors weekly dances with live music of the 1950's, 1960's and 1970's, according to Prorok who said they will continue in their new location. According to the city's assessors, the 5525 square foot property and building are valued at $507,400.

Water, Sewer Rates Seen Level

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Water and sewer rates should stay level for this year at least, according to Michael Coffey, Business Manager for the Department of Public Works.

Coffey informed city councillors Monday at a Finance Committee meeting that he does not expect a spike this year in charges for water and sewer services from the MWRA (Massachusetts Water Resource Authority).

Earlier at the same meeting, the Finance Committee had approved six finance items requested by Coffey for water and sewer projects. These included the following appropriations:

- $645,350 to sewer contractual from sewer enterprise free cash
- $185,000 to sewer capital expenditures from sewer enterprise free cash
- $223,400 to water capital expenditures charged from water enterprise free cash.

Expenditures from the sewer account will be used to purchase a new water tank truck and jet pump to replace a 1997 vehicle which has become unsafe, according to Coffey's description.

The Finance Committee also authorized Mayor Thomas Koch to borrow $9,679,459 for Water System Improvements from the MWRA under a special loan program for member cities and towns. The program allows the city to access one tenth of the loan a year and repay the loan at zero percent interest.

The Finance Committee also approved the appropriation of $1,752,000 for Engineering and Construction of Sewer System Improvements through a second MWRA loan program. That program requires that the city pay back only 55% of the loan at zero percent interest.

Once the Finance Committee approves such requests, they are moved to the City council for a second vote.

Councillor John Keenan, the city's state senator, is chairman of the finance Committee.

Mixed Reviews Of Street-Works' Town Brook Plan

"It's not the only concept out there. There's a fair number of people who believe there's a better alternative," said Steve Perdios, President, the Quincy Environmental Network (QEN).

"We want this project, but we don't want the cheap option, the fast option," said Pat Artis, President of the Wollaston Garden Club.

QEN and the Wollaston Garden Club will unveil an alternative proposal on Tuesday, March 29.

Several other observers like Dan Raymondi, a resident and city councillor, said flood concerns must be addressed in the Quincy Center plan and sought details on improvements from Heapes.

The most vocal supporters at the meeting included the several dozen union members like Neil Conley of East Bridgewater, Business Agent for Local 7, Ironworkers.

An East Bridgewater resident, Conley urged speedy action on the proposal to improve the job market.

Conley worried that Street-Works will pull out if there's too much contention.

However, Heapes countered, that won't happen. "We are not going away," he said.

During the presentation, Heapes said that nine plans had been considered, including the QEN proposal.

Heapes said that the Street-Works scored the best of all alternatives.

In other plans, Town Brook would be 10 to 20 feet below ground level, according to Heapes who said other proposals, also, infringe on private property.

As for the QEN proposal, Heapes said that plan has been considered and rejected. His formal statement follows:

"We have analyzed multiple alternate plans proposed by QEN over the last several months including the plan they are presenting on (March) 29th (and) they simply are not feasible.

"QEN has repeatedly failed to address our concerns that include but (are) not limited to the impacts of keeping the Brook on private property, the congestion of adjacent underground utilities making installation extremely difficult, the 50% increase in length, (and) the dubious amenity value of 6" of water in an open channel culvert 20' below the ground.

"Given that the permit filing is more of a commencement than a conclusion, it's time to get started."

ARTIST RENDING of a pocket park alongside Town Brook is part of Street-Works' $14 million proposal for Quincy Center. The park would be located at the site of the current Quincy American Legion Post #95 at the corner of Mechanic Street and Revere Road. The 5,525 square-foot property is currently under a purchase and sales agreement with the developer, according to Post Commander Gene Prorok who said the post will continue in Quincy.

Town Brook Alternative Plan Meeting Topic March 29

The Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) and the Wollaston Garden Club will hold a joint meeting Tuesday, March 29 at 7 p.m. in the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Center, to discuss an alternative to the Street-Works plan for Town Brook.

QEN President Steve Perdios said the alternative plan would not only provide a better vision for Town Brook, but also make the Downtown Redevelopment a more successful project.

Great Reasons And Ways To Green Your Home

(NAPSA)-Whether or not global warming is one of your top concerns, some of the latest reasons for greening your home may inspire you to design with more eco-friendly materials in mind.

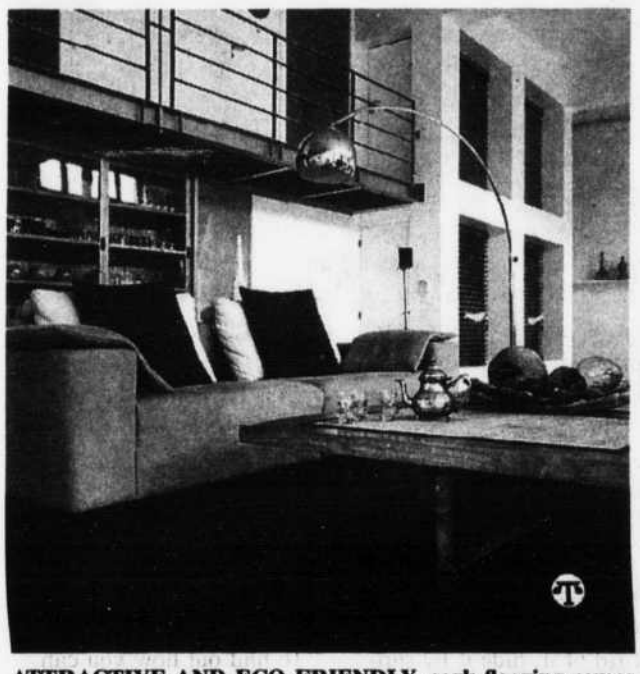
With more than 85 percent of Rent.com survey respondents preferring to live in an eco-friendly space, green design is conscientious, economical and:

Stylish: Green doesn't have to mean boring.

"Whether in traditional, contemporary or transitional spaces, green design reflects not only practicality and versatility, but beauty in its materials, making it the perfect choice for today's interiors," said Candice Olson, host of HGTV's "Divine Design" and "Candice Tells All."

In the search for sustainable materials, more homeowners are choosing materials such as cork. The natural, reusable and recyclable material is durable, warm, resilient, insulating, hypoallergenic and comfortable. It also offers an eco-chic design aesthetic.

"Cork flooring is the ultimate choice for style-savvy consumers because of its exquisite design possibilities, durability, reliability and eco-friendly features," said Olson. "Using user-friendly websites like www.realcork-floors.com can make choosing the right design fun and frustration-free."



Cork flooring can be used in living rooms, kitchens, family or entertainment rooms, bedrooms and basements. It's 100 percent renewable, since harvesting the outer bark of the cork oak tree never results in a single tree being cut down. According to the World Wildlife Federation (WWF), cork oak forests support one of the highest levels of biodiversity among forest habitats.

Helps to preserve our heritage: Why buy new furniture when you can buy history?

According to Nigel Worboys of Antiques Are Green, buying antiques reduces landfill, carbon emissions and consumption of new goods from abroad, while helping to preserve our heritage for future generations.

Can save you money: Lots of it, in fact.

The federal Energy Star tax credit for 2011 is 30 percent of the cost-up to $1,500-for the following items: biomass stoves, heating, ventilating, air-conditioning (HVAC), roofs (metal and asphalt), water heaters (nonsolar), windows and doors.

ATTRACTIVE AND ECO FRIENDLY, cork flooring comes in an array of designer-inspired styles and colors that create stunning yet durable floor surfaces.

THIS IS A HAMMER

By Samantha Mazzotta

The Best of the Best

Q: I'm planning to buy my first handheld drill, but I'm torn as to what to pick: a drill with a power cord, or a cordless drill? Don't rechargeable drills have less power? – Sandra U., Detroit

A: For overall usefulness, I'd go with a rechargeable cordless drill. And I'd spend the extra money for a quality model. That way you're going to get a tool that has plenty of power for several levels of household repair tasks and a good quality rechargeable battery that will last a good while.

Of course, the top benefit of a cordless drill is ease of use: You just grab it out of the charger and take it anywhere in the house. No need to worry about how long the cord is or where your extension cord is at.

Q: I'm utterly confused at all the varieties of nails out there. Can you explain which types are used for what? – Jim in San Diego

A: Once a do-it-yourselfer finds he or she needs nails classified somewhat more distinctly than "big" or "small," the right nail for the job can be somewhat elusive. Here's some basic nail terminology.

• Nail length is measured in a unit called a "penny," or "d" for short. An 8-penny or "8d" nail is 2.5 inches long, while a 10-penny or "10d" nail is 3 inches long.

• "Common" nails typically measure 6d, 8d or 10d and are used for simple repair tasks; they have a wider, flat head and no threading.

• "Finishing" nails are used for interior or exterior trim or paneling; they have small heads that can be driven below the surface and hidden under putty.

• "Barbed" nails have small barbs pointing backwards from the tip and have more holding power than a common nail (but can destroy the wood when pulled out).

• "Annular threaded" nails have a series of backward-facing grooves and are used to put up plywood and drywall.

• "Spiral" nails have just that, a spiral groove that turns the nail as it's driven in. They're typically used on hardwood flooring.

So, what size of nail is best for a particular job? If the instructions don't specify it, try testing different nails on a piece of wood similar to the one you're working with. A nail that splits the wood – such as wood trim – is probably too large, meaning you'll want to select a shorter, thinner nail.

HOME TIP: Swing that hammer properly. Grip it near the end, firmly, and swing from the shoulder and elbow together, rather than from the wrist.

Living Large In Small Spaces

(NAPSA)-From sky-rise lofts to tiny-size apartments, there are innovative and ingenious ways to get the most out of your space with organizational solutions that beat those small-space blues.

Today, many new homes and apartments are designed smaller with affordability in mind, as Americans cut back on everything from personal spending to the size of their homes. Several recent studies from the American Institute of Architects (AIA) and the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) indicate that the days of the "McMansion" are over, as consumers look to downsize.

In fact, the average size of new single-family homes in America is now about 2,438 square feet and 46 percent of first-time homebuyers purchased homes smaller than 1,500 square feet, according to the NAHB. As homes continue to shrink in size, storage becomes a real challenge.

YOU DON'T NEED a lot of space for home decor that makes a big impression.

Fortunately, you can maximize the living space you have by converting special-use rooms into highly functional rooms that can be used frequently, such as a mudroom, multipurpose living room or an outdoor living space. Don't forget about those unused nooks and crannies, which can be ideal areas for adding extra storage space. For example, an underutilized alcove can be turned into a customized reach-in closet with a ClosetMaid(r) do-it-yourself laminate system.

An overdecorated small space can look cramped, so cut the clutter. If you can't get rid of it, hide it by supplementing the furnishings you already own with pieces that double as storage. Built-in seating in the dining room can add much-needed storage while accommodating extra dinner guests. Affordable and stylish options include ClosetMaid Cubeicals(r), which come in 2-, 6-, 8- and 9-square designs. They can be placed under the window or used as a side table by the couch and even as a mini entertaining area.

Finally, define the areas in your abode and consider furniture that fits the scale of the room. An accessory such as a mirror can become the focal point of a room. It also adds dimension by reflecting natural and artificial light.

To find out how you can create your own unique storage and organization solutions, visit www.closetmaid.com or call (800) 874-0008.

Inspiration Helps Your Garden Grow

(NAPS)-With so many beautiful plants to choose from, gardeners may wonder where to start. One of the most enjoyable ways to plant a seed of inspiration is to visit a public garden.

Found at zoos, historical sites and entertainment complexes, such public gardens can demonstrate what's possible-including flower choice, layout and landscaping practices.

Get Advice

According to the American Public Gardens Association (APGA), public gardens can show you how to create a water-wise landscape at home through the use of native and adapted plants and efficient irrigation. Visitors can learn what plants bloom at similar times and what arrangements look good together. Staff members who understand the region are available to offer advice on gardening techniques, and on-site sales can be a great source of top-quality additions to a home garden.

Here are a few types of public gardens you can visit:

• Zoos-Although the focus is on the animals, zoos also have interesting horticultural collections that show both flora and fauna in their native habitats.

• Entertainment Gardens-Golf courses, theme parks and water parks can also have beautiful horticultural displays.

• Historical Sites-Places of historic or cultural significance-such as churches, historic homes and cemeteries-often have grounds shaped to reflect the horticulture of their historical period.

• Nature Gardens-Created and designed to help visitors connect with nature, these gardens inform and educate about the botanical and ecological origins and functions of plant life and how they relate to human beings and animals.

FIRE SAFETY

By TOM LYONS
Retired Captain, Quincy Fire Department
Fire Prevention Bureau

Respect Gasoline

Here's a subject that most of us are familiar with while my concern is that our familiarity will exclude respect for its use, the subject being gasoline.

According to the Mass. Burn Injury Reporting System, in 2007, one third of all victims of gasoline-related burns are youths age 15 to 24. Nationally, teens aged 10 to 14 years old are the most likely group to get in trouble with gasoline and be treated for gasoline related burn injuries. The State Fire Marshal believes as I do, that our frequency of use to power engines by gasoline breeds familiarity, which can lessen a healthy respect for it. He therefore suggests that parents should speak with their children about the care required to handle gasoline, the how and when to do so as well. My father did so for me years ago, and the lesson has remained with me all these years. I'm grateful for it.

While we're on the subject, the Marshal conveys that there has been a recent increase in the number of incidents in which motor fuel; gasoline in particular, has been dispensed into unapproved or illegal containers. Consequently I'll share here some of the regulations included in the Commonwealth's Comprehensive Fire Safety Code.

One regulation prohibits the sale or transfer of any container for use in handling or transporting flammable or combustible liquids unless that container meets one of the following requirements: it is built to DOT standards, is approved by a nationally recognized testing laboratory, or approved by the State Fire Marshal.

Another regulation prohibits the dispensing of gasoline into any container not meeting the above requirements. The maximum container size is limited to 7 gallons and the total quantity to 21 gallons per vehicle without a permit. This section also prohibits transportation of containers within the passenger compartment of a vehicle.

When filling an approved gas container, always place it on the ground, insert the pump nozzle and bring it in contact with the inside of the container. This will reduce the risk of static electricity igniting the vapors.

Do not store gasoline within a building used for habitation. I've focused on this issue in a prior article where occupant safety depends on it while it's of major importance to responding firefighters if needed.

Gasoline vapors ignite at a very low temperature. Fumes are heavier than air and can travel some distance to potential ignition sources. Therefore keep anything that can provide heat to ignite gasoline vapors well away from fumes. A spark, a lit cigarette, or a pilot light is enough for fumes to flash. A static spark created when gasoline is IMPROPERLY USED to clean a paintbrush can ignite with devastating consequences. Gasoline is a tool, one frequently used, while it demands respect!

Willoughby, a history teacher at the school from 1986 to 2008 has always had an interest in community service and integrated it into the kids' studies of American and ancient history.

She found the kids enjoyed the community service work. Whether they were shy or outgoing, it never seemed to matter.

"The kids loved it," said Willoughby. "It's an interesting thing because it cuts across a lot of lines. They had to go out and go to work on it."

One project the kids worked on was helping to beautify the area around the Broad Meadow School by planting trees and shrubs. "It really helped the kids because it gave them something to be proud of," she said.

Philip Czajkowski admitted he knew practically nothing about community service before teacher Kazolias assigned it to his class last November. By the time he was done, Czajkowski had plans to do more volunteer work around the holidays.

"I had a project to do and I couldn't think up anything else to do for a community project," said Czajkowski. "I never really thought of community service before. To tell you the truth, I thought it was for inmates. It was a whole new thing to me. It definitely made me a more giving person than before."

Czajkowski poured over several ideas before ultimately deciding to collect items for the Interfaith Social Services' food pantry. The assignment called for students to come up with a written plan, a complete essay explaining the work that was done, as well as a slide show of the students in action.

Czajkowski enthusiastically dove into the project, sending out emails to dozens of parents explaining his attempt to collect canned goods, and put out more than 200 notices with the same message.

The results were overwhelming. Two weeks after putting out the notices and sending emails, Czajkowski collected more than 50 grocery bags filled with canned goods and an array of toiletry items.

Collecting the items was only part of the job for Czajkowski. Once at the food bank, he unloaded all his goods and spent the next hour putting them on shelves. When he was done, Czajkowski helped other volunteers unpack and shelve the mountain of canned donations that were delivered to the food pantry.

"There would be 15 minutes when things were quiet and then you'd be up and about for an hour and a half," Czajkowski said.

Probably the biggest and most important realization for Czajkowski was just how kind and appreciative the homeless people he met were. He plans to go back and volunteer during the holiday season later in the year.

"They were very nice people," Czajkowski said of the homeless individuals he chatted with.

Like all of the projects, Czajkowski's presentation was well received. "They gave me a round of applause and told me good job," he said.

Bettyanne Lang, Manager of Material Assistance, manages the food pantry at Interfaith Social Services, was impressed with Czajkowski's work. Last year, 450,000 pounds of food was collected, while 17,000 unemployed and homeless were served.

"He's a nice young man," Lang said of Czajkowski. "He was enthusiastic when he came down and presented his plan. He did a good job and saw things through. Philip's part of the future.

"All the volunteers are really helpful."

Trivia Literacy Fundraiser At Crane Library March 23

Literacy Volunteers of Massachusetts – Quincy at the Thomas Crane Public Library will hold its annual fundraiser Wednesday, March 23 from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Since last year's trivia event was so successful, participants have requested that the same fundraiser be done again this year.

To participate, put together a team of friends or co-workers. This is a team event – pool your knowledge to win.

Donation for the event is $20 per player.

The fun evening will feature a raffle, refreshments and prizes as well as some surprises.

All proceeds will benefit The Literacy Project and will be used to purchase reading and writing materials and training for tutor-student pairs.

The Crane Library Literacy program serves adults on the South Shore. Dedicated volunteers are trained and matched through LVM-Quincy and have provided free tutoring to adults in basic reading and writing since 1985.

LVM-Quincy is an accredited affiliate of the national network of Pro Literacy America and his one of 13 LVM programs statewide.

Trivia jockey, Phil Beatti, will emcee the evening. He is donating his time and expertise to the fundraiser and will challenge participants on a variety of topics.

Space is limited. For a registration form and more information, call Mary Diggle at 617-376-1314 or email quliteracy@ocln.org.

Steve Mele To Be Inducted Into Archbishop Williams HS Athletic Hall of Fame

By SEAN BRENNAN

Steve Mele grew up playing basketball on an adjustable hoop in the backyard of his childhood home on Adams Street. Years later, all of his practice and hard work would bring him accolades, both on an individual stage and in the team sense, as he enjoyed a three-year run at Archbishop Williams High School (Braintree) starring on both the school's basketball and baseball teams before graduating in 1973.

Mele, whose father is the legendary Sam Mele, a former Boston Red Sox standout and longtime scout and manager of the Minnesota Twins' 1965 American League pennant winning team, finished his high school basketball career with close to 1,000 points scored. During his senior year, he led both the basketball and baseball programs at AWHS as a team captain and among his many individual achievements while in high school included being named a Catholic League All-Star, in basketball and baseball, in 1972 and 1973; being named to the 1973 Boston Globe All-Scholastic Basketball Team, and being named to The Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic Basketball Team in 1973.

Mele, who was also a high school National Honor Society student, would go on to graduate from AWHS before traveling north to Hanover, New Hampshire to attend the Ivy League's Dartmouth College.

There he continued to be a two-sport star for the Big Green. He played basketball and baseball for Dartmouth, captaining both programs as a freshman.

On March 26, at a 6 p.m. ceremony to be held at Lantana in Randolph, Steve Mele will receive Archbishop Williams' highest athletic honor: an induction into the Bishops' Athletic Hall of Fame as a member of the Class of 2011.

"It really is an honor," said Mele of his upcoming Hall of Fame induction during a phone interview with The Quincy Sun last week. "I played a long time ago and to have people remember you after so long is special. My father is in three or four Hall of Fames, so I was joking with him that I was catching up. I was never the athlete that he was but it is a special honor and I am sure that it will bring back some great memories."

Mele was unsure about who may have nominated him or as to how he was selected for inclusion into this exclusive fraternity, but he made sure to credit his former teammates and coaches for everything that he accomplished while playing two sports at Archbishop Williams.

"(The) induction came as a surprise," Mele stated. "I really don't know how it works, but I attended the ceremony last year when my former teammate and my friend Bob Carrington was inducted. He was a tremendous player for Archies and he went on to become Boston College's all-time leading scorer (his mark of 1,849 points stood for more than 20 years) and he later played in the NBA (with New Jersey, Indiana and San Diego)."

"When we played together teams would always gang up on him and leave me open to take my outside shot," Mele continued. "I was a pretty good player but he was great. I was like Scottie Pippen to his Michael Jordan, which was fine by me."

Mele also credited coaches Bob Barrett and Chuck Chevalier for his schoolboy success as well as former teammates Jack and Danny Finnegan and John Downey.

Currently working as a loan officer with Guaranteed Rate Mortgage Company in Boston, Mele remembered with great respect the influence that Archbishop Williams had on his development from a young kid to a young adult. It was a time in his life when many kids his age were caught up in the cultural revolutions of the late 1960s and early 1970s, a time when, for many, rebellion ruled the roost.

"The biggest thing that Archbishop Williams blessed us with was discipline," he said. "At Archies it was the nuns. They kept us in line. When I was there it was the beginning of an era when my generation was feeling its oats and there was a lot of stuff going on. Not that I was personally involved in any of that, but the nuns definitely kept the discipline first and foremost."

"But it was a loving discipline," he fondly remembered. "It taught me how to conduct myself and respect myself and others. What I learned there has carried over to my life today."

Before Mele began his storied run for the Bishops, he developed his athletic foundation through the Quincy Recreation Department with the guidance of some great staff leaders and coaches. Mele continued his involvement with the QRD throughout his high school and college years working for the same programs that shaped his early years.

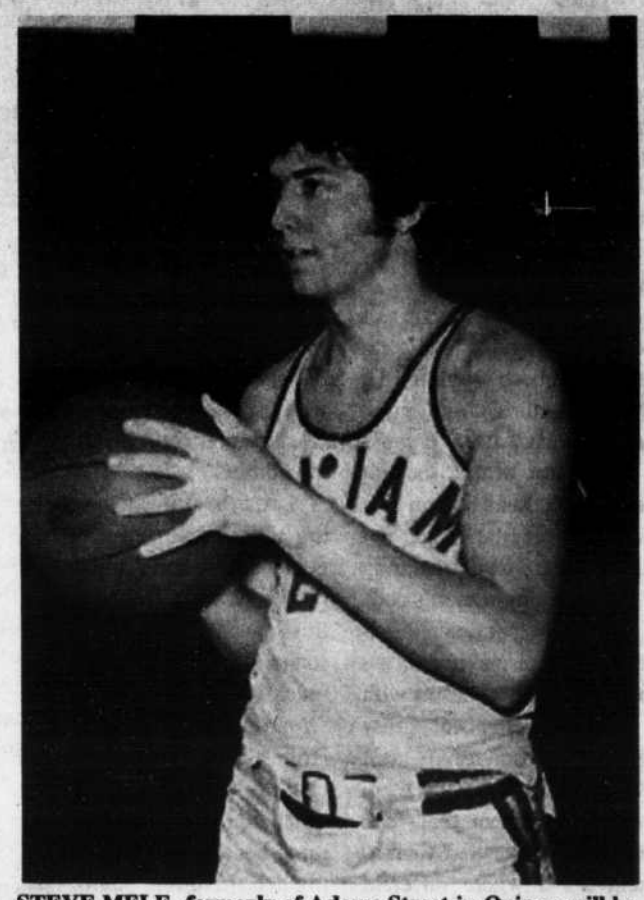
"I grew up on Adams Street and I played sports through the Quincy Recreation Department," he said looking back. "I had some great coaches who taught me how to play the game the right way. During high school and college I was an employee of the Recreation Department and I tried to teach the kids under me about playing the game the right way and, most importantly, how to win the right way and how to lose the right way.

"It was a great learning experience and a lot of fun."

Mele's athletic prowess was aided, not only by family genetics, but also by his inner drive to great; a fact that was never lost on his father, Sam Mele.

"(He) did it all on his own," said Sam Mele proudly. "As soon as he could hold a ball he was out practicing. I was All-New York in basketball (Mele played at New York University) and my ability was driving toward the basket, but I could never shoot the outside shot like Stevie. He did it all by himself. And he was a damn good player."

"My wife and I never missed a game," continued Mele. "He earned this Hall of Fame induction."



Despite his father's claims that his son accomplished everything on his own accord, Steve Mele always took to the hardwood or the baseball diamond with some extra motivation to live up to his family's athletic legacy.

"My Dad was a very good basketball player at NYU and he played in the old Madison Square Garden," Steve said. "He always said that if he could shoot like me he could have been an NBA player. My Dad always motivated me to just be my best and be as good as I could be. I tried to live up to his name."

Steve Mele, since his days playing high school basketball and baseball for the Bishops and, later for Dartmouth College, has continued to live his life everyday with the same values bestowed on him by his family and by the nuns, teachers, coaches and teammates he had at AWHS.

Living now in Centerville, he coaches his children's baseball and basketball teams and is active in his local church Bible study group and is also involved in a local mentoring program for young children. Mele was a recent recipient of the Barnstable Little League Award for Years of Service to that organization.

"It is going to be a great night for me and my family," he concluded. "I am really looking forward to it."

STEVE MELE, formerly of Adams Street in Quincy, will be inducted into the Archbishop Williams HS Hall of Fame on March 26. Mele, a 1973 graduate, was a basketball and baseball star for the Bishops.

Gino Marini – Legendary AWHS Golf Coach

The late Gino Marini, of Braintree, formerly a Quincy resident, will be inducted into the Archbishop Williams High School Athletic Hall of Fame, posthumously, alongside Steve Mele on March 26 at a ceremony held at Lantana in Randolph.

Mr. Marini had a remarkable 25-year career as the golf coach at AWHS. During his tenure he developed a strong, winning golf program, which he built from the ground up. When the interest in golf was low, he approached student Mike Glennon to recruit his fellow hockey players, many of who had no golf experience; Mr. Marini's biggest challenge was teaching these players the difference between a slap shot and a golf swing.

As a parent and grandparent of four AWHS graduates, Mr. Marini was a dedicated member of the staff at Archies. He was the head coach of the golf program from 1976-2001, a position that he humbly volunteered for.

As a young man he played minor league baseball for the New York Yankees in 1941 until he was drafted into the United States Army during World War II. He later became a successful business owner and president of Fashion Quality Cleaners.

An Army veteran of World War II, he served with the 1st Cavalry Division in the South Pacific. He was past president and a member of John Adams Club and North Quincy Business and Professional Association, and past chairman and former member of Quincy City Hospital board of managers.

Program Ends Year at 6-11-2; Team Graduates Two Seniors, Returns Several Underclassmen

Q/NQ Has Aspirations Of State Tourney Next Winter

By JOE REARDON

This is the tough time of year where high school teams that missed the tournament shake their heads and think of what could have been, what should have been, as they watch from the outside in their own schoolboy purgatory.

The disappointment of not qualifying for the postseason has been tough for the Quincy/North Quincy girls' hockey squad. After a 5-11-3 record last winter, second-year coach Dan McLean saw his squad play far better, but still wind up with a frustrating 6-11-2 mark by season's end.

So does McLean envision his team playing in the tournament next season with a more experienced, gritty squad? "Absolutely," said McLean. "But I saw them in the tournament this year. Once you make that tournament it's a whole different season, it really is. Last year, Canton was 15-1 and then got bumped out in the first round of the postseason. These are teams that we can beat and that's frustrating. I try to get the girls to realize that there isn't any team in this league that we can't beat.

"I tell the girls the 18 or 19 games we play are practice for the playoffs."

It's hardly a stretch to view the team as a tourney contender again next year. Q/NQ beat a handful of proven tourney teams, including Mount St. Joseph's three times since last season. The team led a tough Medfield squad heading into the third period before coming back to Earth and falling in a close tilt. Q/NQ jumped all over perennial power Franklin with two early goals on the way to a big 2-1 decision. Both Stephanie DiPetro and Leah Ryan drilled home tallies in a tough, 4-2 loss to Franklin that saw Q/NQ skate with the tourney team for three entire periods.

"They've always been a very physical team," McLean said of the victory over Franklin. "It was 2-0 right away and for us that was awesome. Now Franklin was frustrated and they started playing against themselves. We played very well against Medfield and Medway. Once the girls saw they could play with the better teams, the morale boosted right up, it was awesome."

Look for Q/NQ to be playing with a true sense of urgency next winter; something that just wasn't there with this season's young, growing squad. The team was "much, much better" than its record. "You even see it with the Bruins," said McLean. "It's hanging onto a lead. Sometimes it's not such a good thing because you start playing defensive and you're flat on your feet. You start playing against the clock and not playing the game you played the first two periods.

"What I try to get the girls to imagine is that we're down 1-0 or 2-1, even when we're ahead. They almost start playing against one another instead of being on the same team. Then they start panicking."

McLean had to do a quick bit of coaching on the fly early in the season when the team was hit with injuries and the flu bug. Q/NQ was shorthanded as a result and wound up dropping its first three games. McLean immediately moved four forwards back to defense to strengthen the team in front of the net.

The changed proved to be a good one as Q/NQ reeled off four contests without a loss. McLean said having players on the sideline, whether it be because of sickness or injury, takes its toll. "If someone's out, it really throws things off," he said. "We only get 50 minutes of ice for practice, but by the time you get rocking an rolling it's 40 minutes."

Despite the disappointment of not playing into March, it's tough to envision the future of Q/NQ as anything but bright.

The team has a lot of promise for next season and McLean hopes to see a squad playing a more aggressive style of hockey, not just in spurts but consistently. Barring defection to private school, Q/NQ returns all but two players, seniors Jamie Shaughnessy and Shannon Coleman.

Goaltending has been a particular strength with Coleman and Erin McGinnis between the posts. "I was very fortunate to have two great goalies," said McLean. "Shannon was phenomenal. She was very, very good. She wasn't even a goalie. She was a very good athlete and they (youth coaches) put her in the net a handful of years ago."

Freshman Stephanie DiPetro was a big pickup for the varsity squad this year and should be even better next season. She wound up with four goals and a boatload of respect from the older players. "This year we were more of a unit," said McLean. "It helped that all the freshmen were decent hockey players because they got the respect of the other girls because of their ability to play the game."

McLean also watched his third line of Caroline Kiley, Danielle Mullaney and Leah Ryan blossom as the season went on. The girls became more confident with every game and should make even more of an impact for Q/NQ next year with a season of experience playing together.

"I think that we progressed as a team as the season went along," said Shaughnessy, who has her sights set on Salve Regina next fall. "We struggled a little bit at the end of last year and the beginning of this season, but we found the motivation and started succeeding as the year moved along, for the most part."

Shaughnessy, who has been playing competitively since the second grade on the Quincy Youth and Quincy Travel teams, said the youngsters coming back would have to take their collective games to the next level if they intend to make a tourney run next winter. The competition, she said, is simply too tough for a team to level off and remain competitive.

"Most of the team was sophomores and juniors," she said. "We were young enough to have some improvement and I definitely think this will be a super strong program next year.

"(Girls hockey) is way more popular now and that makes it much more competitive. If Q/NQ wants to keep getting better, they are going to have to stay committed, but I see (the rise of girls hockey) as a good thing for hockey."

What McLean was especially excited about was the team's willingness to learn and desire to improve. The hustle was there in practice and it translated to solid efforts on game day. "When they scored a goal they would come back to the bench with the look on their face that they achieved what coach was trying to get them to do," said McLean.

"I think once they see how the game is played, they realize they don't have to be the fastest or the strongest. You use your head and playing the game the way it's supposed to be played."

What the team was lacking this year and must be addressed next winter is playing with a "sense of urgency." Too often, Q/NQ would have a lead and instead of keeping the pressure on its opponent, would sit back on defense. McLean believed it had more to do with the team's youth than a lack of desire, but it's a facet of the game that needs to improve if the squad has aspirations for a postseason berth.

McLean is as much a teacher as a coach. He breaks the game down into small increments that make up the entire time on the ice. Analogies, he believes, are a good way at getting his point across clearly to his club.

When they're on a break, for example, McLean tells his players that instead of turning around to see where other players are at, it's easier to look at the reflection in the glass around the boards. As for practice, well, the girls could relate.

"You guys take your time, put extra makeup on and straighten your hair because you're trying to impress a boy. So, here at practice, the game is the boy. You have to do extra things because you want to play better."

To McLean, though, it's the effort the team puts out that resonates more for him. If the effort is there, the wins will take care of themselves.

"I have the girls try to be the best at whatever they chose to do," said McLean. "I don't care if they lose every game, as long as they know they've done their best, then they win.

"Any game we lose, we try to take something from that and try to make the next game better. Then you're ahead of the game."

A Perfect Season

The Quincy Lions Club will hold its 14th Annual Run/Walk for Sight on Sat., April 23 at Pageant Field. Online registration is currently open at www.quincylionsclub.org/2011-Run-Walk-For-Sight.html.

Day-of-race registration will begin April 23 at 9 a.m., followed by the children's 1K race at 10:30 a.m. The adult 5K run/walk, which is on a course certified by U.S. Track & Field, begins at 11 a.m. Prizes will be awarded to race winners in a number of categories and the first 200 registrants will receive a free race T-shirt and runner's giveaway bag.

The registration fee is $20 for adults and $5 for the children's 1K race and includes a buffet lunch following the races. There will also be entertainment and a prize raffle.

"The Run/Walk for Sight is a fun event for the whole family," said Quincy Lions Club President Loretta McTiernan. "The local community has been very supportive of the Lions Club's efforts to help blind and visually impaired individuals and we hope everyone will come out and enjoy this fun and worthwhile event."

Proceeds from the Run/Walk benefit eye research and the Quincy Lions Club's community service activities, including providing free eye exams and free eyeglasses for local residents in need, offering free vision and health screenings, providing college scholarships to local high school students and more.

Free Basic Boating Courses Provided By QPD

The Quincy Marine Unit, in partnership with the Massachusetts Environmental Police, will be presenting three Basic Boating Safety Courses at no cost to the public. These courses are designed for persons of all ages, regardless of boating skill.

Courses are nationally approved and course completion will allow persons to legally operate a boat in states requiring Basic Boating Safety Courses. Everyone who completes the course will be issued a Basic Boating Safety Certificate.

Completion of the course by persons between 12 to 16 years of age will allow them to operate a motorboat without adult supervision. You must be at least 12 years old to register for the class. In addition, some insurance companies offer policy discounts for customers that complete a Basic Boating Safety Course.

All of the courses will be taught at the Houghs Neck Maritime Center, located at 137 Bay View Ave (next to the Quincy Yacht Club on Sea Street).

The three courses will be taught on the following dates:

Saturday afternoon class 12-4 p.m., March 26, April 2 and April 9;

Tuesday evening class 6-10 p.m., April 12, April 19 and April 26 and,

Saturday morning class 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., April 30, May 7 and May 14.

To register for a course or for more information, call the Massachusetts Environmental Police at 508-759-0002.

Young Red Raiders Set Sights On Next Season

By SEAN BRENNAN

Their season ended in a Div. 1 South preliminary round game with a 41-36 loss to Needham High School, but the North Quincy Red Raiders are a team on the rise following a 10-10 regular season; a slate of games which bore witness to a handful of underclassmen stepping into prominent roles and making immediate contributions.

Next year's squad should be more improved because of this development.

North Quincy graduates two seniors – Paul Gould and Jiabau Shang – but returns a core of eleven underclassmen that gained considerable big game experience this winter, setting up the 2011-2012 Red Raiders with young foundation that should have that extra drive to succeed.

Returning to the hardwood next December will be incoming seniors Joe Brown, Devon Simmons, Matty Costa, Ryan Evans, Tim Liuzzo and Paul Cunniff and incoming juniors Pat Gould, Dan Gould and Marquis McClendon as well as incoming sophomores Efthim Butka and Greg Clarke.

The first sign that this would be a year filled with future promise began right from the opening jump ball. The Red Raiders, in their season opener against Quincy, rallied from nine points down in the second half, on the Presidents' home court, and used an 8-2 scoring run to close out the game, 53-52.

"I am definitely happy with what we accomplished this season," said NQHS coach Kevin Barrett. "We should be able to build next year on what we developed this season. These kids gained some big game experience and got to play in a tournament game."

"We hit the ground running," continued Barrett. "The poise that we showed all year was evident in that first game against Quincy. We fell behind right away but executed the game plan and walked out of their gym with a nice win."

The fast start was just what Barrett hoped to see from his young program. There was a slight concern that an almost complete turnover of the roster from the 2009-2010 season would be an issue, but it was not the case, as this collection of players bought into the Red Raider way, using off-season games as a means to unify and solidify as a team.

"There was some concern about that complete turnover in cast," stated Barrett. "But I saw early last off-season that these guys were willing to put in the time to become better players. It started last spring and carried over throughout the summer. These guys came into the season and ascended into their roles and contributed on the big stage."

Underclassmen of note included starters Liuzzo, a team captain as a junior, Cunniff, McClendon and Dan and Pat Gould. There is work to be done for all of them, notably building strength and improving their toughness, but those are concerns that should be alleviated with more time in the weight room and natural teenage growth.

"Basketball at the varsity level is very aggressive," said Barrett. "We need to continue to get physically tougher and stronger but that should come. We are not the biggest team and our size and height difference was a sometimes a matchup problem, but if these kids continue to be committed and work hard during the spring and summer, playing in games and hitting the gym, we should be prepared."

With the potential for each player to compete in close to a 70-game off-season schedule, which begins at the end of the month, the young Red Raiders have an opportunity to grow as a program.

This formula worked for many of the underclassmen that suited up this winter. The case study, for those questioning such a rigorous strategy, was junior Paul Cunniff. The 5'11" forward was never the tallest or strongest post player on the court, but he always gave 100%, and sometimes being the aggressor and playing with no fear, is what needs to be done to succeed.

"Paul really worked hard to become a more complete player last off-season," praised Barrett. "He worked his way into his role and became our team MVP. He was a guy that realized that roles could change and it was his commitment that really stood out."

Liuzzo, a smooth 6'3" forward, and guard Dan Gould, listed at 5'7," provide North Quincy with intriguing inside-outside possibilities for the future. Liuzzo opened the season with a 19-point, 13 rebound showing against the Presidents, and despite his frame, which could use some bulk, he earned himself a spot on the Patriot League All-Star team.

Dan Gould finished the season as a consistent offensive threat. His best games came in the biggest moments. Gould scored 13 points in North Quincy's tourney-clinching 60-48 victory over Whitman-Hanson; he would lead all Red Raider scorers in the state playoff versus Needham with 21 points. He also was named to the Patriot League All-Star team.

Pat Gould, Matty Costa and Ryan Evans should all be improved next year as well.

The wild card for the Raiders in 2011-2012 may very well be sophomore Marquis McClendon. The dynamic guard was inserted into the starting lineup midway through the year and all he did was produce. McClendon's speed brought a different dimension to the floor; his career-high 21 points against W-H was his season high point. McClendon's sophomore season ended with a Patriot League All-Star nod.

With a roster that was wet-behind-the-ears in regards to the rigors of playing varsity hoops, seniors Paul Gould (captain) and Jiabau Shang, were class act leaders.

"My two seniors were awesome," Barrett said with appreciation. "They were really good leaders in terms of what it takes to play North Quincy basketball. But it wasn't just what they did (on the court), these two are both honor roll students and work as hard in the classroom as they do on the court. Their leadership is going to be missed."

North Quincy may not have won a league title, or, a South Sectional playoff game, but the Red Raiders were recognized by the Patriot League with the annual Sportsmanship Team Award. An impressive accolade for a team that was so young. If you can win, or more importantly, lose a game with class, it probably means that you have a team willing to do whatever it takes to become better, overall.

"These kids are all phenomenal athletes, but they are even better students," Barrett concluded. "They get it done in the classroom and are a pleasure to coach and to be around. There is no question that we will be better because of it next year. We got a taste of the tournament and want to get back; not just to play one game but hopefully make some noise."

Track Teams Honored

At a banquet, held March 8 at the Koch Recreation Center, the Quincy & North Quincy High School winter track teams handed out end-of-the-year awards for the 2010-2011 indoor track seasons.

These two teams represented their high schools in the highly competitive Patriot League. Coaches Geoff Hennessy, John Green, Casey Deguearo and Tony Green were present to recognize all team members and to acknowledge the student-athletes for excellence in performance and team spirit. Many of the student-athlete's parents were in attendance and a pot lick dinner, provided by the kids and their parents was served.

The following is a list of the individual award winners:

John Green and Rose Bennett, Team MVP Award;

Dan Green and Carolyn Schwartz, Coaches Award;

Nick Gillespie and Kayla Sugrue, Unsung Hero Award;

Jen Scarnici and Kayla Sugrue, Attendance Award;

Greg Nelson, Profiles in Courage Award;

Ben O'Brien and Amanda Hyslip Rookie Award, and Erica Brady, Patriot League All-Star Team Award.

Quincy's Half Marathon To Be Held March 20

The Half of Quincy, a local half marathon, will be held on March 20.

The race, which is in a good position to provide a time trial to anyone taking on the Boston Marathon in April, is a 13.1-mile race starting at the new Quincy High School just outside of Quincy Center; the race then travels by Mount Wollaston Cemetery through Merrymount along Wollaston Beach, around Squantum Peninsula and Marina Bay, along the Neponset River by the State Street South Complex, through Montclair, Wollaston, West Quincy on Adams Street by the Adams National Historic Park and back to QHS through Quincy Square, passing by City Hall, The Hancock Cemetery and United First Parish Church.

The race, which has been enthusiastically welcomed by the city will generate funds for the running programs at the two city high schools and four middle schools as well as the Quincy Track Club, the Quincy Police's DARE program, the South Shore YMCA and the Dana Farber Marathon Challenge.

Runners receive technical shirts specifically designed for the race by Keezer Sportswear and will be hosted by Quincy High School with registration and number pickup in the school's gymnasium with bag drop off and pick up after the race. Post race replenishment in the cafeteria is provided by the Culinary Arts program at QHS.

For more information regarding this event, whether to run it, help by volunteering to be a partner through sponsorship or just watch and encourage the runners, visit the website at www.halfofquincy.com or reach JJ Larner, Race Director, via email at kellyandjj@aol.com or by phone at 617-909-6726.

American Academy Of Ophthalmology Offers New Eye Health Website

(NAPS)-Ever wonder how smoking affects your eyesight?

How to care for your eyes during pregnancy?

How often you should get your eyes examined?

Answers to these questions can be found at a new website-www.GetEyeSmart.org.

The new site is the most trusted online resource for reliable, unbiased eye care information. The site volumes of important eye health content written and reviewed by ophthalmologists (Eye M.D.s).

The American Academy of Ophthalmology (Academy) has launched www.GetEyeSmart.org in order to help educate consumers about eye diseases and conditions, vision correction and the preservation of healthy vision across a lifetime.

EyeSmart delivers information on the symptoms, causes, diagnosis and treatment of common eye diseases and conditions-illustrated with photos and interactive elements, including animations, diagrams and dozens of informative videos. Much of the site is translated into Spanish as well. In addition, the website also provides:

• Recommendations for "Living EyeSmart" in a new section devoted to healthy vision tips and what consumers need to know about their eye health based on their age and other lifestyle factors;

• Online vision simulators to show how certain eye diseases and conditions can impact sight;

• "Ask an Eye M.D.": a searchable database of commonly asked eye health questions, plus the ability for visitors to submit new questions to an Academy panel of experts;

• A free electronic newsletter focusing on healthy vision.

The Academy's Eye M.D.s will add new eye care topics to the GetEyeSmart.org website, plus the site will feature up-to-date news on the latest research developments that can impact people's eye health. Articles from EyeSmart can also be easily shared to social networking sites.

"I will be letting all my patients know about the Eye Smart website, because I know what they read there is accurate, timely and reliable," said Andrew G. Iwach, M.D., a glaucoma specialist. "With EyeSmart, the public can trust that experienced eye physicians and surgeons stand behind the information, and that making sure people get the best possible care for their eyes is our goal."

VOICE FOR HEALTH

CHIROPRACTIC CAN HELP IN A PINCH

The term "pinched nerve" refers to a nerve that has been compressed, constricted, or stretched. As a result, numbness, pain, burning sensations, and radiating pain in the area served by the nerve are likely to be experienced. The reason behind the nerve compression/constriction can be a herniated disc or bone spur that intrudes in the canal space between vertebrae through which nerve roots pass. Perhaps the best known example of pain and muscle weakness caused by nerve constriction is "sciatica," which involves pressure exerted on the longest nerve in the body by a ruptured or herniated disc. Chiropractic treatment can help by relieving compression and loosening muscles in an effort to reduce inflammation and corresponding pain.

We need to do all that we can to keep our nerves healthy. Without healthy nerves the body is weakened and not able to adapt to environmental stresses. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we do not include medication or surgery in our treatment program. The doctor of chiropractic is a gatekeeper to the health care system and an independent practitioner who provides primary care services. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Tips For Taking Medication And Staying Healthy (NAPS)-Have you ever skipped a dose of a prescription drug or taken less than prescribed? Have you ever started taking a prescribed medicine and then stopped? Or have there been times when you did not even pick up the first prescription of a new medicine prescribed by your doctor from the pharmacy? Did you know that not taking medicines as prescribed by your doctor for chronic conditions, such as high blood pressure or diabetes, can make you sicker and even result in a hospital stay or emergency room visit that could have been avoided? This is called "medication nonadherence," an issue that not only impacts your health, but also results in estimated costs to the U.S. health care system of approximately $300 billion each year.

Some of the most common reasons for not taking medicines regularly include cost and side effects, but a recent study found there are also more subtle reasons, which people may not even realize are influencing their behavior. The study, sponsored by CVS Caremark and conducted by Minds at Work, a consulting company based in Cambridge, Mass., looked at people who said they would like to be taking their medicine as prescribed but weren't completely sure why they were not. The study revealed that, of those individuals who participated in the survey:

TAKING YOUR medicine regularly is not always easy-but the benefits are just what the doctor ordered.

• Twenty-four percent believed that taking prescribed medicines interfered with personal priorities, such as taking care of family members or their social life.

• Twenty-one percent said that taking medicine made them feel as if they were losing control of their lives and by stopping their medicine they were "resisting authority."

• Seventeen percent believed that taking medicine made them feel old or gave them another identity (i.e., as a patient) that they didn't like.

Recognizing the reasons why you are not taking a prescribed medicine can be the first step toward addressing the problem, getting back on track and staying healthy. Here are some other tips for keeping up with your prescriptions:

• If cost is a concern, consider switching from a brand-name medicine to a generic. Generic medicines offer a safe and effective option at a fraction of the cost. In fact, hundreds of popular brand-name drugs are now available as generics, which can help you save 30-80 percent on prescription drug costs.

• Talk to your health care professional. If medication side effects are bothering you, talk with your doctor, nurse or pharmacist-you might be able to switch to a different medicine or adjust the timing of your dose to lessen the problem.

Getting Help With Prescription Drugs

The Partnership for Prescription Assistance can help you get more than 2,500 medicines through 475 different patient assistance programs. It can make a big difference in being able to afford your medications if you have a low income or do not have any drug-coverage insurance.

If you have online access, go to www.pparx.org and click on Get Help Now to find out if you're eligible. There are four steps: Tell them what medicines you currently take, give some information about yourself and the type of drug coverage you have, get the results, then print out the application. There might be more than one, if you're applying to multiple programs. In the information section, you'll need to disclose your age, ZIP code, total household income and eligibility for various types of coverage.

The programs have different criteria, so if you don't qualify for one, you might qualify for another. The website will help you sort that out, and if you have multiple medications, you might well end up in more than one program. For example, you might have a Medicare drug discount card and still be eligible for a prescription assistance program.

In most cases, you can fill out the program's application right there online. Then you'll print it out and take it to your doctor for his or her signature and specifics about your medication.

Depending on your eligibility, you could end up not paying anything for your drugs. The prescriptions themselves will be sent either directly to you or to your doctor's office.

If you don't have access to a computer, you can call 1-888-477-2669 to go through the eligibility questions. Then someone will send the forms to your doctor to complete and mail or fax back to them.

Heart Failure Can Cause Feet to Swell

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please explain why I have to take my shoes off late every day because my feet and ankles have swollen and don't fit into the shoes. I flop around in slippers without heels. In the morning, after a night's sleep, my feet are back to normal. I am 77 and take no medicines. –K.M.

ANSWER: I can't give you an unequivocal response because there are numerous causes of foot and ankle swelling.

The medical name for such swelling is edema. Even in relatively healthy people, it occurs if people sit or stand for any length of time. Gravity pulls fluid out of the circulation, and it accumulates in the feet and ankles. This is especially true at older ages, when the circulatory system becomes somewhat leaky.

For this kind of swelling, the solution is to elevate the legs when sitting. The most effective elevation is raising the legs above heart level, something that can be done only by lying down with pillows propping up the legs. Getting up and moving about is another way to prevent fluid accumulation in the feet.

Heart failure is a more serious cause of such swelling. When the heart's pumping action becomes feeble, fluid escapes from blood vessels and again accumulates in the ankles and feet. Kidney disease with retention of body fluid is another cause of edema. Liver disease does the same.

Another condition called lymphedema produces the same picture. Lymph is fluid that normally escapes the circulation to percolate around tissues and organs to provide nourishment and to wash away germs. Small vessels called lymphatics vacuum up this fluid and return it to the circulation. Anything that disrupts lymphatics can lead to ankle/foot swelling. An old infection and surgery are two such disruptors.

Since ankle and foot swelling is a sign of many urgent medical conditions, don't fool around with this. See your family doctor.

The booklet on edema and lymphedema clearly describe these conditions and their treatment. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue – No. 106W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am concerned about my brother, who is 63, diabetic, weighs 300 pounds and is 5 feet 8 inches tall. He falls asleep, wakes and falls asleep repeatedly at the table and when he sits down. Why? He says he's tired. He picked a scab on his leg and blood squirted out 6 inches. What does that mean? –Anon.

ANSWER: Your brother might have sleep apnea. His body size suggests that it could be the reason for his daytime sleepiness. Spurting blood indicates that an artery was broken. No one should pick at scabs, especially a diabetic.

Your brother needs medical attention. He has to lose weight both for control of diabetes and for control of sleep apnea, if that is what he has. He is at great risk of incurring the complications of diabetes – heart attack, stroke, blindness, kidney failure – if he doesn't start paying attention to his health.

Temple Beth El, B'Nai Shalom To Hold Purim Celebrations

Purim is the holiday that celebrates how the Jews of ancient Persia were saved from extermination at the hands of Haman, an evil advisor to the King.

Purim's heroine is Queen Esther, who persuaded the king to save the Jews and punish Haman instead. The story appears in the Book of Esther or "the megillah."

Purim customs and practices include dressing up in costumes, making noise with graggers to drown out Haman's name during the megillah reading, and eating Hamantaschen, a triangle shaped cookie.

This year, Temple Beth El of Quincy and Temple B'Nai Shalom of Braintree will hold joint celebrations.

On March 19 at 6:30 p.m., Cantor Seth Grossman will lead the megillah reading at Temple B'Nai Shalom, 41 Storrs Ave., Braintree.

On March 20 at 10 a.m., a musical celebration led by Rabbi Navah Levine, will be held at Temple Beth El, 1001 Hancock St., Quincy.

For more information, contact Temple Beth El at 617-479-4309 or visit www.templebethelquincy.org.

The programs are free of charge and refreshments will be served.

Bethany Congregational

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

How young a person are you? Are you a tired 30 year-old or a vibrant 70 year-old? A wise person once said that age is not measured by years. Nature does not equally distribute energy. Some people are born old and tired while others are going strong at 70 . . .

"Youth is not a time of life; it is a state of mind; it is the temper of the will; a quality of the imagination; a vigor of the emotions; a predominance of courage over timidity. Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years; people grow old only by deserting their ideals. Years wrinkle the skin, but to give up enthusiasm wrinkles the soul. Worry, doubt, self-distrust, fear, and despair are the long, long years of aging. Whether 70 or 16, there is in every being's heart the love of wonder, the sweet amazement at the stars and the star-like things and thoughts, the unfailing child-like appetite for what is next, and the joy and the game of life. You are as young as your hope, as old as your despair. So long as your heart receives messages of beauty, cheer, courage, grandeur and power from the earth, from man and from the Infinite, so long you are young."*

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The week promises a calmer aspect. Although there might be some lingering effects of a recent job problem, things should continue to ease up. Also expect a change in a home-based situation.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) If you feel uneasy about a colleague's suggestion, it might be that your wise inner Taurean guide is alerting you to a potential problem. Stepping away could turn out to be the right thing to do.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A family get-together opens up new opportunities for renewing ties. It can be especially effective in dealing with disagreements that should have been, but never were, fully resolved.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might be surprised at the response you get to a recent decision. You might be even more surprised by the reasons behind it. In any event, you'll learn something important.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your aspects favor resolving any tensions left over from a recent incident. You might want to consider having a "clear the air" talk as soon as you can. A call can lead to a change of plans.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Avoid repeating yourself. If your first few efforts fail to connect, maybe it's because you haven't found the right way to get your message across. Try changing your approach.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Good intentions plus a strong resolve to succeed can take you where you want to go. Don't give up just because someone suggests you might be pursuing an impossible cause.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An unexpected setback can be a blessing in disguise. Use it to recheck your facts and how you've presented them. Meanwhile, look for ways to expand your contacts.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You should finally be seeing a positive change in a recent personal situation. However, an on-the-job matter might need more attention than you realized. Stay with it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While you should be close to completing an important matter, you still need to focus on being focused. But things ease up in time for weekend fun with family and friends.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A certain matter might take an unexpected turn. Don't simply accept it; ask for an explanation. What you learn might be helpful in shifting the situation around to your benefit.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Projecting a positive attitude helps restore calm even when you're confronting some pretty stormy situations. Stay the course. The outcome will be well worth your efforts.

BORN THIS WEEK: While you enjoy tradition and stability, you also appreciate the good things that change can bring.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

To all persons interested in the above captioned estate, a petition has been presented requesting that a document purporting to be the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that Peter E. Devore of Babylon, NY, Richard Devore of Quincy, MA, Vincent W. Devore of Asheville, NC be appointed executor/trix, named in the will to serve Without Surety.

IF YOU DESIRE TO OBJECT THERETO, YOU OR YOUR ATTORNEY MUST FILE A WRITTEN APPEARANCE IN SAID COURT AT: Canton ON OR BEFORE TEN O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING (10:00AM) ON 04/06/2011.

In addition, you must file a written affidavit of objections to the petition, stating specific facts and grounds upon which the objection is based, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

WITNESS, Hon. Angela M. Ordoñez, First Justice of this Court.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN

"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer 3 consecutive days, and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. D.S. 3/17

Proposed Post Island Road Turbine Neighborhood Meeting Topic March 24

Ward 1 Councilor Margaret Laforest will host a neighborhood meeting Thursday, March 24 regarding the application of homeowners Charles and Annete Cote and Tim Holmes of Sunwind to install two residential wind turbines on their home at 68 Post Island Rd.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 300 Manet Ave., Quincy.

The Cotes currently have a solar photovoltaic system and if combined with wind power, anticipates accounting for 75% of their home power needs. Each turbine has a diameter of 7 feet and is 10 feet tall and if placed atop their 39 foot home would have a total height of 49 feet.

The applicant will present information to neighbors on this proposal and answer questions on the imapcts in a residential area. This application will also be reviewed at a future zoning board of appeals meeting. For more information, call Laforest at 617-376-1351.

Here are great ideas that will cut calories from your daily intake, possibly without your even noticing:

Small Changes Add Up:

Downsize Your Dishes. Use smaller plates and bowls to help you eat less.

Savor Your Meals. Eating slowly helps you consume only what your body needs to feel satisfied.

Don't Eat Out of a Bag or Box. When you eat out of a package, you are likely to keep eating until it's all gone.

Choose Your Glass Wisely. Use a slender glass for any beverage except water.

Rethink Your Drinks. High-calorie beverages like juice and soft drinks, energy drinks and specialty coffees add calories just like solid foods. Replace these drinks with plenty of water.

Day time and evening hours are available. Please call a Manet location below to book your appointment!

Up 4,246 or 4.82% From 2000 Count

Federal Census: Population 92,271

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Quincy's population has grown by nearly five percent over the last 10 years, according to the 2010 Federal Census which sets the city at 92,271 residents according to numbers released Tuesday.

The 92,271 census figure represents an increase of 4,246 citizens or 4.82 percent compared to the 2000 Census which counted 88,025 Quincy residents.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said he was pleased with the census results.

"I'm happy with that (figure). It's up 4.82 percent compared to the 2000 Federal Census," he said. He added that the actual population of Quincy may be closer to 95,000 since there's always a small percentage of people who do not return census forms.

"There's always moving targets that aren't counted and that's true in any community," Shea said. "But I'm pleased the city is at 92,000."

The 92,271 figure represents an all-time high for the city's population as counted by the federal census. It's also close to the number determined by the city's own census or street-listing taken in 2010 which counted 92,700 Quincy residents.

Shea said he would have

City's Legal Costs Approach $1 Million

Appeal Filed In Adams Trust Lawsuit Decision

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Solicitor James Timmins said Tuesday that the City of Quincy officially filed a Notice of Appeal that morning challenging the $3 million judgment ordered against the city in the Adams Trust lawsuit.

The city is appealing the decision that Norfolk County Probate Court Judge Robert Langlois issued on Feb. 24 in the lawsuit filed on behalf of Woodward School for Girls.

In his decision, Judge Langlois ordered the city to pay $1.6 million to the Woodward School and place the balance in the trust. In addition, the judge removed the city as trustee and ordered the trustees to evaluate the value of the last of the trust's properties, the former Adams Academy at 8 Adams Street.

The Adams Academy building currently houses the Quincy Historical Society.

Obama Plan Would Slash Half Of $287,000 From Community Services Block Grant

Federal Budget Cuts Would 'Cripple' QCAP

By JOE REARDON

With the threat of funding cuts for Community Services Block Grant looming, the city council unanimously agreed Monday night to implore on President Barack Obama to reconsider slashing funding for FY 2012, which if initiated would cripple the Quincy Community Action Program (QCAP) services.

QCAP Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo said Monday morning that the $287,000 a year the organization receives from the Community Service Block Grants (CSBG) is a "critical resource" in providing services for economically disadvantage individuals in Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton and other Norfolk and Plymouth County communities. Under Obama's plan, the funds would be cut in half and states would have to compete for the money.

"It has the potential to completely eliminate the funding for agencies who may not get grants," Strollo said. "Low-income residents can usually get one-stop shopping through our agency. We can't do enough to convey how critical this is."

Obama's plan, Strollo said, would make states compete for funding with no guarantee that there would be any money available to support the programs. "That would be a disaster," said Strollo. "There is poverty everywhere. You completely disable community action organizations in the meantime."

She said there are areas with "incredible demand" for funding and it was "unconscionable" for the president to reduce that funding in the middle of a recession. QCAP have increased their services in several areas over the past couple of years. In 2010, 4,044 households received help paying for their heating bills through the fuel assistance program. That number was up from 2,500 two years ago. More than 177 households received home weatherization services that improved efficiency and helped reduce energy costs. And 555 households had their heating system repaired, maintained or replaced, improving household health and safety. In 2010, QCAP helped more than 19,300 individuals and 10,000 households in its service area. Without CSBG funding, free tax preparation for low-wage working families will be eliminated. Last year, QCAP helped families access more than $675,000 in both federal and state credit.

It was standing room only in council chambers with supporters wearing blue, white and red, and wearing white buttons that read "Save Community Action" and "Community Action Helped Me." The organization is the leading non-profit organization in Quincy and surrounding towns, dedicated to helping low and moderate-income people improve the quality of their lives and ultimately achieve self-sufficiency.

"What you've done with the money is extraordinary – I can not fathom why anything like this would make its way through congress," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro.

Community action programs across the country last year included 1,065 agencies in 99 percent of the U.S. counties. Employment, education and housing were provided to 20.7 million Americans across the country.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin cited the country's foreign aid to needy people in his argument for QCAP. "There's something wrong with our priorities – we need to change those priorities," he said.

The profile of QCAP clients in 2010 included:

98% work, are unemployed and looking for work, or are disabled or elderly and cannot work. Just 2% received TAFDC as a source of income.

69% of the population is below 150% of the federal poverty level.

56% of clients served were families with children. 60% of these families were headed by a female single parent.

5% of clients reported they did not have health insurance. 21% reported they receive food stamps and 12% are disabled.

Coughlin gave sterling examples of QCAP's local assistance in the letter drafted to Obama.

"In Quincy, we have seen firsthand the effective and positive impact of Quincy Community Action Program Inc. (QCAP), a widely respected community services program founded in 1965. QCAP makes a difference every day for nearly 10,000 individuals and their families in the city each year. QCAP has an integrated network of services including Head Start centers, Emergency Food, Homelessness prevention, Mortgage Foreclosure counseling, Free Tax Preparation, Adult Education, Fuel Assistance and Energy Conservation that help residents get back on their feet, and public funds raised to support community programs and meet the needs of our lowest income residents.

"This was a difficult winter for our state and the New England region, QCAP is helping over 19,000 low-income residents in the greater Quincy area survive by providing services like Fuel assistance, Emergency Food and its Free Tax Preparation program that will help over 500 households access up to $6,500 each in earned income tax credits. These are just some of the essential services QCAP provides to help the residents in our community survive, maintain hope and move forward in their lives.

"We believe that Community Service Block Grants will help our country "win the future" by ensuring that all Americans achieve economic security and become productive, contributing members of society. We appreciate your consideration of our request to preserve CSBG funding and stand ready to work with you as we confront the challenges facing our nation in the future."

Strollo said she is hoping the letter from the council will sway Obama and said QCAP is indebted to the support it has received by the council. "We're very grateful that they lent their support," said Strollo. "We've always had a great partnership with the council."

Appeal Filed In Adams Trust Lawsuit Decision

Timmins said the notice was filed at Norfolk County Probate Court, Shawmut Street, Canton, and that details of the appeal will be announced at a later date.

The city's costs for the lawsuit initiated in 2007 are currently edging toward the $1 million dollar mark as Timmins asked City Council Monday to approve a $510,000 request to pay bills from the Adams Trust litigation.

At Monday's meeting, City Councillors voted to send the request to the Finance Committee for review.

In his memo requesting the appropriation, Timmins said the $510,000 represents the total of "currently outstanding invoices arising out of the Woodward School litigation which require payment."

"As I have discussed with you, the budget for the legal department did not account for this sort of expense," wrote Timmins, noting that the $22,478 balance would be used to begin the appeals process.

Prior to Monday's request, the city had expended $354,478, according to City Auditor Sue O'Connell.

"It's not all legal fees," Timmins said, explaining that Judge Langlois ordered an audit of the trust and designated a Special Master to review the details of the trust and its history.

Bills for the audit and Special Master represented approximately $250,000 of the total $842,000 cost of the lawsuit. Details of the expenses and the bills follow and include the bills paid to John Leonard, Esq, $150,000; Newburg Company, $139,944; Richard McLaughlin, $64,534.

As well as unpaid invoices: Menard & Walsh, $422,022; Newburg & Company, $6,420; James McLaughlin, Esq, $19,643; CBIZ Tofias, $18,249, and two bills for O'Brien & Levin Court Reporting Services, $649 and $20,536.

A WRISTED DEVELOPMENT

Bracelets, of course, are always in style, and those currently coming from top jewelry designers are adding something special to the mix. For instance, designers are updating the look of yellow and white gold chain bracelets with diamond, pearl, and crystal studding that adds a decided touch of allure. Speaking of pearls, beaded pearl bracelets are also quite in vogue, some of which have ivory, gold, or silver beads interspersed among freshwater pearls. Also very popular are bohemian-style bracelets with beads made of carnelian, labradorite, lapis, and turquoise. As far as cuffs and bangles are concerned, bold is best. Wide pieces that feature oversized gemstone center details work wonderfully with evening wear.

Give a gift of lasting quality, from thick, ornate and richly designed bracelets, to thin, elegant and modern-looking bracelets. We have a wide and varied selection sure to please. Any of our wide selection of bracelets and bangles will look magnificent on your wrist, or you can discuss custom designing a special piece created to your specifications. These timeless pieces are displayed in our showcases at1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. We would love to assist you in your next jewelry purchase. 'Old Ordinance Hasn't Worked'

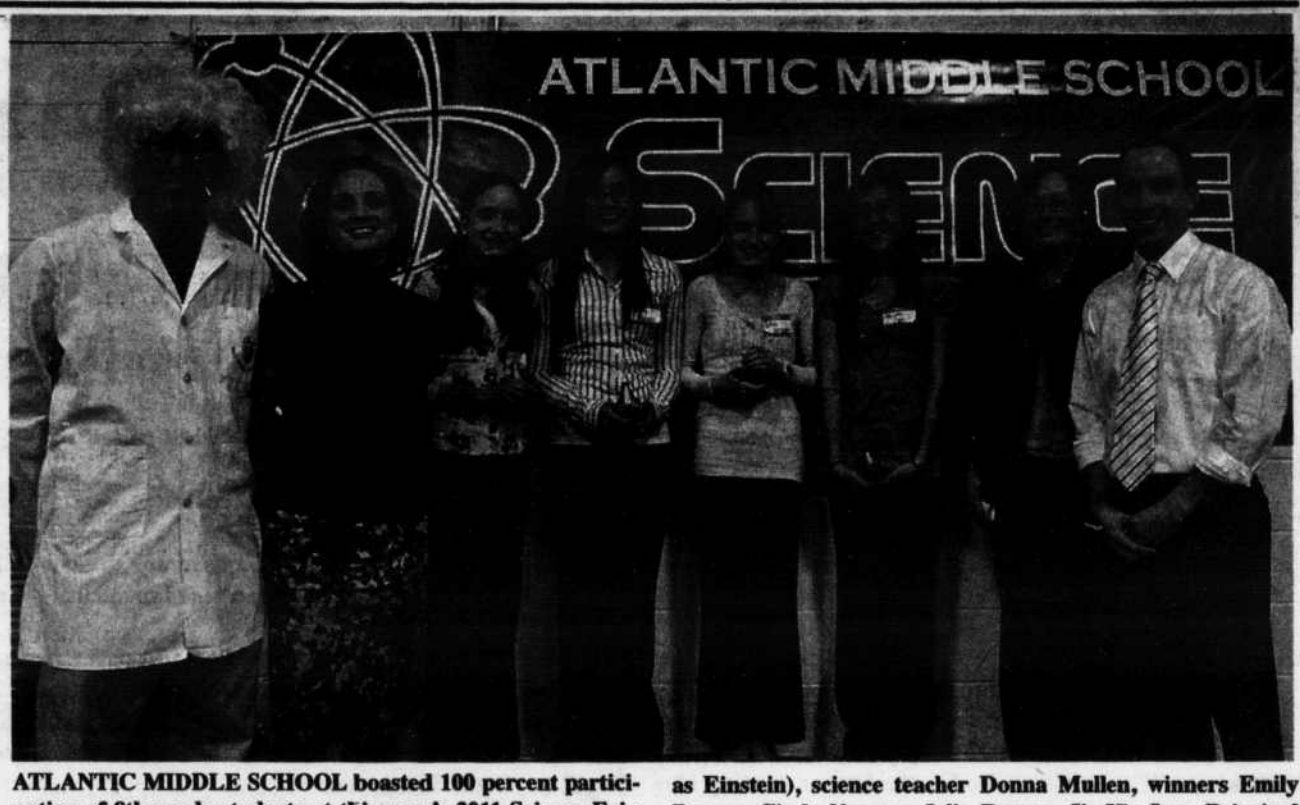
Palmucci Proposal Targets Negligent Property Owners

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City councillors Monday sought to fine-tune a decade-old ordinance aimed at shutting down drug dens, party houses, and disreputable havens spoiling residential neighborhoods.

The old ordinance hasn't worked, according to Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci whose proposed amendment would penalize negligent property owners by charging them for police details after repeated incidents are reported at the same site.

Palmucci told the Ordinance Committee Monday that his amendment "specifically targets those landlords" who ignore or condone illegal operations on their property.



"They're havens for police activity," said Palmucci, noting that such problem residences exist in every area, dragging down neighborhoods.

On hand to support Palumucci's amendment was Quincy Police Lt. Daniel Minton who worked with Palmucci and other officers to devise the proposal originally submitted to the council in November. At the time, Minton said the ordinance didn't work because of the cost to taxpayers of the details.

If the amendment passes, the owners of the offending properties will pay, rather than the taxpayers, according to Palmucci.

"If you own a property and you don't get frequent police attention, this won't affect you," said Palmucci.

Proposed Post Island Road Turbine Topic Tonight

Ward 1 Councilor Margaret Laforest will host a neighborhood meeting tonight (Thursday) regarding the application of homeowners Charles and Annete Cote and Tim Holmes of Sunwind to install two residential wind turbines on their home at 68 Post Island Rd.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 300 Manet Ave., Quincy.

The Cotes currently have a solar photovoltaic system and if combined with wind power, anticipates accounting for 75% of their home power needs. Each turbine has a diameter of 7 feet and is 10 feet tall and if placed atop their 39 foot home would have a total height of 49 feet.

The applicant will present information to neighbors on this proposal and answer questions on the imapcts in a residential area. This application will also be reviewed at a future zoning board of appeals meeting. For more information, call Laforest at 617-376-1351.

St. Patrick's Day Celebration: Fun For A Good Cause

The answers:

A good cause.

Some funny jokes.

Other gags that went over like lead balloons.

The question:

What is the Quincy Partnership's 15th annual Saint Patrick's Day celebration?

This year's event – held last Friday at The Tirrell Room, Quincy Lodge of Elks – was all that and more. About 450 guests attended the near 3-hour celebration.

The event – a community staple and social rite of spring – raised about $12,000 for the partnership's endeavors, said member and Event tri-chairman Joseph Shea. A portion of those proceeds will benefit Quincy's 60th annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration, billed as the longest running Flag Day celebration in the nation.

The St. Patrick's Day celebration – which featured humorous barbs at local politicians and some other good-natured ribbing – also took on a serious tone. It was dedicated to the memory of Stephen "Steph" O'Donnell, Quincy's former commissioner of Public Works who passed away last September after battling cancer. A plaque honoring "Steph" as Irishman of the Year was presented to O'Donnell's wife, Pam, and children by the Partnership.

Close friends of O'Donnell's praised his devotion to family and friends as well as his professionalism in various state and city capacities. Working for MassHighway, O'Donnell led the effort to integrate the department's four divisions into the current Mass Department of Transportation Highway Division.

"Steph was always respectful, he got things done," said Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti. "He put family first but he was a guy who always had time for his friends. He had a way of earning respect everywhere he worked and everything he was involved in."

O'Donnell, a past exalter ruler of the Quincy Lodge of Elks, led the committee that built the Elks new hall.

Koch called O'Donnell "a great guy, a fun guy to be around with." Speaking to his family, Koch added, "Thank you for sharing Steve with us. We'll never forget Steph."

Pam O'Donnell, in accepting the plaque, said, "He wasn't the type who did things for accolades. He did things because they needed to be done."

The brunch featured a host of guest speakers. Some hit the mark with their comedy routines – others . . . let's just say the crickets outnumbered the laughs.

(Of course, as you read these jokes and one-liners, remember they are intended to be humorous, not insulting.)

Mayor Tom Koch got things off to a rollicking start. He was joined by his 12-year-old son Tom, Jr. who – for the second straight year – mimicked Nick Puleo, the city's now departed chief financial officer.

The mayor asked "Nick" about his decision to leave the city in what he termed an "exit interview."

The Mayor: "Everyone wants to know, Nick, what was so bad that you had to leave a $100,000 a year job after just one year?"

Nick: "It was too hard having more degrees than my boss."

The Mayor: "Ok, so it wasn't like you felt you were out of your league dealing with the professionals around City Hall?"

Nick: "Have you met the city councillors?"

The Mayor: "Well, what was the worst part of working with the City Council?"

Nick: "(Councillor Brian) Palmucci kept stealing my crayons."

The Mayor: "Ok, so you didn't have any trouble with the numbers or the budget using accepted municipal standards?"

Nick: "How hard can it be? (Business Manager James) Mullaney does the same thing for the School Department."

The Mayor: "I see your point. You know you really left us at a bad time, we are just starting the budget and it's going to be another tough year.

Nick: "You should have thought of that before you hired a 12-year-old."

The Mayor: "So, I hear you are moving on to Boston College High School. What are you hoping to do there?"

Nick: "Graduate."

Koch also referred to his recent faith-based pilgrimage to the Bosnian village of Medjugorje. He said some prayers were answered, others were not.

For example:

"Prayer answered: Bill Phelan found a job outside Quincy.

"Prayer not answered: It wasn't in Libya."

"Prayer answered: "Loyal staff."

"Prayer not answered: "Competent staff."

"Prayer answered: "Dan Raymondi is my friend."

"Prayer not answered: "Dan Raymondi is my friend."

Koch and other speakers turned public officials into humorous political fodder.

Here's what the mayor had to say about:

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti:

"We all know the sheriff has gained a little weight the last couple of years. . . Last year during the campaign, I told him he needed to work the Asian vote. So he added 7 Chins.

"Michael, you look like Robert DeNiro with a bad peanut allergy. And that haircut doesn't help."

John Keenan:

"So two days after he gets sworn in (as state senator), he asks President Murray for appointment to Ways and Means. She looks at him and says 'you must be nuts or on drugs.'

"Ladies and gentlemen, it's my pleasure to introduce to you to the Chairman of the Joint Committee on Mental Health and Substance Abuse, Senator John Keenan. Yeah, my brother-in-law, Mr. Good Government. Hey, John, don't forget, the Unabomber went to Harvard, too."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci:

"So you know, we've something of a political trade here over the last few years. One of our great City Councillors Greg Hanley went to Pembroke, and from Pembroke we got our great new Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci. The real winner in that deal: Braintree."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci gave guests a glimpse of Michael Morrissey's campaign for Norfolk County district attorney last fall, which drew some good chuckles.

"Working for Morrissey was a good learning experience. I'm young, I have a lot to learn. And I appreciate advice whenever it's given. Which is why I don't understand why no one warned me before taking that job with Morrissey. Seriously . . . nothing. . . really . . . nobody.

"A little heads up about the guy would have been nice. It was like working for a tele-tubby; I only understood one of out three words that came out of his mouth.

"Which is probably why I was so confused on my first payday. See, we had discussed 5,000. I thought we were talking about money; he tried to pay me in nail files."

Palmucci said Morrissey got carried away with distributing campaign materials. "We had orange T-shirts, orange sweatshirts, an orange hat, a black visor, golf tees, a beer cuzzy. . . Seriously, he's running for D.A. and giving out a beer cuzzy.

"I was shocked at the stuff we gave away to voters. But there was some stuff that I really cringed about, like this – a mini-Morrissey Bible. This is really a bible, with his name on it. I let it go because it was a big hit with Mayor Koch.

"But there came a time when I had to say NO, I had to put my foot down . . . and that was for this. (He holds up for display) The Morrissey lady thong. I don't know how Bellotti convinced him to order 10,000 of these. I'm actually wearing one of these for good luck today."

The thong was later used as a prop by State Auditor Suzanne Bump. After her turn at the podium, Bump took the thong and twirled it around an index finger as the crowd cheered.

Another councillor who triggered some hearty laughter was Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest.

She described scenarios where one might be considered a "Houghs Necker."

Some examples:

"If you think higher education is the second floor at the Broad Meadows School, you might be a Necker.

"If you think a subdivision is a difficult math problem, you might be a Necker."

"If you have ever been too drunk to fish, then you a definitely NOT a Necker."

Other elected officials canvassing for laughs included City Council President Kevin Coughlin, State Treasurer Steve Grossman, Cong. Stephen Lynch and Cong. Bill Keating.

Grossman presented a check for $6,000 to Mayor Koch representing city funds on the state's unclaimed money list.

Koch grabbed the envelope and quipped, "This (money) wouldn't equal one day of pay for the school superintendent."

Freshman state Rep. Tackey Chan was also the target of some one-liners.

Palmucci said: "I've been told Tackey Chan is the smartest, most capable state representative in the history of the city. No one on Beacon Hill knows more than he does. That must be true because Tackey told me that himself just this morning."

State Rep. Ron Mariano said: "Poor Tackey. He thought he was going to be the first Asian American elected state representative in Massachusetts. But actually Don Wong who owns the Kowloon Restaurant in Saugus was. People at the State House saw Don and thought Tackey was one of his waiters."

Comedian and Quincy native Steve Sweeney: "I asked Tackey as an Asian American, how do you like the Irish food being served today. He said, 'It's great but 15 minutes after I eat it, I'm hungry again.'"

Bellotti revived his popular impersonation of good friend and colleague in government, Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey. He suggested Morrissey act more like Detective Columbo since Morrissey is better known as a legislator than a crime fighter. So, donning an overcoat, Bellotti issued a series of "subpoenas" to various individuals in the crowd - in a humorous vein, of course:

To Margaret Laforest: "a subpoena for last year's comedy skit which was cruel and unusual punishment. But after today, you are acquitted."

To Tackey Chan: "A subpoena for identify theft of Michael Morrissey."

To Mayor Koch: "A subpoena for firing my brother Patrick as the Harbormaster. I don't know what crime it is but it's definitely (political) suicide for you."

To Council President Kevin Coughlin: "This isn't a subpoena it's a commitment to Bridgewater State Hospital."

City Councillor Joe Finn, Bellotti said, "has more kids than the woman who lives in a shoe. This is a subpoena for running an illegal boarding house."

Bellotti wrapped up this bit by approaching a table with StreetWorks executives. Taking yellow crime tape from his jacket, Bellotti said, "This is a crime waiting to happen. No one leaves this table until we dust it for prints and forensics."

All in all it was a pretty funny occasion for a very worthy cause.

Scenes From Yesterday

4643. - Along River Road looking North, HOUGH'S NECK, Mass.

THIS IS A 1915 postcard view of what was then called River Road on the Fore River side of Houghs Neck. The roadway is now named Edgewater Drive. This view is from the end of Bird Street looking north toward the Quincy Yacht Club, which is barely visible in the distance. The summer cottages on the left had large windows and open porches to enjoy the sea breezes and views across Hingham Bay to Hull and Nantasket. Today, the porches have been enclosed and the cottages have been converted to year-round homes. The roadway is much wider and a substantial seawall has been built along Manet Beach on the right to protect these houses. But the seawall takes a good beating along here and currently is in need of repairs. In this postcard, the publisher drew in the automobiles to enhance the picture. $8 Million City Budget Hike Seen

By FRANK McCAULEY

Indications are that the 1976 city budget mat reach the $70 million mark, an $8 million increase over last year's budget. Mayor Walter J. Hannon is reportedly "working had to come up with a negligible tax increase." Current tax rate is $159.90.

This Week
36 Years Ago

Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin plans to call a special meeting of the City Council for Monday, March 31, to formerly accept the city budget from Mayor Hannon. He said the budget will be immediately referred to the Council Finance Committee for review.

Accurate estimates of the new tax rate could not be made since several sources of revenue including hospital receipts, state revenue and property valuation still remain a question mark.

Budget Director William Grindlay said he plans to meet with Mayor Hannon this week to rehash the budget, making additional cuts where possible.

Several areas slated for the budget ax include part-time personnel, overtime and job vacancies.

VILLONE TO RETIRE AS VETERANS DIRECTOR

William Villone will retire as director of the city's Veterans Services Department after nearly 27 years of service to the city of Quincy. His retirement will be effective May 2.

Villone began his career in Quincy in 1948 when he became a investigator in the Veterans Services Department.

He was a graduate of Northeastern University School of Law. Villone was appointed assistant director of the department in 1958 and became director in 1959.

LaRAIA URGES BUSINESSES TO GIVE INPUT TO CITY GOVERNMENT DECISIONS

Mayoralty candidate and Councillor at-Large Joseph LaRaia urged the business community to provide their input into decisions of the city government.

"Government service requires the input of every citizen before decisions are made." LaRaia made his remarks at the weekly meeting of the Quincy Kiwanis Club at the YMCA.

Questions Decision To Close Star Of The Sea Church

(A copy of the following letter was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

Archdiocese of Boston
Pastoral Center
Attn: 2011 Consultation Questionnaire
66 Brooks Drive
Braintree, MA 02184

To Whom It May Concern:

Wherever to start.

I am writing regarding the possible "relegation to profane use of a church": In a statement issued Feb. 17, 2011, it is stated that: "For a response to be considered in the consultation, it must be submitted either through www.2011Consultation.org or on the "2011 Consultation Form" and be received by March 18, 2011 at 5 p.m.

Seemed simple enough.

I have looked at both suggested forms, read your press releases and wonder why I have had such difficulty addressing the issue of Star of the Sea, Squantum, MA. I have started filling in the forms and stopped several times. And, today, it has finally come together. I have finally realized that even though it does not state so, this consultation is closed to all but the "Catholic faithful and former parishioners" of the various churches in question and that the questionnaire, while it does not state so, is exclusionary and leads me to believe that all responses will not be read or registered. This consultation will be tainted and skewed if it is not open to all for comment.

What has been written for me to formulate my impression is:

"The Archdiocese of Boston is conducting a consultation of the Catholic faithful who were parishioners of seven ....."

"The Catholic faithful who wish to participate are encouraged to do so online at ....."

"The consultation gives an opportunity to the former parishioners ....."

"Through this process we see an opportunity for the local Catholic community to comment in advance of ....."

I see nothing that invites me to participate. I am not a practicing Catholic, I am not of the parish. I, like Star of the Sea Church, am part of this community. I feel, therefore, that I and every member of this community have a right to an opinion. Squantum is a remarkable community that you obviously have shunned.

CatholicsComeHome? Yet, on Sunday, September 5, 2010 you shut the doors on your Catholic faithful of Squantum. You really do not understand your place in a community, more specifically this community; you suffer from tunnel vision, are myopic.

I question your motives, your judgement. I must question why an "island" church was selected when there are other churches within a reasonable proximity of other churches that might have been selected, if proximity were a factor. If you use the "within 5 miles of the subject" example, where Star of the Sea is concerned, 5 miles in any direction, other than the 20, or so, foot wide access road would bring Catholic faithful from Squantum to, essentially, the middle of the ocean! Are there other churches that I feel should be closed to save Star of the Sea? No. I know, only, that Star of the Sea Church must not be closed. It is an integral part of a remarkable community. Without this church, we are no longer whole.

I am sure Cardinal O'Malley was quite busy on Sunday, March 13, 2011 at 2 p.m. He was invited by the Friends of Star of the Sea to attend a meeting at Squantum School, a neutral meeting place that would not be considered illicit. First Church of Squantum (illicit) offered their hall for the purpose, but your Catholic faithful opted for a neutral place in

The Celtic Bells To Perform At Crane Library Saturday

Celebrate the culture of the British Isles and try out a few traditional dances at a free performance for all ages by The Celtic Bells Saturday, March 26 at 3 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The Celtic Bells are Jerry and Nancy Bell with their children, Calum and Katriona. Together they play and dance everything from the traditional Scottish Highland Fling, Irish jigs and step dances, to bagpipe tunes and favorite Irish songs.

The performance will include spirited sets on pennywhistle, flute, bones, Irish drum, and a work song in the Gaelic language. Nancy will also relate a wonderful story about the boy who couldn't play the fiddle, with young Calum taking center stage.

The program is sponsored by the family and friends of Doris Lunn in her memory.

THE CELTIC BELLS will perform Saturday, March 26 at 3 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

Finding Ancestors In Court Records Library Seminar

The final session of this month's free genealogy and family history series will be held Monday, March 28 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

No registration is required.

Court records offer a wealth of information for tracing ancestors and regional history, but these valuable resources remain underutilized. Learn how to find and use court records – from the 17th to 21st centuries – in courthouses, archives, books, microfilm and the latest computer sources.

Diane Rapaport, a former trial lawyer, is a historical consultant, genealogist, award-winning author and popular speaker. She offers an usual combination of expertise and experience – in law, history and genealogy – and she enjoys discovering and telling the stories of the past. She specializes in court records and other historical resources of New England.

The seminar is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library. Call 617-376-1301 for more information.

Walking Tour March 27 To Celebrate Life Of Ruth Gordon

In collaboration with the Thomas Crane Library, the Park Department's Environmental Treasures program is celebrating the life of actress and writer Ruth Gordon during Women's History Month.

On Sunday, March 27 at 2 p.m., Sandy Johnson and Sally Owen will lead a free tour of Gordon's favorite Quincy haunts.

From her birthplace on Winthrop Avenue to her home on Elmwood Avenue to attending Quincy High School (now Central Middle School), Ruth Gordon was fully immersed in the life of the city. The tour will include quotes from her autobiography, My Side, which is a beautiful ode to Quincy.

The meeting place will be determined by snow and ice conditions. Call 617-472-0799 on March 27 for information.

The rain/snow date will be Sunday, April 3 at 2 p.m.

Houghs Neck 375th Committee April Fools Pasta Dinner, Dance

The Houghs Neck Community Council 375th Anniversary Committee will present an evening of fun and frivolity at an April Fools Pasta Dinner and Dance April 1, 7 to 11 p.m., at Quincy Yacht Club.

Must be 21 years old or older to attend.

Tickets are $20 each or $30 per couple.

There will be raffles, games, food and a DJ, along with a prize for the "best dressed jester."

Tickets are available at E&T Ceramics (617-479-4107); Eileen (617-481-9153); Helen (617-472-5779) and Bernie's General Store.

Sign Language Concert Friday At Wollaston Church Of The Nazarene

The Eastern Nazarene College Sign Language Club will perform a concert Friday, March 25 at the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, 37 East Elm Ave., Quincy beginning at 7 p.m.

They will showcase the work that has been done including but not limited to the children from the Wollaston area who have learned signing this past year.

A $2 donation will be accepted at the door.

Quincy Animal Shelter Fundraiser Friday

The Quincy Animal Shelter will hold a fundraiser Friday, March 25 at 7 p.m. at Port 305 Marina Bay, 305 Victory Rd., North Quincy.

The event will raise funds for the shelter's animal care needs. All proceeds from the fundraiser will go directly to the shelter.

The event will include a buffet compliments of Port 305's chef and staff, a silent auction which includes an overnight stay, original art and more. There will also be live entertainment throughout the evening.

Tickets are $35 per person and can be purchased online at www.quincyanimalshelter.org, at the Shelter on Broad Street or at the door.

The Shelter does not receive any local, state or federal funding and is a recognized 501(c)(3) non-profit organization which relies entirely on donations and fundraising to provide the special care that is given to every cat and dog that stays at the shelter while waiting to be adopted.

For more information about the event or the shelter, call 617-376-1349.

Samantha Wilshire Participating In Habitat For Humanity

Samantha Wilshire of Quincy is among a group of 13 students from Fisher College participating in Habitat for Humanity.

The students are working on construction projects in Macon, Georgia, as part of an alternative Spring Break trip to support local communities.

Suzie's Brown Rice Crusted Vegetable Pizza

Most of us love pizza – I know my family does. Anyway, my daughter Suzie has contrived a most delicious pizza made with a short grain brown rice crust.

She used the short grain rice because it comes out more creamy and easy to mix with the other ingredients.

The topping for this pizza can be either the original one with tomato and cheese or the vegetable one that Suzie made.

BROWN RICE VEGETABLE PIZZA

3 cups cooked short grain brown rice (She used Lundbergs)
2 eggs (beaten)
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
1-teaspoon basil
½ cup shredded mozzarella cheese and also some for the topping
1-tablespoon olive oil
1 cup or so of tomato sauce

Cook rice according to directions. Cool completely before adding the rest of the ingredients except for the tomato sauce. Mix well and then spread it on a greased cookie sheet the shape of a pizza. Press down until even on the sides.

Bake in 400-degree oven for 8-10 minutes.

Remove from the oven and then top it and bake also in a 400-degree oven until done. For the topping, Suzie uses thinly sliced zucchini, mushrooms and red peppers. Top it with tomato sauce and then the cheese. Cool before cutting.

Town Brook Should Be A Center Showcase

Is the Wolly and the Squantum Point Park pier an omen of things to come in Quincy?

Everyone knows the federal government is broke. The state is broke and Quincy is broke. Yet it is full speed ahead. The only problem is we are running on a treadmill.

You can't depend on free money that is no longer there and will not be there for many years. It's not very smart to start something you don't have the money to finish.

You can't keep raising taxes year after year to pay for a dream. Since 1960, Quincy has around $3 billion in new development. Crown Colony, State Street South, Marina Bay, hundreds of new apartment buildings and new condos, Granite Links Golf Course, etc. Yet, with all that development, I can't remember one time that my taxes went down.

Bigger is not always better.

We all want Quincy Center refurbished. What we don't want is someone with a whip telling us to do and what not to do.

Case in point: the Town Brook relocation. StreetWorks wants it done the cheap way. We the people want it done the right way.

We want it to be the show case of the new Quincy, not hidden by a traffic jam every day.

Questions Archdiocese's Decision To Close Star Of The Sea Church

case he or a representative might attend and share his/their transparent thoughts about the closing of Star of the Sea Church; the Friends of Star of the Sea never received a response to the invitation. Yet, Reverend Erickson stated: "The Cardinal has instituted a culture of transparency that has resulted in greater consultation, collaboration and coordination."

In 2005, Reverend Richard Lennon said of Archbishop Sean O'Malley that he [they] want to "rebuild the church into what the Lord wants". Reverend Richard Lennon is now Bishop Lennon of the Cleveland Archdiocese and he is spreading the word of consultation, collaboration and coordination, and there is a fourth "c" word which seems to round out the meaning of the first three; the fourth "c" is representative of the word "closing" and he is closing churches, many, churches. This must be his (their) interpretation of what the Lord wants; the misson.

In 2011, Cardinal Sean O'Malley in a letter to [his] "[My] dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ" quotes our Lord and states that he (the Lord) stated, "I will be with you always" and Cardinal O'Malley encourages his Brothers and Sisters in Christ to "..... go forward together, confident that the Lord Jesus is indeed with us and leading our way".

I really must question what Lord Cardinal O'Malley is following.

Cardinal O'Malley and Very Reverand Erickson (Vicar General & Moderator of the Curia), you were invited, you are invited to come to Squantum to meet your Catholic faithful and to meet the community that Star of the Sea Church is part of. Squantum is essentially an "island." There exists here an island mentality. Families have been here for 30, 40, 50 years. People are born and die here. Some, of choice, rarely leave this peninsula.

When illness occurs somewhere within our 53 streets, we all know and share our mutual concern; similarly when someone dies or is born, or marries. We are connected to the mainland by a mile long road. Your decisions, lack of compassion, lack of understanding have had a very devisive affect on your Catholic faithful.

People who gathered for Sunday worship, for Sunday social, for events during the year have now chosen different paths. Friends have chosen different churches, or no church. Families born and raised here have had to baptize, receive first communion, confirmation, marry, be buried from churches that are not of their choice, but rather forced by your decisions.

At this island church, children grew, went to school and church with their neighbors and friends and built solid social and spiritual bonds that lasted through adulthood and enabled them to become good citizens who will support their island community for a life time. Star of the Sea is/was/will be a necessary part of the life cycle!

When certain of the Catholic faithful were no longer able to drive, or lost a spouse, there was solace in knowing that they had the ability to walk the familiar streets of their neighborhood to attend mass or pray in their church; you have removed the ability for the elderly to maintain a certain amount of independence. And, for those who are no longer comfortable driving in the hustle and bustle that is evidenced everywhere today, our island church enabled one to drive a short distance in a residential setting, on familiar streets, park without problem and participate in mass or other spiritual encounter with their church. If you close Star of the Sea, you deny this independence at a time when it is most necessary. Star of the Sea is/was/will be a necessary part of the life cycle!

In 1914 the Catholic faithful brought a Catholic presence to Squantum; the Catholic faithful eventually built a church. In good faith the Catholic faithful turned their church over to the Catholic Archdiosese. Do you think that decision was made with the thought in mind that the caretakers of the Star of the Sea Church would eventually sell the Catholic faithful's church for the purpose of the building, or the land, being used for any use other than as a Catholic church on an island?

What are you doing? Why? What good will you accomplish through the sale of Star of the Sea Church in Squantum? Will it add to your coffers more wealth (certainly not that much); will additional monetary gain enable you to spirit away those within the church who you wish to remove from closer scruitiny as you have priests and Cardinal Law in the past? Why do the Catholic faithful of Squantum have to pay for those highly publicized sins and for your lack of transparency? Have you really listened to and followed the Lord? You use the Lord's name but do you hear his words, do you follow in his footsteps? You must come to Squantum you will meet your Lord through the Catholic faithful here who have truly followed in their Lord's footsteps.

Drug Collection Kiosk Installed In Police Lobby Station

A permanent prescription and non-prescription drug collection kiosk has been installed in the lobby of the Quincy Police Station, 55 Sea St., Quincy, courtesy of Impact Quincy, a program of Bay State Community Services located in Quincy.

Similar kiosks have been placed in the lobbies of the Braintree, Milton and Weymouth police stations.

Any unwanted medicines, including those for pets, can be dropped off at the MedReturn Kiosk.

"By dropping off your unused medication you lower the risk of substance abuse in the community," said Arlene Goldstein, program coordinator for Impact Quincy.

She said studies show that youth can begin a lifetime of drug addiction by simply opening the home medicine cabinet and using substances non-medically. Prescription drugs such as OxyContin®, Percocet®, Vicodin®, Lortab®, oxycodone, morphine, and codeine have all been linked to addiction. Many over-the-counter medications, such as cough medicines, can also be non-medically used. Plus, proper disposal of substances are vital to protect human health and the environment from potential hazards in our water supply.

Medicines should never be flushed down the toilet.

The MedReturn kiosks are open to all residents. There is no charge and no questions will be asked.

The MedReturn Drug Collection Return Kiosks were donated to the Towns of Braintree, Milton and Weymouth in collaboration with Impact Quincy, a program of Bay State Community Services, Inc., through funding from the MA Department of Public Health, Bureau of Substance Abuse Services.

What is collected?

- Prescription medicines
- Over-the counter medicines
- Pet medications
- Sample medications

Pills, capsules, inhalers, ointments, and/or patches

Vitamins

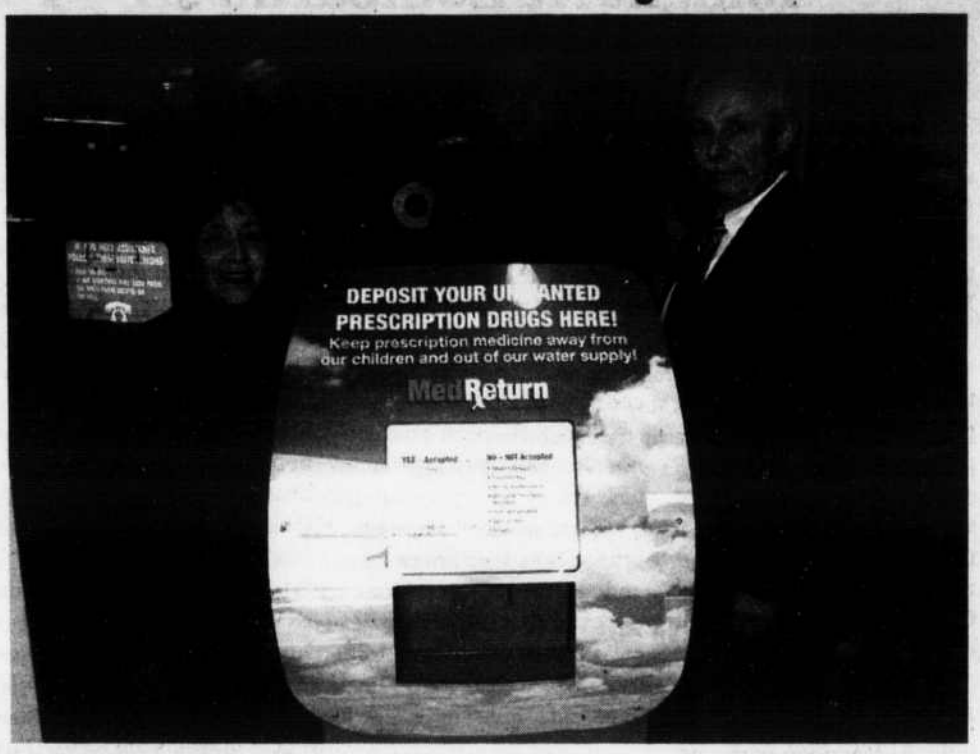
Liquids in glass or leak proof containers

You can:

Bring the medicine in the original container (Blackout your name and the prescription number)

OR Bring the medicine in a clear plastic reclosable bag

What is NOT collected?



Needles (Sharps)

Thermometers

Bloody or infectious waste

Medication from businesses or clinics

Broad Street Tide Gate Topic At Neighborhood Meeting March 31

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest will conduct a neighborhood meeting Thursday, March 31 at 7 p.m. in the second floor conference room of City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., regarding the proposed Broad Street Tide Gate and Tributary System Rehabilitation.

The rehabilitation work is included in the Capital Improvement Plan currently being reviewed for approval by the City Council.

Laforest said the deterioration of the Broad Street Tide Gate and Tributary has been a problem for years and flooding has been a chronic problem in the areas of the YMCA and Russell Park neighborhoods.

Mayor Tom Koch has identified two projects for the Broad Street area as a priority in the proposed Capital Improvement Plan.

The projects have been deemed urgent and have an estimated cost of $1.24 million.

Laforest will also hold "open office hours" for any matters or issues of concern next Thursday, March 31 from 6 to 7 p.m. prior to the neighborhood meeting in the second floor conference room.

'A Taste Of South Shore' Tonight At Lombardo's To Benefit Y's Support Campaign

The South Shore YMCA will hold its 15th Annual "A Taste of the South Shore," tonight (Thursday) from 6 to 10 p.m. at Lombardo's in Randolph.

Some 26 area restaurants and eateries will showcase their culinary delights in support of the Y's Annual Support Campaign.

"We continue to be grateful for the restaurants' participation in "A Taste of the South Shore," said Paul Gorman, CEO and president of the South Shore YMCA.

"As difficult as the economy is, they continue to donate staff and their expertise to what has become a much anticipated – and growing – event. We represent a charity and rely on the success of our events to help us meet the needs of our community."

Gorman said proceeds from last year's event helped send close to 500 children to summer camp, while also providing year round aid to families in need.

"Attendees can be sure that 100 percent of the contributions made to the Y's Annual Support Campaign directly benefit more than 5,500 children on the South Shore at a time when the number of applications from families seeking financial assistance has risen 60 percent," Gorman added.

Tonight's event will honor Dan and Patty DeMarco of Norwell.

"It is with our deepest gratitude that we honor Dan and Patty for their time, talent and continued dedication to making people's lives a little bit better," Gorman said.

Restaurant participation is the largest in this event's 15-year history.

They include Atlantica (Cohasset), BonCaldo's (Norwood), Caffe Tosca (Hingham), The Chef's Table, a south shore caterer, Coffee Break Café (Quincy), Dancing Deer Baking Co. (Boston), Fratelli's (Quincy), Fuji 1546 Restaurant & Bar (Quincy), Hancock's Steak and Seafood (Quincy), Granite Grill (Quincy), Kamas Lounge (Quincy), Konditor Meister (Braintree), Lombardo's (Randolph), Malai Thai (Randolph), Neighborhood Club of Quincy, Phillip's Candy House (Braintree), Red Parrot (Hull), Salsa's Mexican Grill (Hingham), Scarlet Oak Tavern (Hingham), Stars on Hingham Harbor (Hingham), Summer Shack (Hingham), Tosca (Hingham) Whole Foods Market (Hingham) and The Winery on 53 (Pembroke). New this year, are Alma Nove (Hingham), Jake's Seafood (Hull), The Fruit Center (Hingham and Milton) and Typhoon (Hingham).

Sponsors for this year's event include Street-Works Development, South Shore Savings Bank, Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance & Sagamore Plumbing and Heating.

Individual and table tickets are available with prices starting at $100 per person. For tickets or more information, contact Jill at (617) 479 – 8500, ext. 146 or at jdonovan@ssymca.org.

A Message From Impact Quincy

City Successfully Collaborating To Increase Awareness Of The Opioid Overdose Issue

My name is Arlene Goldstein and I am the Impact Quincy Program Coordinator (program of Bay State Community Services) for the Quincy Fatal and Non-Fatal Opioid Overdose Prevention Grant.

ARLENE GOLDSTEIN

In Massachusetts, opioid overdose poisonings occur at an alarming rate. Opioids are drugs that are legally prescribed for pain management, such as OxyContin® or Percocet®.

However, many prescription opioids are diverted and abused on the street along with another major opioid, heroin. More Massachusetts residents die from opioid use than automobile fatalities.

Because of these high overdose rates, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, Bureau of Substance Abuse made funding available to the City of Quincy along with 10 other Massachusetts communities, to address this issue. Consequently for the past 2 years, Impact Quincy and the City of Quincy have been successfully collaborating to increase awareness of the opioid overdose issue.

Up to this time, the citywide coalition led by Mayor Thomas P. Koch, the Quincy Drug Task Force and Impact Quincy had been working on many substance abuse issues. When the opioid overdose project became available, clear and successful strategies were developed and implemented to educate and raise community awareness and perception. Educational presentations are given to first responders, medical providers, community organizations, and active users and their families.

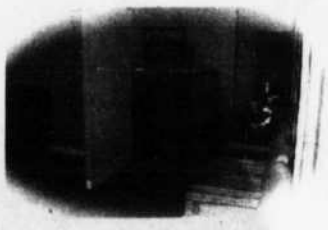
The presentations explain the problem, how to recognize it and what to do in an emergency, including the use of Narcan®, a non-narcotic drug which can reverse the effect of opioid overdose. This is my job for the project, coordinating the many components needed to reach out and educate as many people in the community as possible.

I have worked on this project from its very beginning. When I realized the extent of the problem not only here in Quincy, but throughout most of New England, it was eye-opening. But, like many others, I first assumed that this issue only affected the poor and disenfranchised; it soon became clear this was completely false.

This problem reaches and infects all socioeconomic levels and ethnicities. Working in Quincy, I quickly learned that many individuals had come from families who had "done all the right things."

Their parents had taken an active part in their lives. There had been good education, sports, religious education, and a healthy family life. Somehow something had gone terribly wrong and addiction had caused a chasm of seismic proportion.

I have heard family stories that make you wonder how the storyteller can get up each morning to face another day. They pray their child will stay alive long enough to want to free themselves of addiction. This is what keeps me coming to work; the idea that through Impact Quincy I can raise levels of understanding and awareness to help the community.



For every active user, 7 other individuals are directly affected. It's not easy. In Quincy I have met so many caring individuals involved in this issue either professionally or personally.

I am proud to be part of the Impact Coalition. It is truly an organization committed to reducing substance abuse in the community.

Priest In Charge Of The Episcopal Parish Of Saint Chrysostom, Wollaston

Rev. Eric Hillegas's Calling: From Cambodia To Quincy

By JOE REARDON

It was 10 years ago that Rev. Eric Hillegas awoke and realized it was time to offer what help he could, half a world away.

The setting was Cambodia and Hillegas was there for nearly a year teaching the English language to students eager to learn. Hillegas had no doubt he was where he was supposed to be.

"It was pretty transformative for me," said the Priest in Charge of the Episcopal Parish of St. Chrysostom in Wollaston. "I went to Cambodia just after I felt something of a call to ordination. I wasn't an ordained priest but I had worked at a church on Capitol Hill for a couple of years. I remember having a conversation with my parents and told them I felt as though I was being called, sort of a Mother Teresa sort of experience.

"I woke up one morning and had no question what the need was and where the work needed to be done. That was a lot of the energy that drew me to Cambodia."

Hillegas found the experience not only rewarding, but enlightening as well. Living in a third world country on the Gulf of Thailand, Hillegas went without the technology people in the United States don't think twice about.

"What was most transformative was living as a minority in a culture and understanding what that was like because that hadn't been my experience growing up," Hillegas said. "I learned to listen in that environment because I wasn't able to take anything for granted."

Most importantly, Hillegas saw the importance of acting when the need arises. "When you see that need and really being able to identify it, I think that was something that was formed in me during my time in Cambodia," he said.

Hillegas has his sites firmly set on his new assignment at St. Chrysostom where he is hoping to add parishioners and build a strong sense of community within both the parish and neighborhood. The move for Hillegas was a short one as he traveled from Saint Mary's in Dorchester. He believes his experience at his former parish has more than prepared him for taking over the reigns at St. Chrysostom.

"There are some similarities and some differences I would say," Hillegas said. "To make the short move from Dorchester, just five miles and over the bridge here to Quincy was nice. It's certainly a different neighborhood – a different community.

"Both Dorchester and Quincy have seen some pretty significant demographic shifts over the past generation in terms of immigration, how the schools are changing and how the businesses are changing. All those changes are causing the community to ask some new questions about where's the community life. Where are we going? What's our identity as a community?

REV. ERIC HILLEGAS

"The church is a reflection of the community. The questions are just as pressing here in Quincy as they are in Dorchester."

Hillegas held several jobs after graduating from Notre Dame with degrees in business, philosophy and political science. The jobs in his concentrations gave him a working knowledge of the fields he majored in and he finds himself referring back to them today. "I didn't spend a long time in those vocations but I'm experienced in them," he said. "It's interesting being in a church context.

"When I come in here, I can wear different hats in this position. Churches are non-profit organizations so we have our managerial hat. Another hat we wear is our performance hat on Sunday when we celebrate the Eucharist and we do the Christian education. And there's the pastoral hat of going to the hospital. That's the communal glue of a lot of what we do."

As a man of the cloth, it's little wonder that he looks at Jesus Christ as his "role model" but there are mortal individuals who he has a great deal of respect for. The Reverend Desmond Tutu is one figure who Hillegas holds in great esteem because his faith and courage in the face of apartheid.

"It was the work he did to hold things together," said Hillegas. "Not just through tension but serious pain when South Africa was coming out of apartheid. That could have looked a lot differently than it did. This was someone who was discerning, to the best of his ability, where was God's voice in the midst of this and where was the community going to find reconciliation. He paid a big cost, socially, for that. He learned to put himself in what is sometimes described as the cruciform position. He was bridging the gap between two sides that could have very easily turned themselves apart. I find that, not only inspiring, but to be very much at the heart of what it means to be a Christian."

Hillegas' strength in leading a parish and teaching the word of God is his ability to listen to what parishioners have to say. His background in an array of disciplines also is a major plus in his new position. "I was having

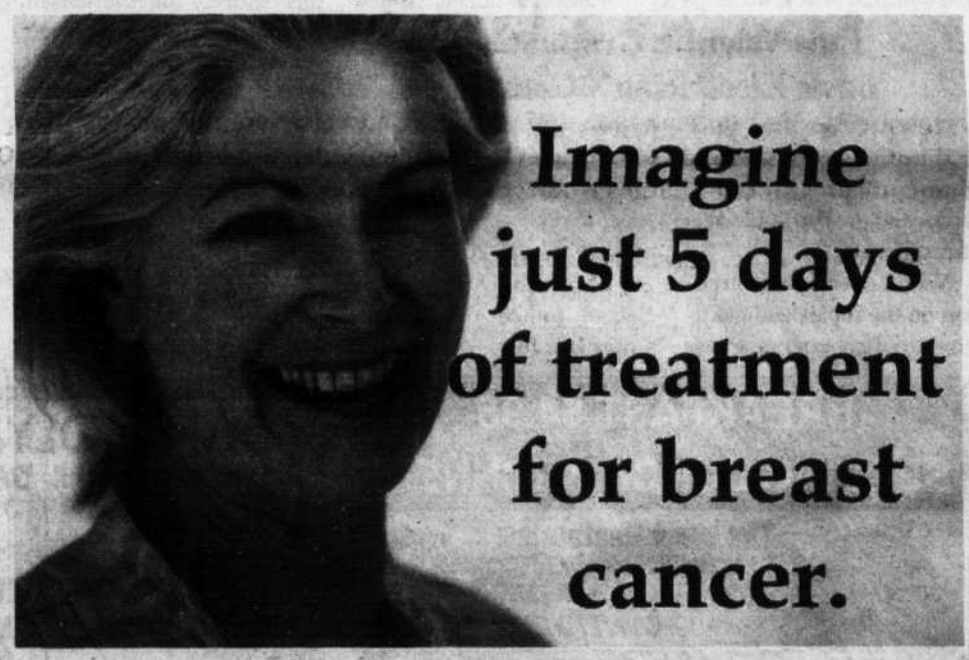
Minot's Ledge Lighthouse Topic At Quarry Museum Meeting April 6

The Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum will hold an open meeting for members and the public Wednesday, April 6 at 7 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

Becky Bates McArthur and Paul Fiori of the Cohasset Historical Society will give a presentation on the subject of Cohasset's Minot's Ledge Lighthouse. They will tell the story of the first Minot's Light which was destroyed in a storm in 1851 and replaced by the second structure which was built with Quincy granite from the Granite Railway Quarry.

The presentation will include information on Government Island which served as the staging area for construction of Minot's Light with diagrams and photos of the building of the lighthouse along with a DVD video of the interior of the lighthouse.



Free Coffee Tasting Friday At St. Chrysostom's Church

Coffee Master and Starbucks Manager Marie Titus will host a free coffee tasting at St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church, Friday, March 25 at 6 p.m.

The church is located at the corner of Linden and Hancock Streets in Wollaston.

The public is invited to tour the world's major coffee regions and explore how food and coffee produce complementary flavors.

To RSVP, email Fr. Eric Hillegas at eric.hillegas@gmail.com.

South Suburban Oncology Center helps you spend less time fighting cancer and more time living.

South Suburban Oncology Center in Quincy offers pioneering treatment for early stage breast cancer patients. Electronic Brachytherapy is a new alternative in partial breast irradiation, through advanced technology that is breaking barriers in breast cancer treatment. SSOC is proud to be one of the first - and few - centers in the country to offer this to our patients.

- FDA-approved treatment for early stage breast cancer
- Eligible patients are treated for 5 days, twice a day
- Less radiation exposure to the heart and lungs versus MammoSite
- Clinicians can be at patient's side during treatment
- High levels of patient satisfaction

For more information, including eligibility, contact SSOC today.

This treatment may not be appropriate for all early stage breast cancers. A specific criteria will determine if a woman is eligible to participate with this treatment option.

Quincy High School Takes Fourth Moody's Mega Math Challenge

Quincy High School's two teams of Moody's Mega Math Challengers recently were hard at work on a Saturday analyzing a problem that even world leaders must confront—and have trouble confronting.

During a 14-hour period (from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m.), the students participated in the math challenge with a chance to win a share of $100,000.

Over 700 teams, each consisting of three to five students, gathered in kitchens, libraries and classrooms—actually anywhere they chose—to apply mathematical analysis to the problem that was a mystery to them until they downloaded it at 7 a.m.

Their challenge was entitled, "Colorado River Water: Good to the Last Acre-Foot," a problem involving drought and water-use issues. Using any inanimate sources of information, teams had until 9 p.m. to upload their solutions to the Challenge website. Highest scores will go to teams whose solutions are creative and based on a well-analyzed mathematical model.

Quincy High School's mathematics department chair Evelyn Ryan recruited and registered the two teams.

"Twenty students signed up this year, and schools can only have ten students take part. Making the cuts was really difficult. These are all highly talented and motivated kids," Ryan said. The students prepared by studying the basics of systems analysis for two months, working after school with Larry Shea, the team's community liaison.

Sponsoring the Challenge is the Moody's Foundation, the charitable organization of the Moody's Corporation.

The competition organizer is SIAM, the Society for Industrial and Applied Mathematics. The goal of this entirely Internet-based challenge is to encourage students to pursue math-related studies and careers. Schools throughout the eastern U.S. are eligible to participate.

The top six teams will present their papers and receive their awards at Moody's corporate headquarters in Manhattan on April 28th.

Marine Corps Pfc. Luis A. Valentin, son of Carmen Casiano of Quincy, recently completed the Basic Electrician's Course.

Valentin received instruction on the repair and maintenance of generators, transformers and power lines as well as circuitry, electrical theory and related safety procedures.

Valentin, a 2010 graduate of North Quincy High School joined the Marine Corps last July.

Suggests Cape Wind Turbines Be Built Here

Keating Pursues Jobs At Former Shipyard

By JOE REARDON

Cong. William Keating is aggressively pursuing bringing jobs to Quincy through the MassTank company's need for a location to build shafts for the Cape Wind farm turbines.

MassTank, which is based in Middleboro, is the largest industrial tank manufacturer in the Northeast. The company is currently expanding its business into wind turbine components, and is now looking for the proper location for a large manufacturing plant to construct their product.

The work would entail building components for 130 turbines that would make up the offshore Cape Wind park to be located off the Cape Cod coast. Cape Wind is proposing to be the country's first offshore wind farm on Horseshoe Shoal in Nantucket Sound. The wind turbines will harness the wind to produce up to 420 megawatts of clean, renewable energy. Cape Winds will provide three quarters of the Cape and Islands electricity needs when fully functional.

"The whole point is to bring jobs back to the Quincy Shipyard," said Keating. "It's clearly something that I believe makes sense going forward."

"When I entered Congress, I promised the people of this district that I would work day, and night to bring jobs home, and that is exactly what I am trying to do. MassTank is a strong, local company. Opening its new venture at the Quincy Shipyard would be a great opportunity for both Mass Tank and our community. It's the right amount of space, there is easy access to the shipyard and we have more than enough men and women who are ready to go to work. In fact, not even counting the construction jobs needed to complete this venture, hundreds of permanent jobs may be created in the manufacturing plant."

Cong. WILLIAM KEATING

Keating recently met with Carl Horstmann and Stephen Lynch of MassTank in an attempt to bring the work to Quincy. Keating said the project could create as many as 300 jobs and the shipyard would be a prime location because of the amount of available space. Advancing economic stimulus in Quincy is also high on Keating's priorities in Washington. Mass Tank is still reviewing possible locations across the Commonwealth for the project and there has been no indication when a decision would be made.

MassTank President and CEO Carl Horstmann is looking at sites in Massachusetts to build the massive, 17-inch wide and 165-foot long turbine shafts. "Obviously, we can't build them in Middleboro," said Horstmann. "We need to be on the water where we can have the steel shipped in. Quincy is a wonderful site. Congressman Keating and Tim Gordon of Cape Wind have been very supportive."

Horstmann said the project is a solid one because it keeps money and jobs in the United States. "As Americans, we see a billion dollars a day go to the middle east for fossil fuel," he said.

Horstmann said that 100-plus jobs would be created "out of the gate" beginning at the end of 2011 or early 2012.

Keating believes the shipyard is the perfect setting for the construction of the turbines.

"MassTank's offshore wind components will go directly to the construction of Cape Wind," he said. "It would be only fitting that the components made in one part of our district would directly contribute to a project in the other part. I truly believe that if MassTank opens their manufacturing plant in Quincy, it will bring both new jobs and revenue to our district, and I am willing to work with whoever it takes to make this happen."

MassTank would not be the only business at the shipyard. The New England Aquarium opened a satellite location in the shipyard last summer for endangered sea life that needs medical treatment.

Will Be 45-Caliber; Replaced Every 10 Years

Council OKs $80,000 For New Police Firearms

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Council Monday approved a request by Police Chief Paul Keenan for $80,000 to purchase some 200 new firearms for the police department.

Prior to the meeting, Keenan said the funds will be used to replace all firearms for the entire department as required by the city's contract with the Quincy Police Patrol Officers Association.

"It's a contractual situation," said Keenan, adding, "Every ten years they have to be replaced."

Keenan said the new weapons will be 45 calibers rather than the current 40 calibers.

As for the old weapons, he said that they will be turned into the manufacturer for a credit toward the purchase, "The weapons are still serviceable."

Asked why all the guns must replaced at the same time rather than on a staggered schedule, Keenan said that it is a safety issue.

As an example, he said that when officers are using their weapons side by side, they must be able to exchange magazines. If the police officers have different types of guns, they cannot exchange ammunition.

Keenan said the gun purchase is ordinarily part of the routine budget, but he plans to have officers qualified at the shooting range as soon as possible.

On Tuesday, Captain John Dougan met with representatives of the gun manufacturer, Sig Sauer, to discuss the order. Dougan said he hopes to have the new weapons in place and officers trained by June.

Young Boy Medicated Before He Died Of Carbon Monoxide

By JOE REARDON

An 8-year-old boy was given allergy medication before his mother turned on a hibachi in an apparent murder-suicide incident in January in Germantown.

According to the death certificate that was filed with the Quincy City Clerk's office by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts' medical examiner, Brandon Yang was given a high dose of diphenydramine by 39-year-old Li Rong Zhang. The combination of the medication and carbon dioxide fumes killed Yang on the afternoon of January 13 at his home at 19 Yardarm Lane in the Germantown section of Quincy.

Zhang pled not guilty when she was arraigned on first-degree murder charges at her bedside at Massachusetts General Hospital. She is currently being held at MCI Framingham.

Norfolk County District Attorney's Office Spokesman David Traub said the investigation is ongoing and the office declined to make a statement on the medical examiner's findings. "That's something we wouldn't comment on at this time," said Traub.

While it is used to treat allergies, diphenydramine also has a powerful "hypnotic effect" and is often used as a non-prescription sleep aid.

A search warrant was obtained that night and police determined that the hibachi, which was located in a bedroom with Yang and Zhang, was only burning charcoal.

Zhang's 16-year-old son, Dennis Yang, called Quincy Police when he arrived home from school at 3:40 p.m. to find smoke pouring out of the second-floor bedroom window. The smoke and carbon dioxide detectors outside the room did not go off. Firefighters were hindered in getting to the pair because a ceiling-high bureau had been placed in front of the door inside the room. Both individuals were unresponsive when firefighters reached them in the smoke-filled room. Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan said burning charcoal in a wok-type hibachi is commonly used in suicide attempts in China.

In a press conference at Quincy Police Headquarters on January 14, Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey said his thoughts were with Yang's family. "My heart goes out for anybody with young kids," said Morrissey. "It's one of those difficult tragedies."

Zhang was unconscious, but was revived by CPR. Yang was transported to the Quincy Medical center where he was pronounced dead. An investigation into the incident determined there were no problems with the heating in the apartment and there was no indication the hibachi grill was being used for heat. Keenan said that it didn't appear that anything was being cooked on the grill.

Mayor Thomas Koch said the entire incident is a tragedy. "First and foremost, our deepest sympathies go out to Brandon's family," said Koch. "It's tragedies like these that pull our community together, and our thoughts and prayers remain with them. We know the District Attorney is conducting a full investigation of this incident, and we expect that the Housing Authority is doing likewise."

Police were at the address once before when they responded to a domestic call in 2005. Upon arrival, police found Zhang arguing with her now estranged husband. No charges were filed.

Palmucci Proposal Targets Negligent Property Owners

However, several property owners and realtors disagreed and asked the committee to clarify the amendment to protect law-abiding property owners.

Property owner and local businessman Anthony Agnitti supported the goal of the proposed amendment but sought protections inserted for property owners.

"I like the idea of (the law) having teeth," said Agnitti, but also, stated, "We, as landlords, should have some sort of rights."

Agnitti said there should be a specific process, objective criteria, and notification to property owners of arrests of tenants. "Tenants assume if the police are here, the landlord knows."

In addition, the realtors said they need support in dealing with unruly tenants and pressed for enforcement and arrests by police responding to complaints. Such arrest records are needed for landlords to act and to seek evictions.

"In the courts, we never get any help," said Kenneth Scarry who operates his real estate business in Wollaston as does the third speaker, Alyse Baker-Boncaldo, a Wollaston realtor, who noted that such problems arise in single-family homes as well as in multiple dwellings.

Both Scarry and Agnitti described a court system that is oriented to tenants rights and described an eviction process that averages six to eight months.

Savvy tenants know how to work the system, according to Agnitti who described an episode with one difficult tenant that cost him $22,000.

"You do get a bad egg. It's the nature of the business," said Agnitti who added, "You don't want the regulations to be onerous."

Committee members agreed there should be some changes in the original amendment and unanimously approved revisions submitted by Councillor John Keenan.

The final version will be reviewed once more by the Ordinance Committee and submitted for official council approval at the next City Council meeting.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Figuring Out Retirement

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Metropolitan
Public Affairs Specialist in Quincy

For almost every American worker, Social Security is "part of the plan" for a secure retirement. If you are among the roughly 95 percent of workers in the United States who are covered under Social Security, here's a primer on retirement coverage.

When you work and pay Social Security taxes, you earn "credits" toward Social Security benefits. If you were born in 1929, or later, you need 40 credits or 10 years of work to qualify for retirement benefits. No retirement benefits can be paid until you have the required number of credits. If you stop working before you have enough credits to qualify for benefits, the credits will remain on your Social Security record. If you return to work later, you can add more credits so that you qualify.

Your benefit amount is based on how much you earned during your working career. Higher lifetime earnings result in higher benefits. A worker with average earnings can expect a retirement benefit that replaces about 40 percent of his or her average lifetime earnings. Social Security was never intended to be your only source of income when you retire. You also will need other savings, investments, pensions, or retirement accounts to make sure you have enough money to live comfortably when you retire.

Your benefit payment also is affected by the age at which you decide to retire and begin receiving benefits. If you were born in 1942 or earlier, you already are eligible for your full Social Security benefit. If you were born from 1943 to 1960, the age at which full retirement benefits are payable increases gradually to age 67.

You can get Social Security retirement benefits as early as age 62, but if you retire before your full retirement age, your benefits will be reduced, based on your age. If you retire at age 62, your benefit would be about 25 percent lower than what it would be if you waited until you reach full retirement age. You may choose to keep working even beyond your full retirement age. If you do, you can increase your future Social Security benefits — up until age 70.

Choosing when to retire is an important decision, but it's also a personal choice and one you should carefully consider. When's the best time? There is no one-size-fits-all answer. Social Security offers a list of factors to consider in the publication When to Start Receiving Retirement Benefits at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10147.html. In addition, Social Security provides an online Retirement Estimator to get immediate and personalized retirement benefit estimates to help you plan for your retirement. The Retirement Estimator is a convenient and secure financial planning tool, allowing you to create "what if" scenarios. For instance, you can change your "stop work" dates or expected future earnings to create and compare different retirement options. If you have a few minutes, you have time to check it out at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

When you're ready, you can apply online for retirement benefits at www.socialsecurity.gov or call our toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213 (TTY: 1-800-325-0778). Or, you can make an appointment to visit any Social Security office to apply in person.

Rev. Eric Hillegas Calling: From Cambodia To Quincy

a conversation with a friend of mine in the dioceses just yesterday," said Hillegas. "I'll use his words if I may. Sometimes people notice things about us than we notice ourselves. There's a passage in Matthew's gospel where Jesus he's talking about life in the kingdom, a householder, someone who works in a larger institution who brings out something that is old and brings out something that is new and finds a place for them in the house.

"This friend of mine was applying that image, he thought, to some of the work that I had been doing, both in Dorchester and here in Quincy. I have a varied background."

Many parishioners have been part of the Saint Chrysostom community for years and Hillegas has taken a strong interest in hearing their stories and those of other parishioners. "Being a priest in a community like Quincy, my first year is all about listening, listening to the parishioners who are here," he said. "We have some parishioners who have been here over 50 years. And being able to listen to them and understand the traditional and values of this parish community is important.

REVEREND ERIC HILLEGAS with children he taught English to during his time in Cambodia. Hillegas is looking to strengthen the community's involvement in the Episcopal Parish of St. Chrysostom in Wollaston.

"We have a variety of parishioners here. Some have been here for a long, long time and some are relatively new. I want to hear their stories about their life here at this church, what brought them here, what are some of their really great memories about their time here and what has been challenging about their time here.

"I think we start to understand who we are when we hear those stories and capture those stories."

Hillegas is looking to draw new parishioners and believes a powerful way of adding parish numbers is having social get-togethers where people can get a taste of what the St. Chrysostom community has to offer. A discussion series entitled "The Way the World Works" is scheduled for Wednesday evenings through April 13 at the Adams Pub at the Best Western Hotel.

Discussion and drinks will be centered on the lectures of Ward Smith, who will explore the "explore the intersection of religious faith with popular schools of existentialism, systems theory and biology." The program presents interesting ideas in a casual context for those in attendance.

Feedback from the parish community towards Hillegas and his work has been positive over the first four months and he hopes to make the parish more vibrant in the three years he will be spreading God's word.

"I've been very welcomed I can say," Hillegas said. "Anytime a new priest comes in a parish, changes happen - not because I'm trying to change things but because I'm a different person than Father David Hefling. He did some very good things in this community and I can see that from the people who are here.

"Who are we now and what's it going to mean for the future of this community? We talk about the body of Christ and the church as a living institution," said Hillegas. "We need bodies for that to work well. The church should be, at one level, a reflection of the community and we hope to be represented by that – by the community around us."

"People talk about what kind of a culture do we live in. The opportunity the church has is to show what it means to be a Christian."

St. Ann Church To Hold Quincy Lenten Mission March 27-29

St. Ann Church in Quincy will host a Quincy Lenten Mission entitled, "Open my Heart, Lord" Sunday, March 27th, through Tuesday, March 29th.

The three-day Mission has been developed by a committee of parishioners to create a new mission experience for both the parish community of St. Ann's as well as the communities of St. Joseph's and Holy Trinity.

Each evening's service will begin at 7 p.m. followed by a social gathering and refreshments in the lower church.

All are welcome to attend.

"We are very excited about our efforts this year," said Bob Gardiner of St. Ann's. "Our committee really worked together to get ourselves outside of what everyone thinks about as the traditional "boxes" of a Lenten mission to consider what kind of format would add value for those attending. We think that what we have planned will be a different and very beautiful experience."

Sunday evening's prayer and reflection will focus on how each of us has experienced Christ's love in our lives. This will include personal witness talks presented by selected members of St. Ann Parish.

Monday evening's prayer and reflection will invite us to consider how we are each called to be "good news" to others. Part of this spiritual meditation will include a ritual with the book of the Gospels.

Tuesday will be the last evening of the mission and will be a celebration of Mass and the affirmation that we are all one body in Christ.

The mission will also incorporate music and multimedia and will include a performance by a chorus of young people who have worked on music especially for the mission.

Sister Patricia Boyle, Pastoral Associate at St. Ann's said, "The work that has gone into the planning of this mission has been both creative and joyful." "As a parish, we are always looking for new ways to bring ourselves closer to God and this mission will be a wonderful opportunity for people to do that."

The mission, which started at St. Ann Parish, has expanded to included both St. Joseph's Parish and Holy Trinity Parish, both of Quincy.

Father John Ronaghan, Pastor of St. Ann Church said, "This is a wonderful way for us to come together as a Catholic community in Quincy and experience a prayerful and enriching experience during this Lenten season.

"I am grateful to everyone who helped us to develop this mission and am looking forward to seeing many new faces at the end of the month."

"In these busy times – we always seem to find time to check our E-mail or send one more text message," said Sister Patricia Boyle.

"Lent reminds us that we need to turn inward to examine our hearts and listen to God's word. Our 'Open my Heart, Lord' mission will be a wonderful opportunity to do that."

St. Ann Church is located at 757 Hancock St., Quincy. For more information, call 617-479-5400 or visit www.stannwollaston.org.

Quincy After School Child Care Receives $8,000 Grant

Quincy After School Child Care, Inc. (QCARE) received an $8,000 grant from the Ronald McDonald House Charities (RMHC) of Eastern New England at a recent check presentation at the McDonald's Restaurant on Southern Artery, Quincy.

The grant will help fund QCARE's Computer Lab program at the Lincoln Hancock Community School.

"We are thrilled to receive this generous grant from the RMHC of Eastern New England," said Quincy After School Executive Director Sarah Dunphey.

"This funding will allow so many children in our care to have access to computers after school and during the summer months and will provide greater educational enrichment for our participants for years to come. We are thankful that even in difficult economic times, the Ronald McDonald House Charities of Eastern New England continues to give support to so many deserving children and families."

Quincy After School Child Care is a non-profit organization providing after school care in nine elementary and one middle school within the city. In addition, they operate February, April and summer vacation programs at the Lincoln Hancock School.

Carole Saia, the Development Assistant, said Lincoln Hancock is a good location for a Computer Lab since it would be utilized year round due to the fact that vacation programs are run in this location, giving more children access to the benefits of such technology.

"We are extremely grateful to RMHC for making this goal a reality. We could not do this without their support. We rely on fund-raising to support our goals in order to ensure that we keep our tuition costs affordable for families."

For more information about Quincy After School, visit www.quincyafterschool.org.

"For over 20 years, RMHC of Eastern New England has created, identified and supported programs which directly improve the health and well being of thousands and thousands of local children and families every year," said Karen McEachern, executive director of RMHC of Eastern New England. "We're proud to support Quincy After School Child Care, Inc. to help ensure that their students have a brighter tomorrow."

Since it was organized in 1986, RMHC of Eastern New England has given over $21 million to organizations and programs helping thousands of children and families throughout Eastern New England.

Quincy Schools, Business Educators To Host 'Credit For Life' Fair March 31

Quincy Public Schools Career and Technical Education Educators will host its third annual "Credit for Life" Fair Friday, March 31 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Boston Marriott Quincy.

The Fair's goal is to provide high school seniors with the ability to be independent adult consumers and have the knowledge of personal finance to survive in today's global economy.

Approximately 250 students from Quincy and North Quincy High School will participate in the third annual fair. Fifteen booths will be displayed throughout the Marriott Ballroom and students will have to spend from a budget based on the future jobs they foresee themselves employed in.

Students will make decisions on how much money they want to spend on transportation, housing, food, clothing, savings, and several other areas.

The Credit for Life Fair is being implemented with the assistance and generosity of numerous Quincy School - Community Partners and local business volunteers from across the South Shore, including Quincy Credit Union, South Coastal Bank, Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, Eastern Bank, Quincy College, Quirk Auto Dealerships, ING, Quincy Chamber of Commerce, South Shore Workforce Investment Board, S Bank, Century 21 - Abigail Adams, Quincy Rotary Club, South Shore YMCA, Donahue Insurance, State Street Corporation, MetLife Insurance, AXA Equitable, Rockland Trust, Century Bank and Trust, Bank of Canton, Colonial Federal Savings Bank and others.

Guests include state Auditor Suzanne M. Bump, Mayor Tom Koch, School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro as well as other community leaders.

"We are excited to help students learn more about budgeting their money after high school. With the state of our economy today, it is more important than ever to educate students about managing money and being financially responsible," said Keith Segalla, executive director, Career and Technical Education and Instructional Technology.

Quincy High School Hosts Science, Technology Fair

12 Projects Head To Regional Competition; 7 Move To State Level At MIT May 5-7th

Over 150 students presented to approximately 400 spectators at the recent annual Quincy High School Science and Engineering Fair.

The event featured over 130 projects from grades 9-12 and spanned fields of biology, chemistry, environmental science, physics, and engineering.

Students worked individually or as a team to investigate everything from discovering what's in sports drink to green energy solutions to cancer research. The in depth project work has helped build career and life skills for success in 21st century careers, such as critical and creative thinking, communication, teamwork, and ethical decision-making.

Quincy High School students work one-on-one with teachers and professionals year round to follow their natural curiosity and explore "real world" science and engineering problems.

Much of the science fair's success is due to approximately seventy five community volunteers from science and technology fields donating their time to judge projects. Each project was assessed at least three times by academic judges and one student judge. Project scores were then tallied and weighting based on scientific approach, creativity, understanding, and presentation.

Each year Quincy High School shows a great diversity of projects and the student's enthusiasm carries the evening as they get to celebrate their accomplishments with the community. "I enjoyed seeing all of the enthusiasm from students who worked on projects of their own and really enjoyed sharing their ideas with us" said Kara McSweeney, Quincy High School graduate; now environmental engineer and judge for the event.

Quincy Partnership's St. Patrick's Day Celebration

WARD 4 COUNCILLOR Brian Palmucci, who served as Michael Morrissey's campaign manager in the race for Norfolk County district attorney, shows one of the orange "Morrissey for DA" lady thongs that were "given away" during the race.

WARD 1 COUNCILLOR Margaret Laforest had the 450 guests laughing with her "you might be a (Houghs) Necker" routine.

CONG. STEVE LYNCH told the crowd he likes to 'celebrate Saint Patrick's Day with scholars and saints. Clearly, I have two more stops to make."

COUNCIL PRESIDENT Kevin Coughlin sings an original tune – Pennies in the Jar – at the Quincy Partnership's 15th annual St. Patrick's Day celebration. He was accompanied by his son, Matthew. The melody was based on the Irish tune "Whiskey in the Jar." Noting the city's various financial concerns, Coughlin sings "how the heck are we gonna pay for all this stuff? Roll those pennies in the jar."

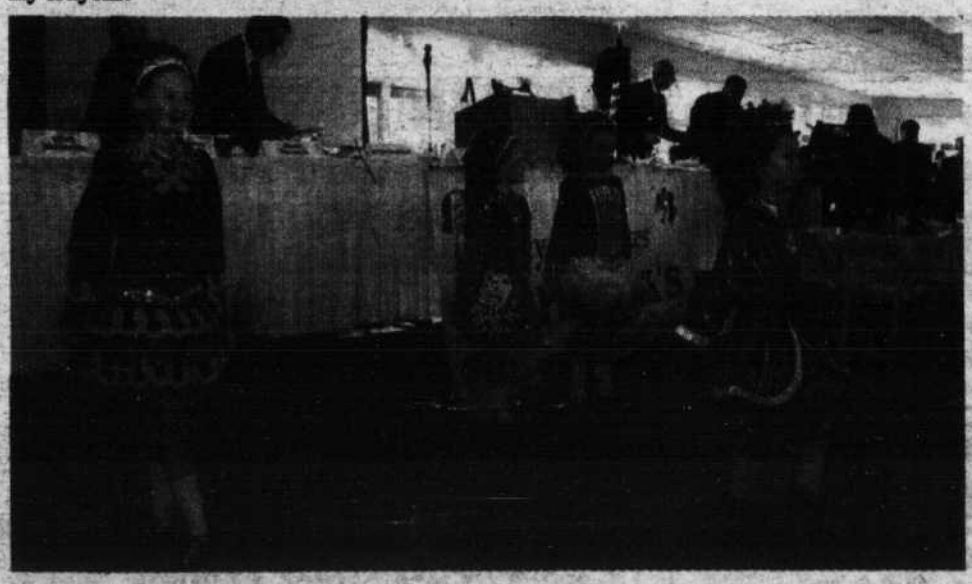
STATE REP. Ron Mariano, the House Majority Leader, got off a few good one-liners at the Quincy Partnership's 15th annual Saint Patrick's Day celebration at the Tirrell Room, Quincy Lodge of Elks.

CITY CLERK Joseph Shea wore another hat at the celebration – actually a gold turban – as "The Amazing Shea-zac", a take-off on the old Johnny Carson skit, "Carnac the Magnificent."



THE FAMILY OF Stephen "Steph" O'Donnell, former Quincy Public Works commissioner, was on hand in a salute to "Steph" who was honored as the Quincy Partnership's Irish Man of the Year. Mr. O'Donnell died last September after a battle with cancer. Family members are: Pam O'Donnell, Steph's wife; son Ryan, brother-in-law Paul Nolan, brother John O'Donnell, Kathy O'Donnell, John's wife; and niece Meaghan O'Donnell.

"THE NICK SKIT" – Mayor Tom Koch and his 12-year-old son, Tom, Jr., who portrayed former city chief financial officer Nick Puleo during an "exit interview" comedy routine. The mayor asked "Nick" about his decision to leave his city post for Boston College High School. One of the reasons he left, "Nick" said, was because Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci "kept stealing my crayons."

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, March 12, at approximately 8 p.m., Drug Unit Detective Barkas was conducting surveillance in the Walgreen's parking lot on Quincy Avenue when she observed a Toyota park far away from the entrance of the pharmacy. She noted that there was a male driver/suspect.

LT. DAN MINTON

Within a minute, a minivan pulled into the parking lot and parked one space away from the other vehicle. A male then exited the minivan and ran over to the other vehicle and got into the Toyota. Within 15 seconds, the male exited the Toyota and returned to his minivan. The minivan left the area, but the Toyota remained in the lot.

Detectives Coen, Ward, O'Brien and Duran joined Detective Barkas, and after a brief conversation, Detective O'Brien and Duran, with their badges displayed, approached the passenger's side of the vehicle while Detectives' Coen and Barkas approached the driver's side of the vehicle. Detective Coen knocked on the window and stated, "Quincy Police - Open your window."

The driver looked up at Detective Coen with a startled look on his face and ignored Detective Coen's request. Detective O'Brien observed the driver reach for an M&M minis container beside his right leg, then put it to his mouth. Detective Coen observed that a corner bag of a white substance believed to be cocaine, fall into the suspect's mouth. Detective Coen, still trying to get the suspect to open the door, observed the suspect to make swallowing motions.

Concerned that the suspect was destroying evidence and harming himself, Detective Coen broke the window and entered the car. Detective O'Brien attempted to stop the suspect's swallowing of evidence and was able to recover two bags of white powder in the suspect's mouth. The suspect then spit out two more bags of a white powder. The suspect was placed under arrest.

A sum of $735 was located in the breast pocket of the suspect's jacket. A total of six plastic bags of a white powder substance believed to be cocaine were recovered in the vehicle. Forty dollars was located under the front passenger seat and $5 U.S. currency was located in the ashtray.

The $40 is relevant to this investigation because detectives involved in this investigation believe that each individual bag of cocaine that the suspect had in his possession sells for approximately. $40-$50.

The suspect, a 40-year-old Salem resident, was charged with, "Possession with Intent to Distribute Class B (cocaine)." Two cell phones and $780 U.S. currency were seized pending civil forfeiture.

Nice Work!

Century 21 Abigail Adams Honored at Awards Event

Century 21 Abigail Adams announces Sam Rounseville, Carolyn Glynn, Sandra Fennelly and owner broker Jayne Magown were recently honored at the New England corporate banquet at the Cambridge Boston Marriott.

Presenting the corporate awards was Vice President of Century 21 Corporate, Patrick Sullivan.

Rounseville, Glynn and Fennelly are all longtime Quincy residents. Magown, originally from Quincy, lives in Norwell.

Rounseville is a distinguished Century 21 Centurion Honor Society member having earned the elite Double Centurion Award for two years. His career achievements also include Top Producer for Century 21 Abigail Adams for 2010 as well as in many years past. He has been affiliated with Century 21 since 1995.

Glynn, affiliated since 1994, was honored for receiving the elite Pinnacle Quality Service Award representing a superlative level of service. This commendation represents dedication to providing service that exceeds customer expectations.

Sale Manager Sandra Fennelly, on behalf of the office, accepted the Quality Service Award for exceptional service ratings by the office's closed sales.

"I commend the inspirational efforts of the agents and management for their unparalleled commitment to quality service found within the Century 21 system," owner broker Jayne Magown said. "The past year has seen enormous challenges for sellers, buyers and agents alike. We strive to bring integrity and professionalism to the real estate marketplace."

In addition, Jayne Magown received a Quality Service Award for 2010.

Established in Quincy in 1979, Century 21 Abigail Adams also has offices in Norwell and Marshfield. For more information call 617.471.7575 or log on to www.c21abigailadams.com.

QMC Only Local Hospital In Area To Utilize Innovative Device

New Colonoscopy Technology Could Save Lives Through Early Detection

March is Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month and it's the perfect time to inform the public of a clinical trial under way at Quincy Medical Center (QMC) that may improve current screening techniques for this preventable disease.

Daniel Mishkin, MD, a gastroenterologist on staff at QMC, is currently conducting a clinical research study using a medical device that can be used along with a standard colonoscope to improve a physician's ability to find abnormalities in the colon.

Colorectal cancer is one of the most commonly diagnosed cancers in the United States and it is the second leading cause of cancer-related deaths in the United States, with approximately 152,000 new cases and over 50,000 deaths annually. It is also potentially one of the easiest cancers to prevent, because most cancers in the colon arise from a type of polyp called an adenoma.

"If these pre-cancerous adenomas can be detected and removed, they never get to progress into cancers," explains Dr. Mishkin. "Yet, while it is widely agreed that colorectal cancer screening saves lives, there are limitations to our current screening methods, and this is what we wish to improve."

Colonoscopy is currently regarded to be the "gold standard" for detecting colorectal adenomas and cancers, and is the only method that allows both diagnosis and removal of abnormalities during a single procedure. However, research shows that 12-24% of adenomas and a significant number of cancers can be missed during routine colonoscopy, especially when they are located behind the folds and turns that naturally occur in the walls of the colon.

Dr. Mishkin is testing a new technology at Quincy Medical Center that could improve current screening results. An innovative device, the Third Eye® Retroscope® provides a retrograde view or "rear view" that enables a doctor to see behind folds in the colon wall, where cancers may be hiding.

This FDA-cleared technology is a miniature video endoscope that is smaller in diameter than a ballpoint pen refill. It is contained within a standard colonoscope, acting much like a rear view mirror and providing improved visualization for the physician. After it is passed through the instrument channel of the colonoscope, the tip of the Third Eye Retroscope turns around so that its camera provides a reverse view that appears on a screen side-by-side with the traditional forward-looking view of the colonoscope. Several previous research studies have shown that "Third Eye colonoscopy" can detect up to 23-25% additional adenomas compared to standard colonoscopy in patients who have average risk for colorectal cancer.

"I have been using the Third Eye Retroscope for some time now and have been very impressed with what I have seen," says Dr. Mishkin. "Three recent studies have shown a significant increase in the detection of pre-cancerous adenomas. My study in a community hospital setting is designed to further clarify the additional benefit of this equipment and to determine if there is a clinical advantage. It could potentially redefine what the gold standard procedure is for colorectal cancer screening."

Dr. Mishkin's study is the first to use this technology to look only at patients who have above-average risk for developing adenomas and cancer due to one of three factors:

- History of polyps found during a previous colonoscopy
- History of recent symptoms that could indicate a problem in the colon
- Family history of colorectal cancer

Dr. Mishkin is enrolling 150 patients who are already planning to have a colonoscopy either at Quincy Medical Center or at the Atrius Health Endoscopy Center in Weymouth. Because funding is provided through a research grant, there will be no additional cost to patients who participate in the study beyond the usual fee for a standard colonoscopy.

"This study is designed to evaluate Third Eye colonoscopy in the "real world" settings of a leading community hospital and an ambulatory endoscopy center – typical of the locations where most colonoscopies are performed in the U.S. – rather than in a university medical center," says Jack Higgins, MD, Chief Medical Officer of Avantis Medical Systems, which developed the device. "Also, in contrast to the largest and most recent study of the Third Eye in which patients underwent two complete procedures, one with and one without the Third Eye, Dr. Mishkin will perform a single Third Eye colonoscopy procedure exactly as he and other physicians do it in their normal practice."

Dr. Mishkin practices with Granite Medical Group in Quincy and is nationally known for his involvement in research of new technologies in the field of Gastroenterology. A prolific author and nationally known lecturer, he recently edited his own GI textbook and has been sought as a clinical consultant for NASA.

Quincy Medical Center is a 196-bed acute care community-teaching hospital, providing quality, personalized and comprehensive medical and surgical services to patients throughout the South Shore.

A private, nonprofit hospital, QMC has served the needs of its diverse patient population since 1890.

Granite Medical Group Earns Top Clinical Quality Ratings

Granite Medical Group, an affiliate of Atrius Health, announces its internal medicine practice scored at or above the national 90th percentile ratings in important preventive and chronic care quality measures in the 2011 Massachusetts Health Quality Partners (MHQP) Quality Insights: Clinical Quality in Primary Care report.

Granite Medical physicians achieved the highest ratings in chlamydia screening in young women; diabetes care for adults; asthma care for adults; correct imaging test for lower back pain; and screenings for breast cancer, colorectal cancer, and cervical cancer.

Granite Medical Group is accepting new patients and is located in the Crown Colony Medical Center, 500 Congress St., Quincy (phone: 617-471-0033).

Founded in 1997, Granite Medical joined Atrius Health in 2005. Their 20 physicians and five nurse practitioners provide patients with the highest quality of care.

In addition to internal medicine, many of Granite Medical providers have expertise in sub-speciality medicine, including cardiology, endocrinology, gastroenterology, gerontology, hepatology, nutrition, podiatry, pulmonary medicine and rheumatology.

The Main Causes of Constipation

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What brings on severe constipation? My movements are six to eight days apart. The doctor says milk of magnesia is no good. I am 85. Any help? – C.Y.

ANSWER: A diet too low in fiber, not drinking enough fluids and lack of physical activity are the main ingredients for constipation. Sometimes, prescribed medicines are at fault.

Fiber is the indigestible part of foods. It holds on to water as food passes through the intestinal tract, and keeps the food residue moist and soft. Fruits, vegetables and whole grains are fiber sources. "Whole grains" mean the grains haven't been refined. They still have their outer coat, the bran. You can find many whole-grain breads and cereals. One cereal is All-Bran. It's not the only one. If you can't get enough fiber in foods, then turn to such things as Metamucil, FiberCon or Citrucel. You'll find them in every drugstore.

Older people often drink less fluid than they need. Their thirst sensation isn't as strong as it once was. Make sure you're taking in enough liquids. Water isn't the only liquid that keeps you hydrated.

After breakfast, take a walk. Physical activity stimulates the digestive tract to move food through it more quickly. That also keeps undigested food moist and soft. Take more walks throughout the day.

Doctors used to be quite reluctant to suggest laxatives to their patients. They were afraid that patients would get into the "laxative habit" or that the colon would become dependent on laxatives. Neither of these things happens. No single laxative works for all. You have to find one that suits you. I don't know why your doctor is down on milk of magnesia. It works for many. If it's not working for you, try Miralax. Follow its directions for use. Once you have established a regular pattern to your movements, you can back away from laxatives so you're not headed in the direction of too many evacuations. Stay on the regimen of fiber, fluids and activity.

The booklet on constipation provides other tips on how to combat this all-but-universal problem. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue – No. 504W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Lately I have noticed my friend's head shaking when she is talking or just standing. This just started. I spoke to her about it, and she said she won't see a doctor. She had a problem with her ear and got that taken care of. Could her ear have caused the shaking to happen? – Anon.

ANSWER: The head shaking most likely is due to essential tremor, also called familial tremor. It affects the head, the hands, the voice or all three. Your friend's ear problem didn't cause it; her genes did.

If the shaking doesn't bother her, she can ignore it. It's not going to harm her health or shorten her life. If it does bother her, then a medicine like propranolol (Inderal) usually can abolish it.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

CAN CHIROPRACTIC EASE MIGRAINE PAIN?

Migraine headaches are often painful and debilitating events for which there is no cure. However, the condition can be managed to the extent that the frequency of the attacks can be reduced and their severity lessened. Knowledge of what causes a migraine is limited to understanding that it involves changes in the blood flow in the brain. At first, blood vessels constrict, which reduces blood flow, leading to visual disturbances, difficulty speaking, and weakness/numbness/tingling sensations in one area of the body. Next, the blood vessels dilate, causing increased blood flow and a severe headache. While no treatment helps all migraine sufferers, one study shows that 22% of those who received chiropractic manipulation reported more than a 90% reduction of attacks.

If you suffer from migraines, you're certainly not alone. Are you in pain? Chiropractic care has helped millions of people. Let us at the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC help you perform your personal best. Give us a call at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We have the experience and expertise to give you the care you need. Let us help you! You deserve to live life without pain. Let us make a difference for your good health and comfort right now and in the future. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. In the study mentioned above, 49% of the migraine sufferers treated with chiropractic manipulation indicated that they experienced a significant reduction in the intensity of each migraine.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

DIABETICS AND GUM DISEASE

Diabetics should be conscientious about visiting the dentist as often as recommended. According to a recent review of data from seven studies, patients with both diabetes and gum disease who were treated for their periodontal conditions over a four-month period displayed better glucose control than diabetic patients whose gum disease was left untreated. Periodontal disease, a bacterial infection of the gums that induces redness and inflammation, can be effectively treated with antibiotics and plaque removal by the hygienist. Plaque is the bacteria-laden, sticky substance that collects on tooth surfaces. This build-up may cause chemical changes that weaken diabetics' ability to metabolize glucose. Thus, diabetic patients should be scrupulous about brushing and flossing at home and scheduling regular professional tooth cleanings.

Periodontal disease is often silent, meaning symptoms may not appear until an advanced stage of the disease. Persistent swollen, red or bleeding gums, tooth sensitivity, and bad breath are among the warning signs of periodontal (gum) disease. If you need answers to a dental problem, or just want to improve your daily dental care, you'll find we have the information you need to keep your smile in top shape. We're commited to your best interests. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule your next appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Because plaque reforms on the gums on a continual daily basis, brushing and flossing daily is essential to staving off tooth decay and gum disease.

Bishops Repeated As Division 4 State Champions

Four Quincy Girls Lift AWHS Cheerleading To Another Level

By SEAN BRENNAN

On Friday afternoon in the gymnasium at Archbishop Williams High School, Ali Fareri had both of her ankles securely taped. Next to her, Victoria Galvin received tape treatment on her left wrist while Bridget Durkin and Taylor Stewart, neither visibly in need of medical attention but sore nonetheless, got down to preparing for one last grueling practice session.

These four hail from Quincy's Merrymount, West Quincy, Hospital Hill and Houghs Neck sections, respectively, and all are members of a Bishops' cheerleading program that over the past two seasons has been the best squad in the state's Division 4 bracket.

Cheerleading isn't a real sport, you say. Durkin, Fareri, Galvin and Stewart would beg to differ.

They just spent the last ten months perfecting the art of stunting, tumbling, cheering, dancing and jumping; their season began in late June with a three-day tryout and continued with weekly team practices throughout the hot summer months, which tumbled into the fall season with Catholic Central League competitions and Friday night football games; the winter months brought with them more competitions, nightly basketball games and finally the end-of-the-year championships.

Throughout it all the Bishops never wavered. Following an undefeated league competition season, AWHS captured the Div. 4 South Sectionals with a program best score of 86 (out of 100) and carried that momentum over to a second straight Div. 4 state title – narrowly defeating Fairhaven with a score of 80. Archies ended its cheerleading odyssey with a second-place finish at the Div. 4 New England Championships held over the weekend, missing out on a gold medal by a mere 0.6 points.

"Instead of lifting weights we lift girls our own size," said Fareri when asked if she considered cheerleading to be a sport. "You also need good body control and good endurance to make it through the whole routine. You need flexibility just like in any other sport; you have to have body strength to be able to hold up your own (body) weight and you need to have rhythm."

"It is basically just like any other sport," she continued, "because it involves all of the elements of other sports."

Cheerleading now a day is no longer pom-poms and circumstance. It is hardcore and sometimes dangerous work requiring dedication, precision and teamwork. With up to 15 participants flipping, lifting and moving together on a surface no bigger than the length of a basketball court from foul line to foul line, cheerleaders today, especially at AWHS, need to be athletes.

"I have been fighting the fight for years and, at this point, whether it is consider a sport, officially, or not, isn't my biggest (issue)," stated coach Kathie Ford Lewis. "I will tell you that not every person that is a cheerleader is an athlete, just like not every football player is an athlete. You can sign up for any sport and sit on the bench and do nothing with your time and you can cheer on a certain squad and do the same thing."

"But my kids are absolutely athletes," Ford Lewis continued. "If you are at the competition level and you are going to Sectionals and States you have to be in phenomenal shape, there is no way around it. Being athletic is an absolute must. (They) suffer injuries similar to any other kid in any other sport. You cannot just take someone off the streets and say 'come on in.' There is no way."

Defending Their State Crown

The 15-member Bishop team made no bones about defending last year's Div. 4 cheerleading title - it was the driving force behind the hours of practice endured, and, not surprisingly, the quest lifted their spirits, healed their injuries and pushed them to perform as one unit.

And the results were record-breaking as the Bishops hit for the trifecta: winning a Catholic Central League championship, a sectional crown and a state title for the first time in school history.

"It took a lot," said Galvin about what was required to defend. "We are here every day for two hours. We stretch, we warm up all of our stunts and our tumbling and then we throw our routine full out."

"We do the same routine at every competition," added Durkin. "It consists of stunts, tumbling, a cheer, a dance and motions (jumps). Stunts is when you lift someone up in the air; tumbling is when girls flip, the dancing is at the end (of the routine) and motions are part of the cheer, which we have to do together."

Winning back-to-back state titles, be it in cheerleading or any other schoolboy sport, is never easy. The Bishops, despite the final results, made sure that everyone was on the same page. Nothing is given, so winning another Div. 4 State Championship required 100% from each team member.

"I think that all the girls wanted it and we just worked hard together," said Fareri about winning another title. "We all wanted to win states and we knew what it took so we worked twice as hard this season to keep our title. It basically was just being here for full team practices because every person plays a significant role and no matter if it is a big part or small part everyone is important."

A Possible Three-Peat?

The Bishops graduate only two seniors so there is a strong possibility that AWHS could well make it three Div. 4 state titles in a row next year. That is quite a shift in expectations for a program that eleven years ago was practicing, not in the gymnasium, but instead in between tables in the cafeteria.

"I have been here for so long," said Ford Lewis who is finishing her 11th year as coach. "I remember practices in the cafeteria doing very basic skills. We didn't even compete that first season and now we have gone all the way up to our first state title last year followed this year by winning our league, winning our regional and then winning at states."

For Fareri and Durkin next year will be their last. Galvin has two campaigns remaining and Stewart, a freshman and the youngest of the Quincy Four, is a cheerleading star in the making. With all four returning to defend these back-to-back state championships, the cheerleading legacy at AWHS should continue to boom. And, hopefully with a continued dominance, any talk of cheerleading not being a legit sport will fully fade away.

"I think that Archies (cheerleading) is slowly starting to give us recognition (as student-athletes)," stated Fareri, "but it hasn't always been that way. The program has been growing in the last two, maybe, three years and it has taken off. (People) are slowly starting to realize that we are good and that we are athletes and as a result girls are coming (to AWHS) for cheerleading and we are separating ourselves from the other (Catholic) schools."

The Quincy - AWHS Connection

Hailing from four unique sections of Quincy and from four different middle schools, Durkin (Central), Fareri (Broad Meadows), Galvin (St. Mary's) and Stewart (St. Ann's) didn't know each other personally before high school but they have become good friends because of cheerleading but

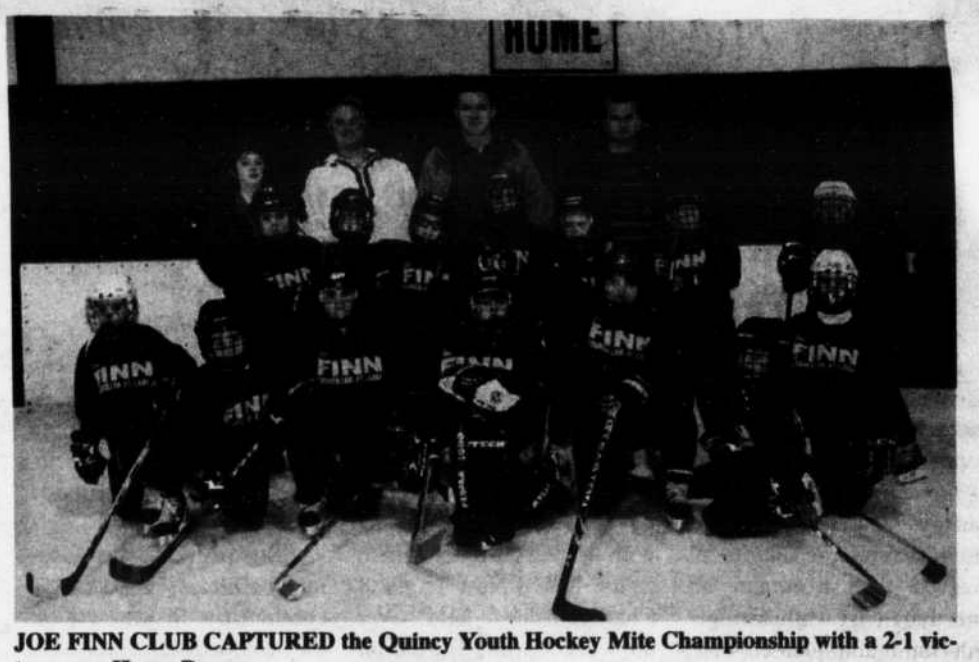
QYH Championships Wrapped Up Season

Add Ryan Quirk to the list of hockey players who have personified March heroics on the ice after last Thursday's Mites final in the Quincy Youth Hockey Association Championships.

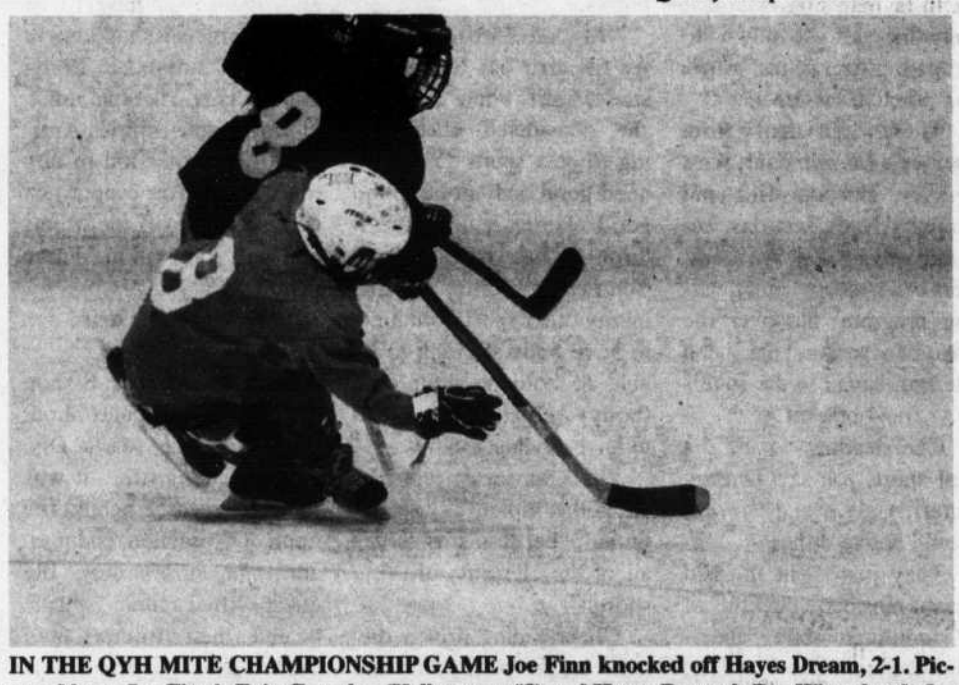
Ryan scored a pair of tallies to fuel the Joe Finn squad to a 2-1 thriller over Hayes Dream at the Quincy Youth Arena. Riley O'Connor's goal in the first period tied the contest 1-1 before Ryan slammed home the game-winner in the second.



In the Squirt final, Matt Keohane was unstoppable, burying home four goals in Keohane's 6-3 win over Burgin Platner on Saturday. Thomas Richardson scored and added an assist, while Colin MacDonald also had a goal. Matt O'Brien and Griffin Batson had assists as part of Keohane's overwhelming offensive attack.

Burgin Platner was efficient in the Keohane's end of the ice on offense with its three tallies. Keroian O'Drisscoll struck for the hat trick (three goals) while John Early and Max Kesaris had assists.

Macedonian Lodge had tallies from four different players in the Pee Wee contest in its win over Colonial Federal. Goals from Garret McMorrow and Paul Blake gave Colonial Federal the 2-1 lead after the first, but it was all Macedonian Lodge from then on as Pete Saccoach, Joe McArdle and Ryan Cox all scored and Mike Balducci and McArdle added goals in the third period.



In the Bantam-Midget final, Parkway beat Quincy, 5-3, behind goals from M. McCarthy (two), J. McKinnon, A. Melton and P. O'Keefe.

NQ Baseball Spring Training Clinic April 16

The North Quincy High School baseball program, in an effort to raise monies for the upcoming season, will conduct a Spring Training Clinic on Sat., April 16 at O'Rourke Field on Quarry Street.

The camp, which is open to all kids ages 6-12 that are looking to get a head start on their spring baseball season, will run from 9 a.m. until 12 p.m. with registration starting at 8:30 a.m. The cost is $25 and that includes a hot dog and a drink for the participants – you don't have to live in Quincy to attend.

The camp will offer instruction in all areas of the game including pitching, hitting, fielding (both infield and outfield), base running, throwing techniques and stretching. Instructors will include the NQHS coaching staff along with all current NQHS players.

If you have any questions regarding the clinic call Angela Long at 617-328-9745 or Beth Liuzzo at 617-328-1416.

MEMBERS OF THE MACEDONIAN LODGE celebrate as Jamboree champions after their win over Colonial Federal in the Pee Wee Division.

Popular Event To Be Held At Pageant Field

14th Annual Quincy Lions Club Run/Walk for Sight April 23

The Quincy Lions Club will hold its 14th Annual Run/Walk for Sight on Sat., April 23 at Pageant Field. Online registration is currently open at www.quincylionsclub.org/2011-Run-Walk-For-Sight.html.

Day-of-race registration will begin April 23 at 9 a.m., followed by the children's 1K race at 10:30 a.m. The adult 5K run/walk, which is on a course certified by U.S. Track & Field, begins at 11 a.m. Prizes will be awarded to race winners in a number of categories and the first 200 registrants will receive a free race T-shirt and runner's giveaway bag.

The registration fee is $20 for adults and $5 for the children's 1K race and includes a buffet lunch following the races. There will also be entertainment and a prize raffle.

"The Run/Walk for Sight is a fun event for the whole family," said Quincy Lions Club President Loretta McTiernan. "The local community has been very supportive of the Lions Club's efforts to help blind and visually impaired individuals and we hope everyone will come out and enjoy this fun and worthwhile event."

Proceeds from the Run/Walk benefit eye research and the Quincy Lions Club's community service activities, including providing free eye exams and free eyeglasses for local residents in need, offering free vision and health screenings, providing college scholarships to local high school students and more.

Free Basic Boating Courses Provided By QPD

The Quincy Marine Unit, in partnership with the Massachusetts Environmental Police, will be presenting three Basic Boating Safety Courses at no cost to the public. These courses are designed for persons of all ages, regardless of boating skill.

Courses are nationally approved and course completion will allow persons to legally operate a boat in states requiring Basic Boating Safety Courses. Everyone who completes the course will be issued a Basic Boating Safety Certificate.

Completion of the course by persons between 12 to 16 years of age will allow them to operate a motorboat without adult supervision. You must be at least 12 years old to register for the class. In addition, some insurance companies offer policy discounts for customers that complete a Basic Boating Safety Course.

All of the courses will be taught at the Houghs Neck Maritime Center, located at 137 Bay View Ave (next to the Quincy Yacht Club on Sea Street).

The three courses will be taught on the following dates:

Saturday afternoon class 12-4 p.m., March 26, April 2 and April 9;

Tuesday evening class 6-10 p.m., April 12, April 19 and April 26 and,

Saturday morning class 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., April 30, May 7 and May 14.

To register for a course or for more information, call the Massachusetts Environmental Police at 508-759-0002.

Four Quincy Girls Lift AWHS Cheerleading To Another Level

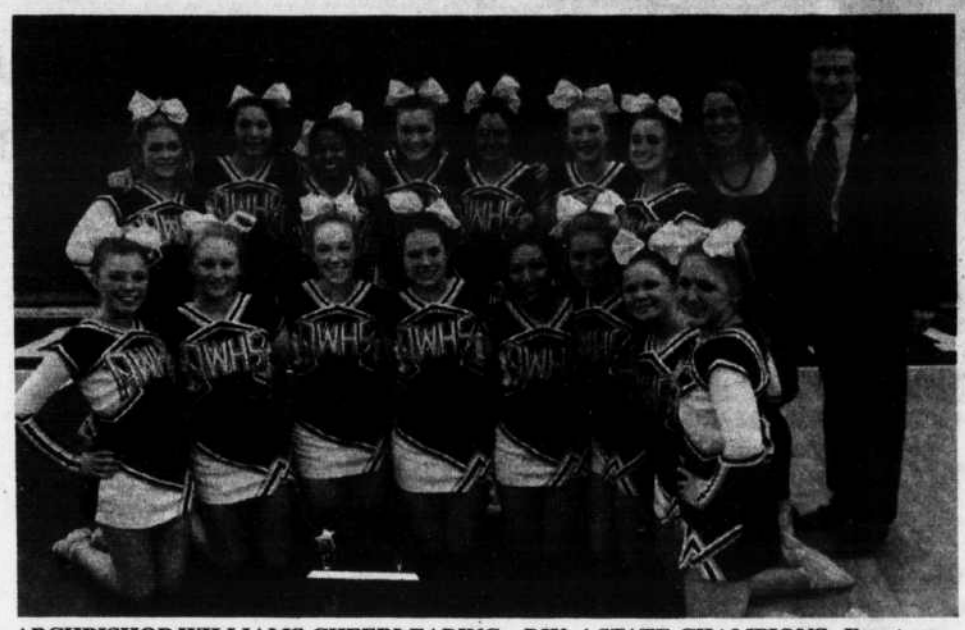
also because of the individual desire to attend Archbishop Williams.

AWHS is not for everybody – succeeding there means being educated spiritually, academically, morally and physically, which are traits that integrates learning with faith and focuses on developing the whole person. In layman's terms, it is hard work.

"A lot of my kids are in honor level (classes) or advanced classes," said Ford Lewis, a native of Quincy Point and St. Joseph's School. "They are student-athletes and academics come first here. I don't know how they do it. They are very committed."



The Quincy Four agreed. "When you do a sport after school it is hard to learn how to balance everything but that is what is required at AWHS," said Galvin.

"We are told that academics come first, followed by cheerleading," concluded Fareri.

The Archbishop Williams' cheerleading program will soon have another state championship banner hung on the walls of the gymnasium, alongside last year's 2010 banner and in the same locale as the school's 1991 Div. 2 Hockey banner, the 1986 Div. 4 Super Bowl banner and the 2007 and 2008 Girl's Basketball Div. 3 banners, to name just a few.

That wall of honor is set aside for athletic teams at Archies that have reached the top of their respective sports and prevailed.

Back-to-back state crowns speak to all that needs to be said. Cheerleading at AWHS is a sport. That debate is over.

Close to 900 Runners Took Part in Half of Quincy

Stan Mavromates Breaks 2-Hour Barrier In Quincy Half Marathon

By DONNA MAVROMATES

Each of the almost 900 runners that participated in Sunday's Half of Quincy Marathon had their own reasons for running. But Squantum resident Stan Mavromates' reason was personal: He wanted to run a half marathon before reaching the half-century mark.

With his 50th birthday coming up in April, the March 20th Half Marathon fit the bill. But Mavromates didn't want to just finish the 13.1-mile run – he wanted to do so in less than two hours.

And to his satisfaction, he did just that, coming in at one hour and 44 minutes and 28 seconds (1:44.28), placing 37th in his age category of 40-49 and 179th overall.

"It was perfect running weather," said Mavromates. "The cool temperature was conducive to a faster race and I was very surprised that I was able to meet my goal with over 15 minutes to spare."

The fact that the half marathon took place in Quincy was even more motivation for Mavromates. "It was great to run through the city in which I live," he said. "The course showed off all of Quincy's best qualities – the water, the historic sites and the new Quincy High School. It was a great route to run."

STAN MAVROMATES, alongside his daughters Olivia (left) and Michaela (right), is all smiles after finishing Sunday's Half of Quincy Half Marathon in a time of 1:44.28, which was good enough for 37th place in the 40-49 age group and 179th overall.

Sunday's great weather was in stark contrast to the weather that the runners trained in. Mavromates rose at 4:30 a.m. each weekday to train. "Some mornings I was half asleep when I was running and the cold, snow and ice just added to the challenge. I figured that if I could run in that, I could run in anything."

When asked if he would do it again, Mavromates joked, "sure, but next year I'll be considered part of the 'senior' 50-59-year old division!"

The Half of Quincy was organized by Squantum native JJ Larner. Sunday's top male finisher was Liam Revell of Boston with a time of 1:13.01 and the top female runner was Anna Stous of Duxbury with a time of 1:25.31.

George 'Trigger' Burke Tip-Off Classic April 2-3

The Boston Amateur Basketball Club (BABC) will host the First Annual George "Trigger" Burke Tip-Off Basketball Classic on April 2-3 at Quincy High School.

AAU basketball clubs from all over New England will participate in the 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th grade divisions; this will be high quality basketball with the best amateur players on display.

Burke, a Quincy High School and University of Massachusetts-Amherst Basketball Hall of Famer, who also holds the distinction of being the only Quincy native to play for the Boston Celtics, is a former Quincy City Councillor and former Norfolk County District Attorney. He is a well-known philanthropist for countless causes in Quincy over the years.

The BABC will recognize Burke's efforts with a testimonial on the evening of April 2, following the games, at Alba Restaurant (downtown Quincy Center).

For further information on entering the Classic and/or attending the event at Alba, contact Britney Papile at babc@me.com or visit www.babc.com.

Red Stockings To Hold Fundraiser March 26

The Quincy Red Stockings Under-11 AAU Baseball team is presenting "The Comedy All Star FUN-Raiser" on Saturday, March 26 at the Braintree Moose Lodge, located at 175 West Howard St., Braintree.

The evening's events begin at 7 p.m. and admission is $15.

Tommy Dunham, Bobby Niles, Bob Sheehy and Jerry Caruso, four of Boston's funniest comedians, will be the night's entertainment.

For ticket reservations, call 857-244-9767 or email coachbuttomer@yahoo.com.

Quincy Hurlers Impressing At The Collegiate Level

Scott Warwick (Fairfield University), Glen Misho (University of Massachusetts) and Kevin Keith (Colby Sawyer College) all had dominating pitching performances over the past week. Warwick and Misho, both juniors, have quickly become the aces of their respective pitching staffs as they lead their teams in wins, while Keith, a freshman, is fast becoming one of Colby Sawyer's leading starting pitchers.

On Sunday Warwick improved his record to 2-1 as he limited St. Joseph University to three hits and two runs over six innings while striking out 10. Earlier last week Warwick pitched five innings of no hit ball against St. John University, a preseason top 25 team, but did not get the decision.

Last Friday Misho also improved his record to 2-1 as he scattered six hits over seven innings in the Minutemen's victory over Bucknell. Earlier in the season Misho earned his first victory of the spring campaign by pitching a complete game against Toledo. He limited Toledo to one earned run and struck out eight. Misho's earned run average for the season is 3.86 and he has 15 strikeouts in 21 innings; opposing batters are hitting only .259 against him.

Keith, a recent graduate of Quincy High School, pitched a complete game in Colby Sawyer's victory over Wentworth Institute on Sunday. He struck out five and allowed one run. Keith's record for the season is 1-1 and his earned run average is 2.93. He is averaging over a strikeout per inning pitched (16 strikeouts/15 innings pitched).

Kevin Magoon, a sophomore at Sacred Heart University, is another Quincy resident who is also pitching at the collegiate level.

Position Players

As has been the case in the past several years, there are also many Quincy residents playing positions other than pitcher.

Michael LeBel, who was voted as the infielder with the strongest throwing arm in the Atlantic 10 Conference, plays shortstop for the University of Rhode Island. Tom Conley, Misho's battery-mate is a catcher for the University of Massachusetts. Ricky Salvucci alternates between 2B and designated hitter for Northeastern University and Conor Cavanaugh plays outfield for Lasell College. LeBel, Conley, Salvucci and Cavanaugh are all juniors.

Matt Rodriguez, a sophomore, plays catcher and third base for Curry College while Colin McCarthy, a freshman and a recent graduate of Quincy High School, plays outfield for UMass-Boston.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We like this saying by John Newton, "We can easily manage, if we will only take, each day, the burden appointed for it. But the load will be too heavy for us if we carry yesterday's burden over again today, and then add the burden of morrow to the weight before we are required to bear it."

Yes, it is important for us to give our full attention to what is at hand today. If not, we may think about the past or the future so much that we fail to draw the most from life today. When we are interested in what is happening now, we are vitally alive in the now.

Let us welcome each day with complete interest. Let us concentrate on the present moment. Let us begin our day by affirming: "I am vitally alive and interested in what is happening now."

"This is the day which the Lord has made: let us rejoice and be glad in it." – Psalms 118:24.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) With change dominant this week, don't be surprised to find new facts emerging that could put another slant on a situation and offer you another choice. Think it through before you decide.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) There could be some lingering problems from a previous matter that involved a decision you felt you had to make. Resolve the situation with your strong Taurean no-nonsense approach.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The Gemini's carefully made plans could be undone by someone's unexpected decision. Getting the full story behind that surprise move can help you decide how to deal with the matter

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Recently uncovered information might put a new light on a situation you thought had been resolved. Keep an open mind about possible changes that you might have to consider.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) With a potential revision of an old agreement, you can't beat the Big Cat for knowing how to sharpen a "clause" to the best advantage. Someone close could have the news you've been waiting for.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Certain issues in the workplace could put you in the middle of a dispute you'd rather not deal with. Express your honest feelings before the pressure to take sides builds up.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might feel uneasy disagreeing with someone you've been close to. But your relationship should be able to withstand and even thrive when confronted with your true feelings.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A romantic situation seems to be creating more confusion than you can handle. If so, own up to your feelings. The sooner you do, the better your chances are for working things out.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) With change directing the Archer's aim, consider a second look at your plans and see where they might benefit from a revision. A workplace matter is close to a resolution.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) New contacts help you learn some important information about upcoming developments. The week calls for the Sea Goat to be more flexible than usual in a number of matters.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) With both change and uncertainty in your aspect, you might feel less confident in a previous decision. That's OK. Check it out and see where it could be modified, if necessary.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Old relationships that seemed to be sinking are buoyant again, and new relationships are benefiting from Cupid's loving care. This could be a good time to make a major move.

BORN THIS WEEK: While you prefer to tread your own path, you'll go out of your way to help someone in need.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On March 28, 1774, upset by acts of destruction of British property by American colonists, the British Parliament enacts the Coercive Acts. The acts included closing the port of Boston and making British officials immune to criminal prosecution in Massachusetts.

• On March 30, 1820, Anna Sewell, author of "Black Beauty," is born. "Black Beauty," the first significant children's story in the English language to focus on animal characters, established the precedent for countless other works. The story, narrated by the horse, showed Black Beauty's progression through a series of increasingly cruel owners.

• On April 2, 1863, responding to acute food shortages, hundreds of starving women riot in the Confederate capital of Richmond, Va., demanding that the government release emergency supplies. At one point, Confederate President Jefferson Davis threw his pocket change at the mob from the top of a wagon.

• On April 3, 1882, Jesse James, one of America's most notorious outlaws, is shot to death by fellow gang member Robert Ford, who betrayed James for bounty money. James was shot in the back while his mother cooked breakfast.

• On March 31, 1931, Knute Rockne, the legendary Notre Dame football coach, is killed in a plane crash in Kansas. Studebaker decided to name its new line of low-priced vehicles Rockne after the revered coach, agreeing to pay his widow 25 cents for each car sold.

• On March 29, 1951, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg are convicted of espionage for their role in passing atomic secrets to the Soviets during and after World War II. Supporters claimed that during World War II, Russia had been an ally, not an enemy. The husband and wife were executed in 1953.

• On April 1, 1963, the ABC television network airs the premiere episode of "General Hospital," the daytime drama that would become the network's most enduring soap opera and the longest-running serial program produced in Hollywood.

Federal Census Pegs Quincy's Population At 92,271

protested the federal census count had it not reached the 90,000-mark. That's because federal grants for public safety and municipal planning are tied into the federal census.

"The federal reimbursements are factored by increments of 10,000. And I know our population isn't 100,000 so our reimbursement percentage will be the same for 92,271 as it would be for 95,000," Shea said.

The new federal census figure shows Quincy's population has increased by about eight percent or by 7,286 residents over the last 20 years. The 1990 federal census counted 84,985 Quincy residents.

The city clerk had not gone through the numbers in detail before The Sun went to press.

However, Shea said he thinks the gains in the city's population probably stem from the areas of West Quincy and Marina Bay. He noted Archstone Apartments on Ricciuti Drive near Quarry Hills and HighPoint on Quarry Street as well as some other development projects in Marina Bay have been built over the last 10 years and therefore were not counted in the 2000 Federal Census.

Quincy was among the municipalities in Norfolk County showing population gains.

Two of the city's bordering communities – Braintree and Milton – were up 5.66 percent and 3.61 percent respectively.

However, Weymouth – another neighboring community – is down about a half of a percent.

State-wide, Quincy moved up a spot to eighth place in the ranking for the most populous cities in the Bay State.

The "City of Presidents" is now ranked 8th behind Brockton, the City of Champions which is ranked seventh in the state with 93,073 residents. Quincy – which 10 years ago was ranked 9th – leapfrogged Lynn which is now in the 9th spot with 90,329.

Ward 5 Meeting On Flood Relief, Water Meters Monday

Ward 5 City Councilor Douglas Gutro will host a community meeting on Monday, March 28 at 6:30 p.m. at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School to discuss the upcoming water meter replacement project in Ward 5 and flood-relief projects that are part of Mayor Tom Koch's Capital Improvement Plan.

Project leaders will be on hand to provide details of the water-meter replacements, which is ongoing citywide and expected to begin in Ward 5 in the coming weeks.

Officials will also discuss several component's of Mayor Koch's Capital Plan that related to flood-relief projects in the Ward. Among those projects: Sachem Brook and Sachem Street Tide Control System, and the replacement of the Black's Creek Tide Gate.

Keating Opens Constituent Office At Pres. Place

Cong. William Keating has opened a constituent office at Presidents Place, Quincy Center and has invited local residents to stop by, according to James Quigley, Deputy District Director for Keating.

Quigley announced the opening of the office at Monday's City Council meeting.

"We look forward to working with Quincy residents," he said.

Quigley said the office is in Suite 802N at 1250 Hancock St. and he and District Representative Paul Wilder will be available. Keating has also opened an office in Hyannis.

In addition, Quigley said residents may call him at 617-770-3700, fax at 617-770-2984 or e-mail at Jim.Quigley@mail.house.gov.

Keating, elected to represent the 10th Congressional District last November, served as Norfolk Country District Attorney from 1999 to 2010 and served in the State Senate for 14 years.

A SIGN OF SPRING - AND HOPE: Katherine Jasmine, an American Cancer Society volunteer, greets Jesse Cenzullo as he stops by the Keohane Funeral and Cremation Service to pick up his daffodils. One of the American Cancer Society's oldest and most beloved fundraising programs since 1973, Daffodil Days has helped save lives from cancer by raising money and awareness to help defeat the disease. Locally, the Daffodils Days campaign – coordinated by John Keohane of the Keohane Funeral and Cremation Service – raised more than $2,000. "We owe a special thanks to the teachers and families of Quincy Catholic Academy. They responded generously when we asked for donations. We were completely overwhelmed with their kindness. Thank you too, to our neighbors and colleagues in business in the area who also gave generously," Keohane said. Other photo Page 15. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

MSBA Approves Design, Budget

State To Reimburse City 80% Of Cost For New Central

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday that 80 percent of the cost to build a new Central Middle School will be reimbursed by the state, the highest reimbursement rate allowed by law and one that the mayor said will save the City millions of dollars as it moves forward with the long-needed project.

The Massachusetts School Building Authority met on Wednesday to approve the City's design and budget of the model school, and recently informed Mayor Koch of the reimbursement rate after months of back-and-forth numbers crunching between the City and SBA. The rate reflects the City's wealth and population factors, as well the City's decision to build the school in accordance with the state's Model School Program and its Green Building guidelines.

"We have said from Day One that we were going to build the first-class facility that our children deserve, but do it in a way that respects and protects the taxpayers of this City. The reimbursement rate awarded to the City is a testament to the hard work of many people to reach that goal," said Koch.

"I wish to thank Superintendent DeCristofaro, City Solicitor Timmins, and the Building Committee for their efforts, and especially MSBA Executive Director Katherine Craven and her staff for working with us in partnership."

Mental Health, Substance Abuse Committee Hearing Here April 7

The Joint Committee on Mental Health and Substance Abuse will hold a special informational hearing Thursday, April 7 at 6:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at the James R. McIntyre Government Center (City Hall), 1305 Hancock St.

"Like elsewhere across Massachusetts, the district I represent is wrestling with how to handle the mental health and substance abuse issues that are driving up local police and court costs, eating away at limited funds available for health care, and driving wedges between so many friends and families," said Sen. John F. Keenan, of Quincy, the committee's co-chairman.

"I am very appreciative of my co-Chair, Rep. Elizabeth Malia, for agreeing to hold this very important hearing in the City of Quincy."

The hearing will feature invited testimony from local officials, police officers, advocacy groups, and service providers. There will also be time for comment from the public. "As we start to debate the budget and consider bills referred to committee informational hearings like the one we will hold in Quincy are good opportunities to educate members of the committee, the Legislature and the public on the range of issues involved in providing mental health and substance abuse services to the residents of the Commonwealth," said Rep. Malia, of Jamaica Plain.

An official list of those providing testimony is being finalized and will be made available prior to the hearing.

Downtown Bill Endorsed By State Committee

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Sen. John Keenan said Tuesday that the city's $1.3 billion Quincy Center redevelopment plan cleared its first hurdle as it was endorsed by a state committee and is now headed to the floor of the House of Representatives for a vote.

Keenan and State Reps. Ron Mariano, Bruce Ayers and Tackey Chan co-sponsored the legislation which must be approved at the state level in order to create the financial framework for the redevelopment project.

Mariano is also the Majority Leader of the state's House of Representatives.

Legislative approval of the funding mechanism of the project is essential and Tuesday's hearing represented the first major step in the lengthy process needed for state and federal approvals.

"The committee members seemed to have done the homework. Generally, they seemed supportive," Keenan said during a break Tuesday in the city's presentation before the Joint Com-

State Department of Transportation crews started demolition work Tuesday on the Neponset River Bridge, which carries traffic over the Neponset River between Boston and Quincy.

Trucks traveling from Neponset Circle to Hancock Street via the Hancock Street Off-Ramp are being detoured to the Billings Ramp and directed to turn left onto Commander Shea Blvd. in order to access Hancock Street in Quincy for approximately two months.

Residents Assail Proposed Zoning Changes For Daycare Providers, Accessory Housing

Working parents will suffer as daycare options evaporate and the city's single-family neighborhoods will be endangered with basement and garage apartments, according to critics of two separate zoning changes now being considered by City Council.

Councillors are currently undertaking the first overhaul of the city's zoning in over 30 years and are weighing strict regulations for daycare providers as well as a new zoning section that would allow 'Accessory Units' in Residence A neighborhoods.

Opposition is growing on both issues, according to City Council President Kevin Coughlin and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, chairman of the Ordinance Committee.

"The public hearing reflected that this is a major

Foreclosure Prevention Counseling Services Expanded

S.S. HOME Consortium, Neighborhood Housing Services, Norfolk Registry Of Deeds Join Forces

NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSING SERVICES of the South Shore will offer three, free foreclosure prevention counseling workshops to residents of the cities and towns participating in the South Shore HOME Consortium, which includes Quincy. Present at a contract signing ceremony Monday were (from left) Cong. William Keating, Braintree Mayor Joe Sullivan, Quincy Mayor Tom Koch, Nofolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell and Milton Selectwoman Marion McEttrick.

South Shore residents in danger of losing their homes to foreclosure will soon have access to expanded foreclosure prevention counseling services through a joint initiative sponsored by the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore and the South Shore HOME Consortium.

Through the initiative – announced Monday at a joint press conference held at Quincy City Hall – Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore will offer three, free foreclosure prevention counseling workshops to residents of the cities and towns participating in the South Shore HOME Consortium, which includes Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton and Holbrook.

Scheduled workshops include:

Quincy: Thursday, April 28, 5 to 9 p.m., Quincy City Hall second floor conference room.

Weymouth: Thursday, May 12, 5 to 9 p.m., Whipple Senior Center, John F. McCulloch building.

Braintree: Wednesday June 8, 5 to 9 p.m., Braintree Town Hall auditorium.

Those who attend the workshops will have an opportunity to meet with Neighborhood Housing Services' counselors, who will review each participant's housing issues and develop a plan to mediate with the lender or loan servicer to best solve the homeowner's foreclosure issues.

To help raise awareness of the free sessions, the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds will provide Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore with the Notice to Foreclose so that NHS may distribute information regarding the foreclosure prevention workshops to those individuals.

"This is a stressful and difficult time for the homeowner, and many times they are afraid to ask for help or do not know where to turn for assistance," said Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell. "In collaborating with Neighborhood Housing Services and the South Shore HOME Consortium, we hope that we can help them reach out to people who would benefit from Neighborhood Housing's foreclosure prevention services."

Rep. Keating expressed his support for the HOME program, a federal block grant that enables local and state governments to partner with non-profits to provide a wide range of affordable housing activities.

"What's great about the HOME program is that it's not one-size-fits-all," Rep. Keating said.

"By providing federal funds to local initiatives, such as the foreclosure workshops being announced today, HOME not only educates and empowers homeowners, it also allows municipal governments and non-profits to tailor programs to address their communities' needs. Foreclosures are a very real reality for many residents on the South Shore and I believe these workshops will help to stave them off. The HOME Program is a great example of how government should work for its people."

The City of Quincy's Department of Planning and Community Development is the lead agency of the South Shore HOME Consortium.

"Over 500 households were assisted through the South Shore HOME Consortium in the past five years alone," said Dennis E. Harrington, planning director for the City of Quincy. "We are very proud of our accomplishments with respect to affordable housing activities, and we look forward to being a partner in this vital foreclosure prevention program as well."

Over the past five years, South Shore HOME Consortium funds in the amount of $5,355,892 were provided for housing activities, including:

- 92 units of affordable housing were created;
- 71 households received assistance in purchasing their first home;
- 399 homeowners received rehab assistance

Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch – who was joined by Braintree Mayor Joseph C. Sullivan, Weymouth Mayor Sue Kay and representatives from the towns of Holbrook and Milton – praised the cooperative approach to the regional foreclosure crisis.

"Wherever possible, the City of Quincy has attempted to work collaboratively with other cities and towns to develop regional solutions to regional problems," Koch said. "By partnering with non-profits like Neighborhood Housing Services and with the assistance of the Registry of Deeds and its ability to provide Neighborhood Housing Services

CUTTING-EDGE DIAMOND FASHION

The round brilliant-cut diamond may be the most popular diamond shape, but it is hardly the only one. Women with a strong desire to wear a diamond that reflects their unique style may be drawn to fancy shapes such as the Asscher Cut. This modified version of the Emerald Cut is more brilliant, has a smaller table (top facet), a deeper pavilion (bottom portion of the diamond beneath the girdle), and bigger step facets. The shape of a 57-facet Asscher Cut diamond also tends more toward the square than rectangular. This bold cut, which is best utilized on high-quality diamonds, was featured on "Sex and the City" and was the engagement ring of choice for both Reese Witherspoon and Kate Beckinsale.

What diamond shape a woman prefers can say a lot about her personality - is she traditional and conservative, or flirty and adventurous? Come find dazzling diamonds of all shapes and sizes at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. Our jewelry professionals will help you select the exact piece for any occasion. We offer an assortment of jewelry, including rings, pins, bracelets, earrings and necklaces. Also available is an excellent selection of numerous styles of unique and special gift items that will not be readily found elsewhere. Call us at 617-773-3636. Mark Cavanagh New Municipal Finance Director

Former Deputy State Treasurer Named CFO

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday the appointment of Mark J. Cavanagh, a former Deputy State Treasurer and Executive Director of the Massachusetts State Lottery, as the City's new Municipal Finance Director.

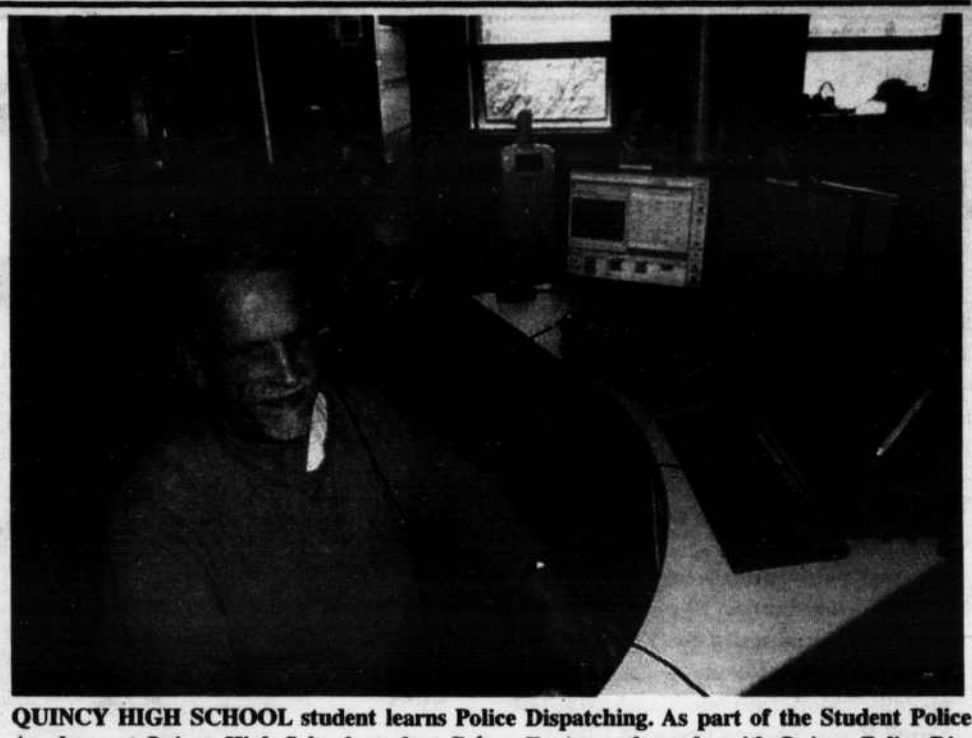
MARK CAVANAGH

Cavanagh, an accountant with an MBA from Babson College, worked as a Deputy Treasurer from 1986 to 1991 and again from 2003 to 2007 where he was responsible for reforms in the state's unclaimed property division that became a national model. Former State Treasurer Timothy Cahill named him Executive Director of the Massachusetts Lottery in 2007, a position he held until January when the Treasury administration changed.

"We are thrilled to have found a candidate with Mark's experience, financial knowledge and passion for his work," said Mayor Koch. "In a lot of ways, this is a coup for us to attract someone with this kind of resume and statewide reputation. Every position he has held has shown real reform, growth, and creativity that make him a perfect fit for the financial challenges we face as a community."

Cavanagh was picked chief financial officer after a search process following the departure of Nicholas Puleo from the $100,000-a-year position. Mayor Koch appointed a three-person search panel of Human Resources Director Stephen McGrath, Chief of Staff James Fatseas and retired City Auditor Robert Foy to review candidates and make recommendations.

The committee reviewed a total of 66 resumes and interviewed 9 candidates before forwarding three names to Mayor Koch. The Mayor interviewed the three candidates personally directly before choosing Cavanagh.



"I am excited about this opportunity and challenge, and I am greatly looking forward to working with Mayor Koch and his management team, which has done a remarkable job considering the economic situation facing every city and town," said Cavanagh, who said he has been reviewing City finances for the last month.

As a Deputy Treasurer, first in the 1980s and later under Treasurer Cahill, Cavanagh led the Abandoned Property Division to record successes, including a profile on the national news magazine 20/20. In the last four fiscal years he served in the post, the division collected $883 million and paid out cash claims for property of $158 million, an 18 percent increase over four years.

Under Cavanagh's leadership, the State Lottery was the most successful lottery in the country, topping more than $17 billion in sales and $3.5 billion in profits directed to the state and local coffers during his tenure. He supervised a staff of more than 400 people, five regional offices, and a network of thousands of retail agents across the Commonwealth.

Between his public service stints, Cavanagh was a Vice President for Affiliated Computer Services, Inc., a principal for the accounting firm of Andreoli, Johanson, and Wood, and a manager for State Street Bank and Trust's unclaimed property trust.

He has a bachelor's degree in accounting from Bentley College and a Master's Degree in business administration from Babson College.

Quick Police Work Nabs Keating Stolen Car Thieves

By JOE REARDON

Cong. William Keating praised the Quincy Police for swift action after his 2001 Lexus was stolen from his driveway early Tuesday morning.

Police said brothers Christopher Babij, 30, and Kenneth Babij, 25, both of 30 Copeland St., Quincy, were arrested in the McDonald's parking lot on 275 Hancock Street shortly after

Kiwanis Junior Heroes: Making A Difference Everywhere

She has a big, beautiful smile and even a bigger, kinder heart.

She's seven-year-old Ciara O'Connor. The blonde-hair youngster is a second-grader at the Squantum Elementary School. She enjoys reading, playing basketball and follows the Bruins and New England Patriots.

CIARA

Ciara's also part of a very select group of kids from Quincy. She is one of this year's 22 recipients of the Kiwanis Club of Quincy Junior Heroes Award who were recently honored at a breakfast held at The Tirrell Room, Quincy Lodge of Elks.

The award – most fittingly – is named in memory of the late Patrick Toland White, who was also a hero in his own right.

Patrick – who was afflicted with rhabdomyosarcoma – touched many lives, especially other children with cancer. He passed away at the much too-young-age of 15 in 2005.

PATRICK

Every spring, the Quincy Kiwanis Club remembers Patrick's courageous life and brief-but-shining legacy of helping others by awarding its Junior Heroes awards. The recipients – like Patrick – have made the city and other corners of the world a better place.

Ciara is one of those youngsters. Her heroic tale is woven in a wonderful gesture of love to a girl named Esther Earl. Esther, only 15 years old, had terminal cancer.

"My mom and I cooked meals for her family each week. We also visited Esther and I was even involved with a fundraiser in honor of her. This was my gift for Esther and her family," Ciara wrote in a letter.

"The reason I gave this gift is because Esther has cancer and I want to support her family. They appreciated the care and effort because they had no family nearby to help or to visit. It was thoughtful because I knew Esther was going to die. I wanted to make her last months happy. I also wanted her to know people loved her and she was a 'star.'"

Her family is proud of Ciara's compassion, empathy and her extraordinary kindness.

"She's the type of kid who wants to make a difference and wants to make the world a better place. She has a big heart," her mom, Diane says.

"We are very proud of Ciara. She's a good kid. She's very kind and is always trying to help other kids."

Diane and her husband, Finbarr, also have a son: 11-year-old Liam who is a student at the Atlantic Middle School.

Diane is a teacher's aide at the Lincoln-Hancock School. Finbarr is a self-employed roofer.

The Durkins also thanked the Kiwanis Club for their recognition.

"It's a nice award. It really confirms when you do nice things, nice things happen to you."

Ciara will always remember what Esther told her before she passed away.

"Esther told me 'don't forget to be awesome.'"

Ciara certainly is.

And so are all the other Kiwanis Junior Heroes. They are boys and girls, kids and young adults, acting locally and globally to make a difference here and everywhere.

Here are this year's other Junior Heroes with a description of their "profile in courage" courtesy of the breakfast program booklet.

These eight students serve as volunteers at the school library after school. The welcome guests, take attendance, check in and out books, organize the cookie table and craft table, assist younger students to find books, and read stories to the younger children. In light of budget cuts, the new after-school program has been a wonderful success. An average of 25-30 parents and children attend each week.

The program encourages Snug Harbor's mission of having the school seen as a safe, supportive, welcoming place within the community. The program would not be possible – nor as possible – without the student volunteers who have championed the idea of community service and have been willing to give so generously of their time and energy, school staff point out.

• Archbishop Williams High School seniors Mariah Anastasi, Kelsey McCarthy and Kristen Spain. The three Quincy residents participated in the Service Trip to Appalachia. For one week, they volunteered in Man, West Virginia, where they braved 100-degree heat and assisted in much needed home repairs. During their time there, they assisted in a variety of capacities, including mending roofs, repairing floors and foundations, creating secondary exits and building porches. The students also raised all the money they needed to pay for the trip.

• Merrymount Elementary School fifth grader Caroline Bloomer. Last year, as a fourth grader, Caroline initiated "Raffles for Haiti" and raised more than $2,000 for the Saint Boniface Haiti Fund to aid victims of the country's devastation caused by an earthquake. Caroline also attends Broad Meadows Operations Day Work meeting every Friday. The ODW group raises funds through raffles, dances and talents shows for the country of Nepal this year.

• Sterling Middle School eighth grader Bailey Brann. Bailey is vice president of the Student Council, and is always looking for ways to help. Bailey was an important part of this year's Veterans' Assembly. He spent hours after school cleaning and decorating the room that the school used for a reception for veterans and guests. He also decorated the hallways, and was a speaker at the Veterans' Assembly.

• North Quincy High School senior Connor Flynn. During his freshman year, Connor underwent dialysis three days a week for the entire school years until undergoing a successful kidney transplant in 2008. He successfully ran for class president his sophomore year and was elected treasurer of his senior class. He plays varsity hockey and varsity golf and was awarded the sportsmanship award. Connor is also a member of SADD and was instrumental in organizing an on-going awareness campaign promoting and recognizing acts of kindness in school. In addition, he volunteered his time to speak before the QPS School Committee regarding a highly successful fundraiser at NQHS in November to benefit Children's Hospital. A $1,300 donation was presented to the hospital to be used to purchase toys and games for the recreation rooms located on every floor. He now works at Children's Hospital as a peer advisor.

CONNOR

• F.W. Parker Elementary School fifth grader Jane Guay. A kind and caring child, Jane gives two classroom pets attention and shows concern for them. This past summer, the animal lover took it upon herself to make and sell bracelets to raise money for the Quincy Animal Shelter. She raised $27. Concerned with the environment, Jane and her classmates try to take an active part to care for the world; she is very energetic about recycling.

JANE

• Point Webster Middle School eighth grader Brianna McCombs. Brianna hosted her birthday party in honor of the Quincy Animal Sheter. In lieu of gifts, she had donations sent to the shelter. She also plans to donate her hair to "Locks for Love" and is planning to have this year's birthday gifts donated to "Toys for Tots."

BRIANNA

• Quincy High School senior Meghan Peterson. Meghan is a National Honor Socity member for three years and was named the Harvard Book Award winner. As the current Student Council President and former class treasurer, she has taken an active leadership role in raising the standards at QHS – not just academically but socially. As editor-in-chief of the school newspaper – The Pony Express – and member of the Philosophy Club, Meghan spends countless hours of her own time working to make QHS a better place. In preparation of her career path in international relations, Meghan has spent the past two summer vacations overseas (South Korea and Finland) in study abroad programs.

MEGHAN

• Wollaston Elementary School kindergartner Brody Smith. This year, for his sixth birthday, he had one request: he asked all his friends to bring toys for the Toys for Tots program. Brody, aware that the Wollaston School was hosting a toy drive, brought all of his gifts to school and donated them to the school's annual toy drive. For being a responsible student, Brody was named a Kiwanis Terrific Kid during the first month of school.

• North Quincy High School Courtney Timmins. She initiated a great idea along with the advanced photo students and the NQHS S.A.D.D. Chapter to give back to Children's Hospital by organizing a Photo Show/Sale and raffle to benefit Children's Hospital. She's very involved in school activities. A High Honor Roll student, Courtney was vice president of the Student School her freshman and sophomore years, but was unable to run for re-election due to being in Children's Hospital with a severe illness. A hard-working student-athlete, Courtney has been a member of the soccer and basketball teams for three years. Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1944 real photo postcard view of Patten Park, a small city-owned parcel at the intersection of North and South Bayfield Roads in North Quincy. The park was created as a memorial to the men and women of that area who answered the call to serve in the World War. Their names were listed on the enclosed honor roll in front of the flagpole. There were other similar memorials constructed by the Park Department throughout the city. This park was dedicated in the name of Lieutenant Irving B. Patten who lost his life in the war with Germany in 1943. He grew up on South Bayfield Road. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Classification Plan Up To Council

This Week 1984 27 Years Ago

By FRANK McCAULEY

The fate of Mayor Francis X. McCauley's classification plan is now in the hands of the city council.

Business leaders who appeared at the council's public hearing looked on it as a plan of moderation.

And there was no actual protest from homeowners.

McCauley urged the City Council to act swiftly on his plan, which would give residential property a $21.95 tax rate and commercial and industrial property a rate of $32.50.

About 60 interested property owners – mostly business – who attended, heard the Mayor explain in considerable detail his proposal which some city officials and property owners are calling a middle of the road approach or moderate approach, towards a fair and equable rate.

There was no opposition expressed by homeowners.

The City Council has the final word as to what the classification would be. (Editor's Note: The City Council unanimously adopted Mayor McCauley's plan.)

CHARTER CHANGE PETITION IN 3rd READING

The city home rule petition to call a special election to fill the Ward One Council seat is still in its third reading in the House of Representatives.

With assistance from Senator Paul Harold, the petition won Senate approval last week and was sent to the House for further action.

Representatives Thomas Brownell and Michael Morrissey both indicated they will follow the bill through various stages of enactment and are hopeful that an election will be held as soon as possible.

Representative Robert Cerasoli, who initially said he would oppose this bill in the House, said that he would not take any action to defeat the bill.

O'CONNELL BROTHERS PLAN VIETNAM VETERANS MEMORIAL

Peter and Williams O'Connell, partners in O.B.C., Inc, and developers of Marina Bay, believe that Quincy veterans who served in the Vietnam War, deserve permanent recognition, which has been given to the fighting men of other wars.

With the help of other community members, the O'Connell brothers will be making this thought a reality. They have organized the dedication of a memorial scheduled to be held Sept. 5 on the historic sight of Marina Bay.

"I think it is a great idea," said Mayor Francis X. McCauley. "The O'Connell's should be commended. They have always taken time out to do something for the city in which they were born and raised and we appreciate that."

School Supt. Lawrence P. Creedon said the memorial is an appropriate and beautiful gesture on the part of the O'Connell brothers."

Advisory Committee members included former Mayor Walter J. Hannon and former POW Capt. Richard Stratton of the United States Navy.

New Ordinance Could Have 'Unintended Consequence'

The present public safety ordinance states that eight incidents to any property over the course of a year can prompt the chief of police to issue an undisclosed number of details to that particular property. If payment is not received by the property owner, that expense can be added to the property owner's tax bill.

I would like to applaud the intentions of Councillor Brian Palmucci for his efforts to make irresponsible property owners accountable and involved in the management of their properties.

The market should dictate property owners to keep clean, quiet, well-managed properties to attract good law-abiding tenants. Reality is somewhere in between.

Councillor (Daniel) Raymondi's public safety ordinance has been in effect for 10-plus years, but the concern of the city council is that it "has no teeth" for enforcement. The adjustment gives much power to law enforcement, but little information, recourse or consideration to property owners.

Property owners have saved, struggled and invested in property in the city. At a public meeting the concerns of the property owners were clear, but not fully addressed.

Property owner concerns:

(1) Police must inform property owners of incidents at their properties within 48 hours so that appropriate actions can be taken. Presently property owners are not informed. If one visits the police station full information cannot be released as to the nature of the incident. No fault to the police department, but great disadvantage to property owners.

(2). The clause that states an incident occurs "whether or not" an arrest or citation is given, puts the property owner at a severe disadvantage. Have the incident tied to the tenant on the apartment, not the property, and allow a copy of the citation to be delivered to property owners to be used in the court system to evict the problem tenant. The proposed change would allow a call to be considered an incident leaving a great chance for abuse.

(3). The appeals process cannot be solely through the issuing party. The police chief cannot be the individual that issues the detail, and the one that handles the appeal. We presently have a strong, wise and fair police chief, but this may not always be the case. Policy must dictate a fair, balanced system, not based on present conditions. A panel of 3 to 5 individuals, reviewed annually, would reduce potential abuse.

(4). Incidents should be assigned to a specific apartment or individual. Eight incidents for a 50-unit apartment building over the course of a year are not unheard of. Larger buildings are penalized due to this oversight.

One of the keystone Principles of the Economist, John Locke, is "the law of" unintended consequence. In an effort to pass ordinance for the good of all will put such a negative spin on the overall system that we make the original problem worse. Property ownership is, as it stands, not for everyone, nor easy.

Making ownership difficult for good property owners decreases the value of the property. Value relates to the capital it takes to make a property an asset and a source of pride to the community, as opposed to a blight on the community. I humbly ask for consideration and action on property owner and fellow citizens' requests.

A Thank You From Anneli Johnson

I would like to thank The Quincy Sun and your reporter Joe Reardon for the great article featuring Quincy Farmers' Market, its planning, managing and advocating for the Massachusetts' farming community, as I am passing on "the gavel" in the new management.

I have received cards and notes regarding your story from friends and associates of the market, among them our new State Representative, Tackey Chan, thank you all!

It has been a real honor and privilege to work with the farmers, loyal consumers, our city officials from the Parks Department to the Highway and to the Mayor's Office, Chamber of Commerce, churches, elder services, USDA, Mass. Department of Agricultural Resources, library volunteers, Quincy Access TV, Quincy Community Action Programs, high school students and local media, such as The Quincy Sun.

The Sun never failed to publish my numerous photos and press releases of the market. The mass media has stepped up to the plate to feature local producers and help educate the consumers of the many benefits of buying local. No individual can do it alone without also the print media help.

And, Quincy Farmers' Market is one place; we will continue to find simply the local producers, either directly from the ocean or from our farms and orchards. It is one fun and continuous venue, which will remain truly a public market in its fullest sense. From the above one can see it is fitting to quote our former First Lady, Hillary Clinton, "it takes a village to raise a child" – also a successful farmers' market in the community.

Again, many thanks to The Quincy Sun featuring my retirement from the leadership role of Quincy Farmers' Market in your March 10 issue.

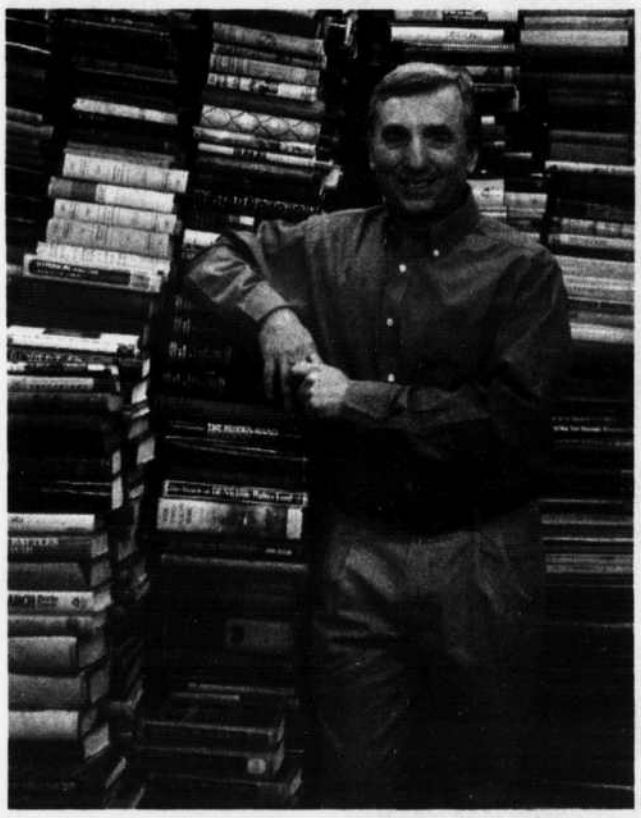
Kenneth Gloss Talk On Old, Rare Books April 19

Kenneth Gloss, proprietor of the nationally known Brattle Book Shop in Boston's Downtown Crossing will give a free and open talk entitled, "Is There Value in Your Old and Rare Books?" Tuesday, April 19 at 7 p.m. at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church.



The talk is sponsored by the chuch MOTHERS Club. The church is located at 301 Manet Ave., Quincy.

"New England homes are treasure-troves for old and rare books that have increased in value over the years," Gloss said. "We invite the public to bring any volumes they want to know about to the lecture for a free verbal appraisal."

The Brattle Book Shop is one of America's oldest and largest antiquarian bookstores.

Kenneth Gloss succeeded his late father, George Gloss – a well-known figure both in Boston and in national antiquarian circles. He had worked in the store since childhood and chose to go into the book business rather than pursue a doctorate in chemistry. He became the sole proprietor upon his father's death several years ago.

"I found that books were in my blood and that I would never be really happy if I abandoned the business," he said.

KENNETH GLOSS, proprietor of the nationally known Brattle Book Shop in Boston's Downtown Crossing, will give a free and open talk entitled, "Is There Value in Your Old and Rare Books?" Tuesday, April 19 at 7 p.m. at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

The Brattle Book Shop is a contributor to the WGBH Annual Auction each and every year that the station has held its fund drive. He is seen on PBS' Antiques Roadshow from time to time and has been a popular guest on WBZ Radio as well as other radio, TV and cable stations in New England and nationally numerous times.

Gloss will bring to the lecture several examples of interesting books, magazines and ephemera from the store's private collection, such as a 1912 World Series scorecard and examples of old LIFE Magazines. (He owns the complete set!) He also has a sales brochure for the Titanic. Following the lecture and question-and-answer session he shall give free verbal appraisals of those books that people bring with them or will do so at anytime at his 9 West Street emporium in Boston. The Brattle Book Shop has been the recipient of numerous "Best" awards for book shop and antiquarian bookshop categories.

For further info call the shop at 1-800-447-9595.

ENC Theatre Department To Present 'Dr. Faustus' April 14-16

The Eastern Nazarene College Theatre Department will present Christopher Marlowe's classic play, The Tragical History of Dr. Faustus, Thursday, April 14 through Saturday, April 16 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cove Fine Arts Center, located on ENC's Wollaston campus.

Popularly known as Dr. Faustus, the 16th-century play recounts the German legend of a scholar who sells his soul to the devil in order to gain more knowledge and power. It's a theme that has since appeared in countless books, plays and films.

"Many people are familiar with the (Dr. Faustus) story but are unable to place its genesis," Director Tara Brooke Watkins said. "Marlowe was the first of many, however, to put the story on stage and since then, several playwrights and composers have written their own version of the tale."

ENC's version will put a new spin on the centuries-old tale, Watkins said, by casting two actors in the lead role.

"One of the main points that authors of the Faustus story emphasize is that every human being has a dual nature: the one that wants to do good and the one that is lured by temptation," she said. "Our production thus has two women playing the title role to show the human duality."

The play's actors will also wear masks throughout the play, Watkins added, to illustrate that "we are all hiding under a mask to combat the human nature inside of us." Dance and dramatic movement, meanwhile, will be used to communicate some of the play's crucial moments.

"In the end, Dr. Faustus is really about how far astray temptation can lead you and warns the audience that even a minor decision in the wrong direction can lead the best of us down a dangerous path."

Tickets for Dr. Faustus are $10 general admission, $7 for non-ENC students, and $5 for ENC students and children 12 and under.

For tickets or more information, call the Cove box office at 617-745-3715.

Folk Concert At United First Church Saturday

A folk music concert will be held Saturday, April 2 at 8 p.m. at the United First Parish Church ("Church of the Presidents"), 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The concert will feature the music of folk-pop singers and songwriters David Buskin & Robin Batteau and John Flynn.

Buskin & Batteau will perform a combination of melodic, sensual pop and folkie grit.

Flynn's songs of humanity and hope are deeply rooted in the traditions of Woody Guthrie and Phil Ochs.

Doors open at 7:30 pm. Home made desserts and refreshments are available. Admission is $22.

For reserved tickets call Eileen at 617-821-4073. Net proceeds support the operating costs of the coffee house and the rest goes into the church's general fund.

'Route 128 - The Road We Love To Hate' April 7

Historian David Kruh will tell the story of Route 128 from its beginning in the 1920s as an ad hoc collection of two-lane roads through the construction – and reconstruction – of the modern expressway Thursday, April 7 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Kruh's slide presentation is a chronicle of the road that has become so vital to the region, but has never quite seemed to be adequate to the tak, with images from the state Department of Public Works archives as well as many of the two dozen towns and cities through which the highway passes, including Quincy.

Since 1985, Kruh has been presenting slide shows on various subjects of local interest to historical societies, libraries, civic groups, and other organizations. He is the author of Always Something Doing: Boston's Infamous Scollay Square as well as Building Route 128, published by Arcadia Press in 2003.

The presentation is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

'Harold And Maude' Film Tonight At Crane Library

A free screening of the classic 1971 film "Harold and Maude" will be shown tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The film will conclude the month-long celebration of Quincy native Ruth Gordon.

In the film, Harold is a young man bored with wealth but interested in death. Maude (Gordon) is a wonderful old rascal who can see nothing but good intentions in the world.

Gordon was nominated for a Golden Globe Award for Best Actress.

The screening is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

ENC Professor Publishes New Book On The Language Of Science And Faith

Is evolution compatible with religion? How can God allow evil? And is life on Earth possible only because it is "fine-tuned" by the laws of physics?

These were a few of the questions posed at Eastern Nazarene College recently at a special reception and book signing held on campus to mark the publication of ENC Prof. Karl Giberson's latest book, The Language of Science and Faith: Straight Answers to Genuine Questions.

ENC Professor Karl Giberson reads an excerpt from his latest book, The Language of Science and Faith: Straight Answers to Genuine Questions.

Held in the Mann Student Center Auditorium, the reception featured Giberson reading excerpts from the book, which was co-written by Francis Collins, head of the National Institutes of Health and director of the Human Genome Project. It was published by Intervarsity Press.

The book addresses issues surrounding evolution, creation, the Bible and science.

"We tried to take the kinds of questions people are most likely to have... and answer them," Giberson said, prompting a few chuckles from the audience. "I'm not trying to convince atheists to accept God; I'm seeking to assist evangelicals in wrestling with questions."

To that end, the event also featured a question and answer session, with attendees discussing science, religion and the debate the two topics often engender. During the discussion, Giberson noted that he had been teaching an ENC engineering class many years ago and grew tired of it. He decided to teach the general education course Epoch Making Events in Science and started participating in discussions about science and religion.

"I wanted to show students that they could appreciate science as God's gift," said Giberson, noting that many of his ENC students remind him of himself.

"They are people," he said, "who have a curiosity for science as well as a faith that is precious to them."

A graduate of Quincy High School, she is the daughter of Phyllis and Bob Kozlowski of Quincy.

Quincy Lions Receive Four Awards

The Quincy Lions Club recently received four achievement awards at a recent district advisory meeting held in Bellingham.

District Governor Joyce Hogan (a Quincy Lion) and her husband, Tom, were presented with "PRIDE Award" charms in recognition of going above and beyond the call of duty in Lionism. "PRIDE" stands for "Performance, Recognition, Involvement, District and Club Excellence."

The PRIDE program is designed to lead long-time members on a path that will continue and strengthen their commitment to both the District and their individual clubs. The program cannot be completed without being actively involved in club functions as well as helping at the District level.

Michelle Lydon, immediate past president of the Quincy Lions Club, was awarded the "Club Excellence Award" for the 2009-2010 Lionistic year. Clubs that excel in community service, membership growth, communication, and organizational management may qualify for the prestigious Excellence Award.

The two-part award consists of a distinguished banner patch, and a Club Excellence pin for Lydon to wear in recognition of her outstanding leadership last year.

Sean Glennon, secretary of the Quincy Lions Club, was presented with a Blue Badge Award in recognition of completing the requirements of the Blue Badge Program, which is designed to give new Lions an overview of the many aspects of Lionism.

All total, the Quincy Lions Club has received 17 awards over the past seven months.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Ann Marie's Sausage-Egg Casserole

When my daughter Ann Marie serves a brunch, it is very difficult to pick a favorite because there are so many entrees to choose. So you end up with a pretty full plate.

But my favorite was a sausage egg casserole that she prepared the night before and then baked it the next morning.

It's always nice to have something already to bake rather than to do it on the day of the brunch. Any kind of sausage can be used instead of the pork sausage.

Overnight Sausage-Egg Casserole

1-pound sausage meat or bulk sausage (skinned)
9 eggs
1-½ teaspoons dry mustard
1-teaspoon salt
3 cups milk
12 slices white bread
10 ounces shredded cheddar cheese
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce

Crumble and brown the sausage. In a bowl, mix the eggs, mustard, Worcestershire sauce, salt and milk. Remove the crust from the bread and cube the slices. Lay the bread cubes over the bottom of an 11 x 13 inch baking dish.

Sprinkle the cooked sausage over the bread. Sprinkle the cheese over the sausage. Now pour the egg mixture over all and refrigerate (covered) overnight.

The next day, bake uncovered in a 350-degree oven for 45 minutes.

Let stand 10 minutes before serving.

It cuts easily in delicious squares.

Wollaston Beach Kite Festival Saturday

The Friends of Wollaston Beach (FWB) will co-sponsor a Spring Splash and Kite Festival Saturday, April 2 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Wollaston Beach.

The event is co-sponsored by the DCR and Save The Harbor/Save the Bay.

Kites Over New England will be on-site to fly their giant kites and Sea Side Kites will be on hand to sell kites and support kite flyers.

At noon, some FWB'ers will be plunging and splashing to help raise money for 2011 FWB events.

The event will be held across from the DCR bathhouse at West Elm Ave and is open to the public.

On Tuesday, April 5th at 6:30 p.m., FWB will hold its Annual Meeting and Awards Night at the Adams Inn with a reception to immediately follow the awards.

Guest speaker former Cong. William Delahunt will be recognized by FWB as an Honorary Friend.

FWB will also presenting its Friend of The Year, Spirit, and Member of The Year awards.

The event is free and open to the public.

FWB will also participate in two annual cleanups. The DCRs Park Serve Day is a cleanup of all state owned parks and beaches across The Commonwealth. Cleaner Greener Quincy is the local cleanup across the city.

More information will be announced at a later date.

Boston Radio Topic At Library April 5

Media historian and professor Donna L. Halper will present a history of local radio, including some of Halper's rare artifacts and memorabilia, Tuesday, April 5 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Since radio debuted in 1920 (and greater Boston had one of the first stations), generations have grown up listening to their favorite stations and enjoying their favorite announcers including weather guru E.B. Rideout, morning show legend Jess Cain, talkmasters David Brudnoy and Jerry Williams and top-40 star Arnie Ginsburg.

In her presentation, Halper will focus on not only the Boston stations but on South Shore stations like WJDA and WATD-FM.

She will also discuss why radio has changed, and why it still remains an important mass medium even in our Internet age.

Halper, a Quincy resident, attended Northeastern University in Boston, where she was the first woman announcer in the school's history, broadcasting a nightly show on the campus radio station beginning in October 1968.

She went on to a successful career in broadcasting, including more than 23 years as a radio programming and management consultant in markets of all sizes, all over North America.

Currently an assistant professor of Communication at Lesley University, Halper's new book is Boston Radio, 1920-2010.

Sent To All Norfolk County Cable Access Channels

Program On Opiate Abuse Crisis Launches DA Morrissey's Prevention Series For Parents

Norfolk County Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey has produced the first in a series of a half-hour cable-access programs designed to prevent the tragic consequences associated with substance abuse, bad teenage decision making, and other societal issues by educating parents and the public.

"The primary focus of our office has to be aggressively prosecuting crimes committed in our communities," Morrissey said. "But a small investment in education can lead to preventing many senseless crimes that not only cause a great deal of suffering, but are very costly to the taxpayers."

The first program currently airing focuses on prescription drug abuse, particularly the explosion of opiate addiction associated with abuse of pain medication such as Oxycontin.

"Fatal opiate overdoes is the leading cause of accidental death in the Massachusetts, more than automobile crashes," Morrissey said. "Parents are key to stopping this from consuming their children, but parents need information to be effective."

Morrissey's first half-hour seminar features three speakers with different expertise: Harvard Medical School Professor and Massachusetts General Hospital Dr. John Kelly; North Quincy High School Nurse Kristen Houlihan; and Lyn Frano, from Weymouth Mayor Sue Kay's Opiate Coalition. The program was provided to the local cable-access stations in every Norfolk County community this month.

"Prosecuting drug trafficking after those drugs have ruined lives, or taken lives, is important, but it is not the only answer," District Attorney Morrissey said. "Our communities need to fight opiate addiction before it consumes the next generation, and parents taking advantage of the education and assistance available to them, and experts like these, is an important part of that."

The Norfolk Prevention Coalition series is funded with drug forfeiture money and not taxpayer funds.

THE FIRST OF Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey's Norfolk Prevention Coalition videos has been provided to all Norfolk County cable systems. DA Morrissey, at left, hosted North Quincy High School Nurse Kristen Houlihan, Lyn Frano from Weymouth Mayor Kay's Opiate Coalition, and next to Frano Dr. John Kelly, a substance abuse specialist Massachusetts General Hospital and a Harvard Medical School Professor.

Quincy Republican Committee To Host Clothing Drive For Injured Soldiers April 16

The Quincy Republican City Committee will sponsor a clothing collection drive for wounded soldiers Saturday, April 16 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy.

The group will be collecting new men's and women's t-shirts, underwear, sweat pants, sweat shirts and bath towels for donation to the Wounded Warrior Ministry Center at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center (LRMC) in Germany. America's largest overseas U.S. military hospital, LRMC is the facility to which U.S. soldiers who are wounded in Iraq and Afghanistan are evacuated for treatment.

"Many wounded soldiers arrive at Landstuhl with nothing but the uniform on their backs," said City Committee Chairwoman Dianna Smith. "We hope local residents will show their support for our troops by donating the items the hospital needs most: new t-shirts, underwear, sweatpants, sweatshirts and bath towels."

Smith noted the idea for the collection drive was inspired by Lt. Commander John Dockrey, USN of Quincy, who discussed his service as a nurse at Landstuhl at the committee's February meeting.

"Our committee thought Patriot's Day weekend would be the perfect time to show our gratitude to these wounded warriors," she said.

Because many of the severely wounded soldiers only stay at Landstuhl for a few days before being transferred stateside for further treatment and rehabilitation, Smith said, the hospital neither needs nor has storage space for items typically donated to soldiers stationed at the front, such as snacks, toiletries, reading material, etc.

Also, because the clothing is for wounded soldiers, donated items must be new in order to preserve the hospital's sterile environment.

A complete list of needed items is available online at http://www.quincymass-gop.com/Items-for-U-S--Troops.html.

Donations to the Wounded Warrior Ministry Center may be dropped off from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, April 16 at Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave. in Quincy.

There will be a bake sale at the event to raise funds to offset the cost of shipping the items overseas.

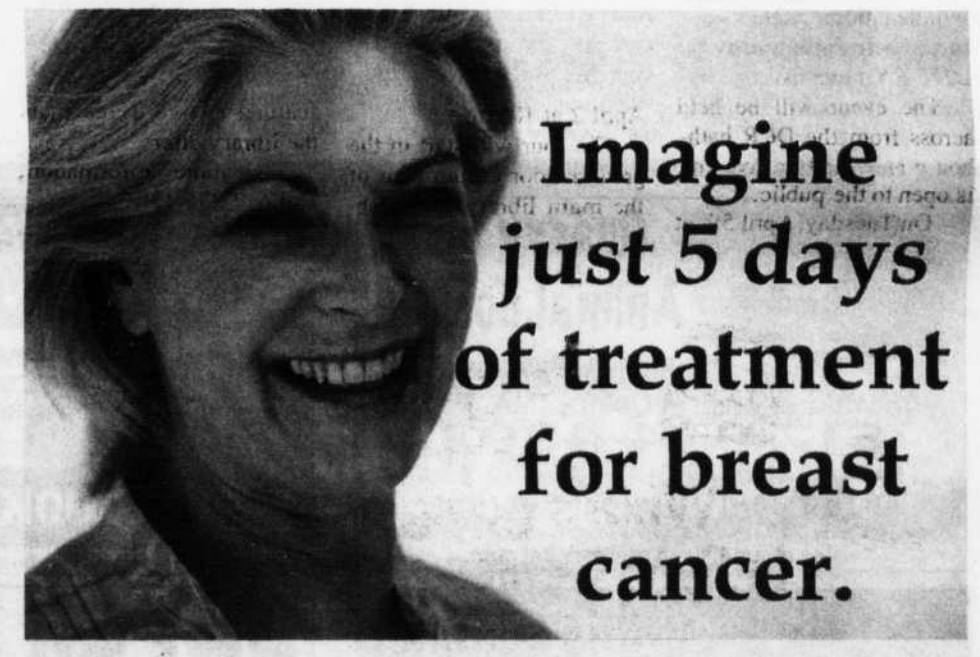
For more information, call 617-328-1384.

Mini-Health Fair, Workshop April 6

The Quincy Chamber of Commerce and the Quincy Health, Beauty & Wellness League will present "Creating a Healthy Workplace" mini-health fair and working Wednesday, April 6 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the South Shore YMCA, second floor gymnasium.

Attendees will have the opportunkty to listen to 10-15 minute "mini-talks" on topics such as "Ergonomics in the Workplace," "Healthy Eating at Work," "Preventing Diabetes" and "What's Your Real Body Age."

There will also be complimentary chair massage, flu shots, glucose testing, blood pressure screenings, scalp message, yoga in the workplace demonstrations and more.



The event is free by registration is required. To register, visit www.thequincychamber.com.

Quincy License Board News

By JOE REARDON

The state Department of Revenue is in the process of seizing all assets of Quincy Discount Liquors at its 275 B Quincy Ave. location.

At the Quincy License Board meeting March 22, City Clerk Joe Shea said he was notified on March 15 of the DOR's decision to seize the Retail All Alcoholic Package Store License issued to the business.

Owner Mary Ann Dowd had her license renewed on Jan. 1, but received an eviction notice by the landlord on March 1. As of March 10, Dowd lost her right to be able to sell liquor at the establishment because of failure to pay back taxes.

Quincy Police Lt. and City Liquor Inspector Peter Turowski told the License Board commissioners he was on the scene two weeks ago and observed individuals inside the store selling liquor to another storeowner. Dowd hadn't yet been served papers informing her that she was no longer licensed to serve alcohol in Quincy.

Shea reported he received a police report on March 16 from Turowski reporting a violation at the store at 10 pm the previous evening. All information was sent to the city's law department.

"I can't imagine under any conditions there's going to be any more activity at 275 B Quincy Avenue by Quincy Discount Liquors based on the seize," said Shea. "Not wishing any ill will on her I will consult with our lawyers to see what her rights are."

In other license board business, the board granted a one-day permit to Best Buddies International for its 12 Annual Charity Bicycle Ride on Saturday, June 4. The 100-mile ride from Boston to Craigville includes a six-mile stretch through Quincy. The route follows Quincy Shore Drive to Sea Street and then Washington Street. CVS, one of the ride's sponsors, will be supplying portable toilets at its Quincy Shore Drive location.

Paul Curley of Best Buddies International told the license board that the 600 bikers would be in Quincy's city limits for less than an hour.

Curley said the section of the ride over the Neponset River Bridge should go smoothly.

"It's been a challenge with the construction, but it keeps everyone contained to one lane," he said. "When you have all the traffic going over at the same speed we are, it's almost safer. The construction is almost good for bicycles. Four lanes of traffic - it gets a little bit tricky. We do have a state police escort for the first 20 miles of the ride."

• Granted a request of St. Mary's Parish, 115 Crescent St. for a One-day liquor license, May 21. Judi Pekkinen, present. Talk of the Town will do the light refreshments.

• Hearing regarding the request of Bill Dunn Sr., for a One-day permit to hold the 5th Annual Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race, June 25. Chairman Shea read a letter of support from Ward Councillor Margaret Laforest. Motion to grant the request made by Commissioner Scheele, second Chief Keenan. All in favor.

• Hearing regarding the request of the Montclair School PTO, 8 Belmont St. for a One-day permit May 21, 10 AM-3 PM for the 77th Annual May Festival. Ms. Theresa Walsh, present. With all paperwork in order Commissioner Scheele motioned to grant the request, second Chief Keenan. All in favor.

• Hearing regarding the request of Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St. for a One-day permit for the 14th Annual Cancer Walk, Sunday, Sept. 25. Ms. Linda M. McCulley, present. With all paperwork in order Commissioner Scheele motioned to grant the request, second Chief Keenan. All in favor.

• Hearing regarding the request of S & H Tobacco, Inc. d/b/a Hancock Tobacco, 1500 Hancock Street for Transfer of Stock, New Officers & Directors. Mr. Jon E. Aieta, Esq., present with the applicant, Mrs. Patel. The changes will only change the % of stock, all will now have 1/3% interest. With no questions from the Board Commissioner Scheele motioned to grant the request, second Chief Keenan. All in favor.

Residents Quiz Milton Officials On Impact Of Proposed Wind Turbine

By LAURA GRFFIN

Milton officials met face to face with a dozen West Quincy residents last week in their first public attempt to ease residents' fears about the 480-foot wind turbine that Milton plans to erect just a few hundred feet from the city line.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci organized the meeting to allay his constituents' concerns about the turbine which will be located 400 feet from the Milton-Quincy line.

The residents quizzed Milton officials on the potential noise, environmental and visual impacts that may affect their neighborhood and the city from the structure planned just 100 feet from the greens of Granite Links Golf Course.

"We've always tried to keep open lines of communication," said Milton's Town Administrator Kevin Mearn who fielded the questions along with Milton's Planning Director William Clark.

"It's going to be very hard to see it," said Mearn, asserting that residents would have to be in a very high building or on a rooftop to see the wind turbine or catch its flicker.

As for the noise, Clark said the turbine whir will be "no louder than the traffic on Route 28." Randolph Avenue, Rte 28, is one of Milton's busiest roadway.

"It's all on Town of Milton-owned property," said Mearn who outlined the environmental and financial benefits that Milton expects to reap in contrast to the paltry sums currently paid to Milton by Quarry Hills Associates (QHA).

"We got stiffed," said Mearn of the financial deal executed for Milton when QHA closed and capped that town's landfill and leased portions of the property for eight holes of the Granite Links Golf Course.

Quincy's landfill deal with QHA currently adds roughly $300,000 to its General Fund while Milton's total income from QHA is generally below $50,000.

At the outset of last week's meeting, Palmucci suggested Milton's planners employed illegal zoning measures to justify the location of the turbine site and cited data indicating that the turbine will clutter the views from the Blue Hills Reservation.

Clark said the town's

Downtown Bill Endorsed By State Committee

mittee on Municipalities and Regional Government.

Mariano called the hearing "the first step of the legislative process. I am confident this important bill will be considered quickly."

Rep. Mariano, the second most powerful legislator in the House of Representatives, described the bill as essential to Quincy's plan. "This legislation is crucial to the redevelopment of Quincy Center."

Mariano explained the need for legislative approval in describing the Quincy Center plan's unique funding structure, "According to the deal reached between the City and the developer of the project, the City will be able to 'buy back' public infrastructure once the development begins producing new tax revenue, ensuring that only new revenue will be used to pay for public improvements."

Keenan said the Joint Committee has several options and explained that the best decision for the city would be a reporting of the project out of committee directly "to House of Representatives and then the (state) Senate."

However, Keenan, also said the bill could be routed to the legislature's Joint Ways and Means Committee or the Small Business Committee.

Mayor Thomas Koch joined Keenan, Mariano, Ayers and Chan in testifying before the committee which will review the testimony before voting their decision.

The bill already appears to have been fast-tracked on Beacon Hill and Keenan thanked the committee Co-Chairmen, Sen. James Welch, West Springfield and Rep. Michael Kane, Holyoke, for the early hearing.

"I very much appreciate the committee chairman for scheduling this bill for a hearing so quickly. Passage of this bill is critical to allow the project to move forward," said Keenan.

Keenan outlined the importance of the legislation, saying, "Not only does this legislation establish a unique framework that will benefit the City of Quincy, but it could prove to be a model for many other communities, looking for a low-risk way to redevelop their economic centers."

"This legislation will support our economic development," said Ayers, adding that it will "help our commercial tax base and create new employment opportunities."

Chan spoke for the city officials and the city's state legislators when he said, "The sooner we can get this to the governor's desk, the sooner we can start construction."

City officials have chosen Street-Works, LLC, a White Plains, NY firm, to oversee the city's redevelopment which is expected to create a million square feet of new office space, 700 new residential units and 570,000 square feet of retail space as well as thousands of new and temporary jobs.

issue," said Coughlin of the 'Accessory Unit' provision which he believes has raised "reasoned and rational concerns. We need to discuss it further."

Coughlin said he is "reluctant to add my support."

As for the proposed requirements for daycare providers, Coughlin said those provisions may drive daycare businesses underground.

"It's a very high bar for some folks to jump over," said Coughlin of the proposed licensing requirements. Coughlin will not participate in council discussion as his family is engaged in daycare services.

Similarly, Gutro said he doesn't understand why these new provisions on daycare or housing units, or the equally controversial boat storage issue surfaced at this time.

Gutro referred to proposed boat storage regulations.

Earlier this month, councillors scrapped proposed regulations limiting boat storage after the issue created a storm among the city's boat owners.

Protecting the city's daycare is certainly as important as ensuring sufficient boat storage, according to Wendy Arsenault, owner of Little Sunflowers Childcare, who e-mailed a scathing critique of the proposed daycare provisions to Gutro.

Arsenault invited city councillors to review the 54 pages of state regulations, stating: "Obtaining and maintaining a license to run an FCC (Family Child Care) in the state of Mass is already a difficult process. I highly recommend reading the regulations if you have not already."

"Much as mentioned in the boating issue, Quincy is a blue collar/working community. Why take away affordable, quality childcare from your residents? Is boat storage more important than quality childcare for our young children?" wrote Arsenault who is a state-licensed daycare provider.

"Many of the council do not seem to understand what family childcare actually is and the positive effect we have on children in Quincy," continued Arsenault who zeroed in on statements by Councillor John Keenan.

"Mr. Keenan made some comments at the meeting leading me to believe he has no idea of the function of family childcare," wrote Arsenault who described the plight of a young couple who just had a new baby.

At the time, Arsenault did not have an open slot for an infant and was unable to identify another provider so the father had to take unpaid leave from his work.

Accessory Units

Some local homeowners are similarly opposed to a provision that would allow accessory units in Residence A districts.

Under the proposal, such units could be created in garages, attics or basements but would be under stringent regulations requiring parking and three-year permits.

Proponents believe the units would increase housing opportunities in the city and allow senior citizens to stay in their sometimes-oversized homes.

However, opponents fear that such accessory units will crush neighborhoods, impact the supply and attraction of the city's single family homes and, also, over-run their streets with more parking problems.

"This proposal would be detrimental to the neighborhoods," said Will Smith of the Hospital Hill Neighborhood Association.

Smith said there are already condominiums, multi-family housing, and in-law apartments in the Hospital Hill or President's Hill neighborhood, "We have plenty of rental space."

"Enforcement would be really, really difficult," said Smith, adding, "The city already has an issue with illegal rooming houses."

Smith said he has been contacted by residents of Wollaston Hill, a similar Residence A neighborhood with large single and multi-family houses.

Such areas attract families for strong vibrant neighborhoods, according to Smith who fears that added parking and vehicles will impact traffic and add more asphalt and run-off.

While some of the newer proposals are creating controversy, the overhaul of the city's zoning is long overdue, according to planners such as Richard Meade.

"There's a real need for re-codification," said Meade, noting the last major review was in 1971 and the city's zoning "needs to be looked at carefully."

North Quincy Branch Librarian Debbie Ormon Retires

Civic Activist, Library Innovator Was On The Job 36 Years

By JOE REARDON

Debbie Ormon has spent so many years at the North Quincy branch of the Thomas Crane Library she admits it's going to be tough staying away.

"I'll be wandering about, lonely, through the stacks," said the affable Ormon with a laugh.

Ormon recently stepped down from her long-time position of branch librarian 36 years after her first day on the job. As the years went by, Ormon grew into the position and it became a second home.

"I was going to be moving onward and upward," she said. "I was day to day on the front lines. I had to keep up with the books and trends."

Born and raised in Cambridge, Ormon graduated from Northeastern in 1971 with a degree in liberal arts. It was at Northeastern where she met her husband Roger Ormon, who was born and raised in Squantum. The two married in August of 1971 and Ormon went on to earn a master's degree in library and information science at Simmons College in 1972. Ironically, Ormon was a classmate of Ann McLaughlin, who retired from her position as the director of the Thomas Crane Library in January.

DEBBIE ORMON, longtime librarian at the Thomas Crane Public Library's North Quincy branch, enjoys her recent retirement reception. She has retired after 36 years on the job.

FRIENDS AND COLLEAGUES were among the well-wishers at a recent retirement reception for North Quincy branch librarian Debbie Ormon (left) who has stepped down after 36 years. Cathy deVeer (middle) worked with Debbie for eight years. She is the children's Librarian at North Quincy. At right is good friend Jeanne Moore, who worked with Debbie for 30 years.

She worked at the Thayer Public Library in Braintree for two years and began working at the Thomas Crane Library in January of 1975 to replace the first and only branch librarian of North Quincy, Louise Dinnegan.

One of the founding members of DOVE, Ormon also started the library's Wednesday afternoon movie group for senior citizens. Her mother, Belle, ran the films, tapes and DVDs for a number of years. Ormon worked on the Massachusetts State Equal Rights Amendment in the mid-1970s and has been a member of the Quincy Historical Society for many years. She was appointed to the Quincy Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women and recently finished a multi-year term as a trustee of the Quincy Historical Society.

Ormon is also a member of the Houghs Neck Garden Club.

The Ormons have lived in Quincy since 1975, and have lived on Rock Island Head in Houghs Neck since 1990.

She plans to spend much of her free time getting her vegetable and herb garden in order.

A small party was recently held for Ormon at the library. "It was very touching and from the heart," she said. "It was a treat. I worked with some really great people."

Broad Meadows, Central, Point Webster Middle School Students Honored By JFK Library

One hundred middle school students from across Massachusetts were honored with the Make a Difference award on Wednesday, March 23rd at the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum in recognition of the volunteer work the students have performed in their communities.

Among the recipients were Pramila Murray and Kate Stevenson, 7th grade students at Broad Meadows Middle School for their work fundraising to place children from Nepal in school and out of the carpet industry; Austin and Emma Kimmell, 7th and 8th graders respectively at Central Middle School for their work with Central Cares, a school-wide food drive for a local food pantry; Brianna McCombs, 8th grade at Point Webster Middle School for her two donations to Locks of Love and her upcoming head shaving to raise funds for St. Baldrick's Conquer Kids' Cancer Foundation; and Paul Trubiano, 8th grade student at Point Webster Middle School for his work helping to build a bridge in Faxon Park in Quincy and for his work with the Boy Scouts.

The Kennedy Presidential Library's Make a Difference award is given to students who are nominated by a teacher or principal for an outstanding contribution they have made to their school, neighborhood, town, or global community.

"Having family so close by is wonderful," says Joe.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, March 17 at approximately 6:03 a.m., Officers Sean Kelley, Harry Breen and James Cassidy were dispatched to the area of 73 Bicknell St. for a Breaking and Entering into a motor vehicle that had just occurred. Responding units were told that two males were observed running from a parked vehicle with a window smashed.

LT. DAN MINTON

The witness stated that the suspects fled in a gray pick up truck with its driver's side tail light out. Upon arrival, Officer Kelley located the vehicle with the driver side window smashed.

The officers searched the area and within five minutes, located a pick up truck matching the description, with taillight out, on Palmer Street. Officers Kelley, Breen and Cassidy approached the vehicle and found two males inside. The driver, suspect #1, asked Officer Breen why he was stopped and he was told about the incident. When asked where they were coming from, suspect #1 said they were at his girlfriend's house on Quarterdeck Road.

Officer Cassidy observed a screwdriver in the pocket of the front passenger door. Officer Kelley noted a power charger for an electrical device on the front passenger floor. At this point, both occupants were asked to step out of the vehicle and a pat frisk was conducted for weapons. Officer Cassidy observed a G.P.S. on the passenger side floor. With this information, Officer Kelley returned to the scene of the crime to make contact with the owner.

After a brief search, the owner was awakened and confirmed that it was his car that was broken into and his Tom Tom brand GPS, valued at $300, was missing. Communications informed Officer Kelley that they had the witness on the phone and he was willing to meet with the Police. Officer Kelly picked up the witness and brought him to the suspect's location.

The witness said that he was waiting for a bus in the front hallway of 73 Bicknell Street when he heard the sound of glass shattering. He said he exited the building and yelled at the suspects "to get out of there." The witness said he did not get a good look at the suspects as they ran from the vehicle, but did note the description of the getaway pick up truck. Officer Kelly brought the witness over to the suspects and after looking at them, he said he was "not sure" if they were the same men, however, he was "100% sure" that this was the pick up he saw leaving the scene.

The victim was brought to the suspect's location, where he said he was "100% sure" that the GPS was his. The victim scrolled through the pre-set settings and pointed out his old address on Faxon Road and his sister's on Taffrail Road to confirm the GPS was his.

Officers Kelley and Breen each handcuffed a suspect and transported them to the station for booking. Two flash lights, two screwdrivers and two pair of work gloves were also found behind the driver's side seat. Upon further inspection, seven electrical chargers of various types and a black Samsung Phone were found in the center console area and the front passenger floor. The chargers and phone were placed into an evidence bag, along with the gloves, screwdrivers and flash lights. Four small white pills were found in the center console, along with a broken orange pill. These were placed into the drug locker in the evidence room for destruction.

The 33 year-old and 41 year-old suspects, both from Quincy, were charged with Breaking and Entering a Motor Vehicle, Malicious Destruction over $250, Larceny over $250 and Possession of Burglarious Tools.

In this case: Citizen involvement was the key to the arrest. A few weeks back, the Crime Prevention Unit and Community Police Officers held a meeting with the residents of 73 Bicknell St., the senior citizen complex, to gather information and make suggestions to reduce the chances of being a victim of a car break.

The Police Department provided extra patrols in the area during peak time of breaks and we urged residents to be observant and report any suspicious behavior. The citizen who reported this crime was outstanding! He was able to note specific information that led to the arrest of two criminals.

"Nice Work" goes out to this citizen.

Marathoners To Host Miles For Miracles Fundraiser To Benefit Children's Hospital

Tracy Wilson and Michael Miller, both of Quincy, will run the Boston Marathon April 18 to benefit Children's Hospital Boston.

As a member of Children's Miles for Miracles Team, runners have an extra incentive to push them a across the finish line: helping children and families who receive world-class care at Children's.

Wilson will be running for 10-year-old Maureen Walsh of Braintree (formerly of Quincy). Maureen and her sister, Lauren, and brother, Gregory have all spent time at Children's for different reasons.

Miles for Miracles team members commit to raise critical funds to benefit Children's Hospital Boston's areas of greatest need: patient care, medical research, recruitment and training, and community health initiatives.

Runners meet this fundraising goal through sponsorships, personal donations, and pledges from their families, friends, community, and colleagues.

The 4th annual Miles for Miracles fundraising event will be held Thursday, April 7 at 6 p.m. at the Commonwealth Restaurant, 79 Parking Way, Quincy.

There will be raffles and silent auctions. To be a sponsor or for tickets, call Wilson at 617-847-6993 or Miller at 617-593-2403.

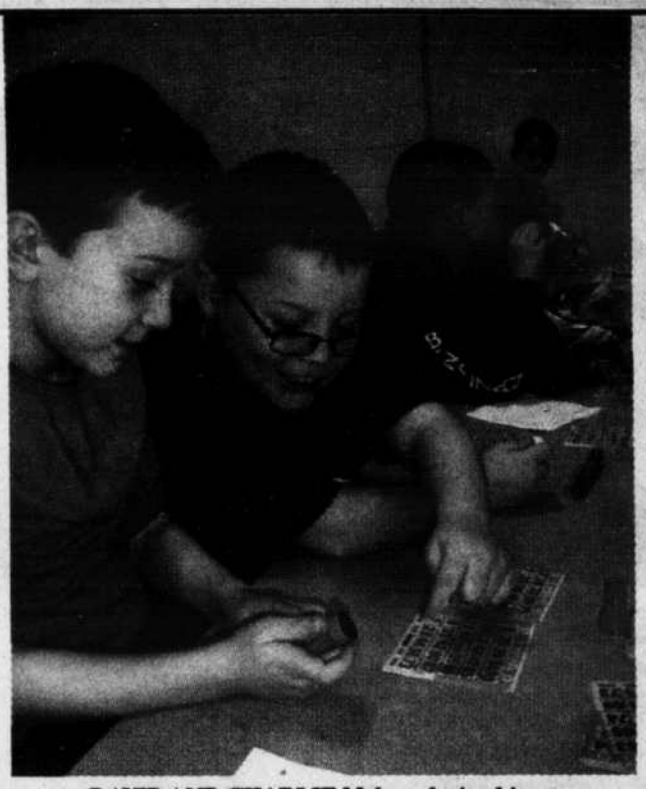
Over 200 Toys Collected For Cardiology Department



Bernazzani Bingo Night Benefits Children's Hospital

Over 150 members of the Bernazzani School community recently came together for great fun and a good cause.

It was BINGO night to benefit the Cardiology Department of Children's Hospital Boston.

Admission into the event was a new toy or game. Students, parents and many of the teachers and staff enjoyed competing for great prizes. Everyone went home a winner and over 200 toys were collected for the hospital.

The Bernazzani chose the Cardiology Department to donate to because one of their fourth graders, David Maher, was born with a congenital heart defect. The Maher family also runs a holiday toy drive for the Cardiology department each year.

City Principal Planner Sean Glennon Elected Vice Chairman Of Regional Board

Principal Planner Sean Glennon from the city's Department of Planning and Community Development has been elected as Vice-Chair of the New England Region of the National Community Development Association (NCDA). The unanimous vote was taken at the annual New England Spring Conference of NCDA, which was held in Worcester last week.

The mission of NCDA is to assist local governments to achieve high-quality, locally responsive programs for making communities better places to live and work, particularly for low and moderate income people.

Glennon served as Master of Ceremonies at the conference, and also gave a presentation on Social Networking, which included a demonstration of several popular social networking websites and how they can be used to share success stories of community development programs.

Glennon also serves on the national Board of Directors of NCDA as co-Chair of the organization's Technology Committee.

"I wish to congratulate Sean on this wonderful achievement," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch. "We have an outstanding Department of Planning and Community Development, under the direction of Dennis Harrington and Nancy Callanan, and I appreciate their hard work and dedication to our city."

Citizens Court Complaint Contends City Violated School Committe Authority Over Faxon Field Use

Ten Quincy residents have filed a court complaint against the City of Quincy, Quincy Park and Forestry Department, and Quincy Park and Recreation Board.

The complaint seeks a Declaratory Judgment from the Court as to whether the Defendants have violated the authority of the Quincy School Committee by unlawfully exerting control over land which is rightfully under the exclusive control of the Quincy School Committee.

Plaintiffs in the complaint include School Committee members Elaine Dwyer, David McCarthy, and Anne Mahoney – as private citizens and taxable inhabitants – as well as former Mayor Joseph LaRaia, whose home is in the Russell Park/Faxon Field neighborhood.

Most of the citizens on the complaint are from the surrounding neighborhood of Quincy High School's Faxon Field. M.G.L. c.40 § 53 allows for 10 taxable inhabitants of a city to file a complaint against the city, or any of its officers or agents, when they are about to raise or expend money or incur obligations purporting to bind said city, other than that for which they have a legal right.

"As a citizen of Quincy and a member of the Quincy School Committee, I have always firmly believed that the Faxon Field location is under the authority and jurisdiction of the School Committee, and the site itself is not a proper location for a track," McCarthy said. "There have been a few opinions and interpretations in the past over who has jurisdiction and I hope the results of this Declaratory Judgment give us a fair and official ruling.

"Because I am a party to the complaint, and also the chairman of the Park and Recreation board, I would recuse myself from any decisions within the park and recreation board about the Faxon Field track location when there is a conflict of interest."

Mahoney said, "Faxon Field is under the authority of the School Committee. Like Veterans Memorial Field, and other school grounds, the School Committee has exclusive authority over Faxon Field and its use for school purposes.

"The City of Quincy came before the School Committee to request building a track on Faxon Field and the School Committee voted not to do so. The City, the Park and Forestry Department, and the Park and Recreation Board cannot simply ignore the vote of the School Committee and do whatever they choose on land that is under the control of the School Committee."

The citizens filed the complaint to obtain a declaratory judgment from Superior Court stating that the Quincy School Committee properly and legally has authority over Faxon Field and to prevent further funds from being spent by the City to design and build a track on Faxon Field, where – the citizens contend – has no authority from the School Committee to do so.

The City's Position On The Citizens' Complaint

This lawsuit is the third attempt by a group of opponents of the track to stop the Faxon Field track project. This lawsuit, however, includes three elected public officials, all of whom serve on the school committee: Anne Mahoney, Dave McCarthy and Elaine Dwyer.

"I am terribly disappointed in my colleagues on the school committee, none of who so much as even spoke to me about this before joining in the lawsuit," said Mayor Tom Koch. "The children in the city and the track community have waited long enough, and I simply don't understand how these officials could act so irresponsibly. The city will move forward with the project, and I intend to do everything in my power to see that there is no further delay in delivering our long-awaited municipal track."

City Solicitor Jim Timmins has reviewed the filing and expressed similar concerns. "The school committee hired its own lawyer back in 2009 and that lawyer fully reviewed the matter and concluded, as did I, that the city was moving forward lawfully with this track project. He explained the school committee's jurisdiction to them, at the time, and made it perfectly clear that the mayor was acting properly. We have all relied on that opinion in moving forward, and I find this lawsuit to be stunning."

Timmins advised that the city would vigorously defend against the allegations, many of which are untrue or unfounded, and would continue to proceed with the project. "There are no new allegations here. This is simply another attempt at pushing issues which have been previously addressed, and we expect, as in the past, that the city's actions here will be found to be lawful and appropriate."

Police Nab Stolen Car Thieves

3 a.m., after stealing Keating's 2001 Lexus from his Adeline Place driveway.

The brothers – who were charged with breaking and entering a vehicle/boat at nighttime and receiving a stolen motor vehicle – pled innocent at their arraignment Tuesday at Quincy District Court.

Christopher Babij, who is currently on probation, was ordered held until his next court appearance on April 15.

Kenneth Babij was released until his April 25 appearance date.

Keating, who served as Norfolk County District Attorney from 1999-2011, said he was impressed by the swift arrests by Quincy Police.

"For the past 12 years, I worked with the Quincy Police and was very impressed with them as a district attorney," said Keating in prepared statement. "Today, I am very impressed with them as a resident relying on their services. When I called the police to report that my car had been stolen, they apprehended the suspects within minutes. Their quick work should be commended and I am certain that District Attorney (Michael) Morrissey will handle the case with the same level of efficiency and success."

According to the police report, Officer Arthur Carthas was monitoring traffic in the parking lot of the Than Dat supermarket on 733 Hancock St., when the call came through of the stolen Lexus. Carthas said in his report that he recalled a black SUV type motor vehicle had passed his location just a minute earlier.

He left the parking lot and caught up with the vehicle at the intersection of Billings Road and Hancock Street, where he stayed 20 feet behind. Officer Matthew Hockney pulled up behind Carthas. The Lexus proceeded north on Hancock Street and took a left into the McDonald's parking lot and stopped after Carthas put on his blue emergency lights.

The driver of the car, Christopher Babij, rolled down the window as both officers approached and threw the keys onto the ground. Hockney ordered him to keep his hands in the air. Christopher Babij asked why he was being arrested and said that the car was a rental. The brothers were transported to Quincy Police Headquarters in separate vehicles.

Christopher Babij was sentenced to serve nine months in jail for breaking into a Milton home last March.

Fundraising In Support Of Perkins School For The Blind; This Will Be Quinn's First Marathon

Robyn Quinn Running Boston For A Great Cause

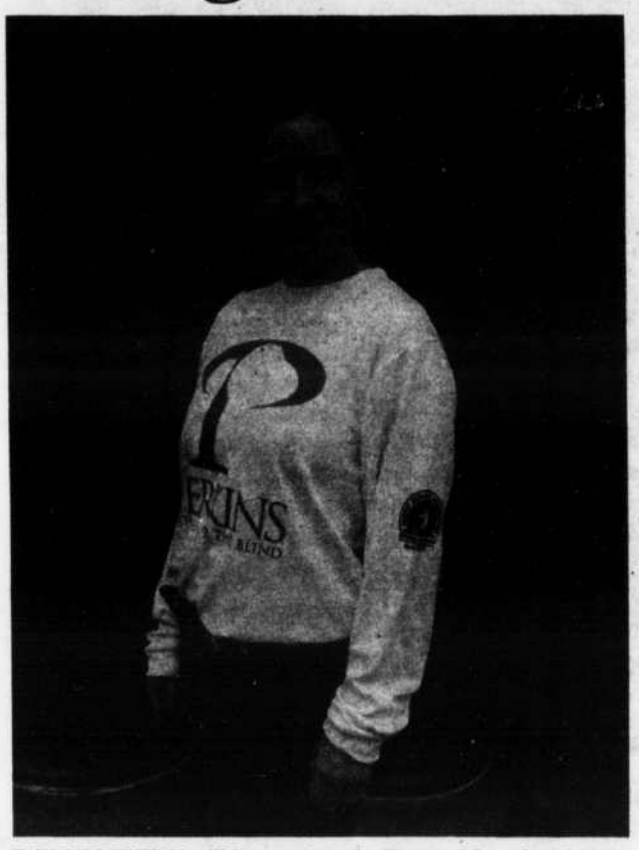
By JOE REARDON

Robyn Quinn knows at some point along the 26.2-mile route from Hopkinton to the Prudential Center that her leg muscles will become heavy and the exhaustion of racing in her first Boston Marathon will take hold.

For Quinn, accepting the fact that she'll have to push through the fatigue, whether it be through the hills of Newton or the final stretch down Beacon Street, is half the battle. The fatigue won't be coming as a surprise to her.

"Everyone tells me not to speed up at the beginning," said Quinn. "You're fired up and excited, and you're charging down the hills. (On Beacon Street) it seems like it's a long way to go. I'm sure everything's going to hurt at that point."

When the fatigue does hit, the 39-year-old Quinn knows what to expect. She's increased her miles steadily since November, and save for an injury that sidelined her for a month before the beginning of the year, her training has been consistent.



Quinn's magic mark is any time under 4 hours, 30 minutes. "At the end of the day it's four hours that I've done something," she said.

Quinn has seen the course more than once, a variable that will loom big on Patriots Day. She ran the first 12 miles of the route in 6-degree weather in January and the final 18 miles, which include the fabled Newton Hills, twice in February. She admits she had doubts about finishing after the inaugural long run.

"The first time I ran it I said I'd never run 18 miles again," said Quinn. "It was absolutely brutal. But the second time was a lot better.

"I think one of the toughest things will be (waiting for) the start. The waiting is going to be the toughest part."

Along with the weekly long run, Quinn has spent several days this winter running half-mile repeats on the 65 acres of meandering paths entwined Pope John Paul II Park in Dorchester. A typical workout would include six, half-mile repeats just faster than race pace with a 400-meter jog between. The workouts are designed to give Quinn the strength to increase her pace on race day.

ROBYN QUINN will be running the Boston Marathon in support of The Perkins School for the Blind.

Quinn believes there will come a time along the course where she'll feel like switching gears. It won't be in the early miles, but she'll be ready when the time is right. "I want to wait until I'm there and see how I feel," Quinn said. "I've never run a half or full marathon so I really don't know how it feels."

She's no stranger to road running with more than 50 races over the past five years. Interestingly enough, it just may be the four miles of hills, culminating with Heartbreak Hill, 20 miles in at Boston College. "In shorter races, the hills are a strength," she said. "I feel like I have to get my running center. I always tell myself to change my stride (on the hills). Whatever it takes to get up there."

Quinn will have the added incentive of running for her favorite causes. She is one of 19 runners on the Perkins charity team where she's hoping to raise $10,000 by April 30. Quinn is off to a good start with nearly $7,000 amassed.

"I really want to raise as much as I possibly can," said Quinn. "Having attended several Perkins' galas and competed in numerous Vision 5K races, I have been able to appreciate the values and overall mission of the Perkins School for the Blind.

"The relationships I have built since being introduced to Perkins five years ago have inspired me to a difference. The accomplishment of running and finishing the marathon has been a dream of mine for many years. To personally make a difference for the school while fulfilling a life-long dream is a accomplishment in itself."

Quinn has been getting plenty of valuable marathon advice from the veterans in her running affiliation, the Lower Mills Running Club of Milton. She meets for runs early every Saturday morning and the group has been a huge help during workouts.

"It's fabulous to run with them because they're very experienced," Quinn said.

Quinn has one long run left in front of her before she starts to taper down to the third Monday in April. She's found her runs along the course to be almost lonely, but has heard all sorts of stories of the fanatical spectators that line the course on race day. "I'm absolutely looking forward to the crowds," Quinn said.

U8 FUNDAMENTALS OPEN HOUSE

FEIGNS, FUNDAMENTALS, FRIENDSHIP

Those three words summarize our program. Playing the game is more fun when kids develop proper skills early on. Give your young player a head start in soccer by letting us develop their foundation soccer skills in our U8 FUNdamentals Spring Skills Program. We teach players the technical skills they need to play the game well while making their first experiences and learning fun.

Our program emphasizes feigns, ball-control, and dribbling, providing players with the skills needed to enjoy organized play later on.

— Coach Sarah Gardner

AFC U8 trainers Sarah and Tyler took some of their Winter Skills students outdoors last Friday.

$99 per player. For new players, price includes two AFC training tees (shown) and a ball.

Game experience: Matches every Friday

Length: 10-weeks; Starts Monday, April 4

Training: M, W, & F, 5:30 to 7 p.m. @ Quarry Hills Field.

To register: Register at the training site or online: www.americafc.us

AFC: one club, one team, one goal!

Established in Fall 2008

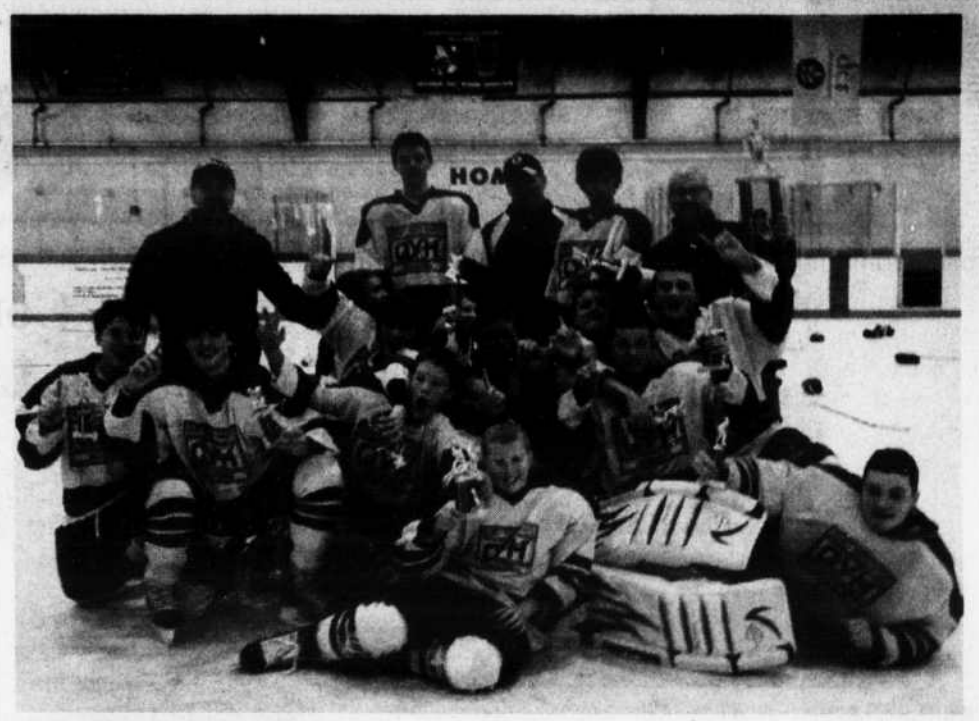
America FC is a Quincy-based non-profit organization dedicated to teaching young athletes the skills they need to play soccer effectively. The U8 FUNdamentals Spring Skills program is run through U8 Foundations, a branch of the AFC Academy, our skills development program.

NQ Baseball Spring Training Clinic April 16

The North Quincy High School baseball program, in an effort to raise monies for the upcoming season, will conduct a Spring Training Clinic on Sat., April 16 at O'Rourke Field on Quarry Street.

The camp, which is open to all kids ages 6-12 that are looking to get a head start on their spring baseball season, will run from 9 a.m. until 12 p.m. with registration starting at 8:30 a.m. The cost is $25 and that includes a hot dog and a drink for the participants – you don't have to live in Quincy to attend.

The camp will offer instruction in all areas of the game including pitching, hitting, fielding (both infield and outfield), base running, throwing techniques and stretching. Instructors will include the NQHS coaching staff along with all current NQHS players.



If you have any questions regarding the clinic call Angela Long at 617-328-9745 or Beth Liuzzo at 617-328-1416.

Quincy Bantam B's Capture GBL Crown

THE QUINCY BANTAM B HOCKEY team finished the season by winning the Greater Boston Hockey League Championship, 4-3, over Framingham. Quincy ended their season with a record of 30-8-2.

The Quincy Bantam B hockey team capped off a successful season by winning the Greater Boston Hockey League Championship with a stirring 4-3 victory over top-seeded Framingham in overtime. The victory was the culmination of a season in which the team finished with a record of 30-8-2. Two weeks earlier the B team won the Falmouth Spring Fling Tournament by defeating Arlington 3-2.

In the Spring Fling Tournament final the team was led by center Sean Farnham, who scored two goals. Quincy trailed most of the game, 2-1 until Farnham stole a loose puck at center ice for a breakaway. He finished with a top corner snap shot to tie the game. Quincy immediately grabbed the momentum and went on the attack. Sam Silcox won a faceoff in the Arlington zone back to defenseman Matt Monahan, who wasted no time getting a shot to the net, which was deflected to an opportunistic Patrick Trenholm, parked at the left post. Trenholm calmly lifted a wrist shot into the open corner and Quincy suddenly led with two minutes to play.

Quincy was able to control the play for the final minutes and closed it out with some timely saves from goaltender Ryan Higgins. Higgins was stellar the whole tournament, which included an opening game 2-1 victory over host Falmouth. In game two, Higgins shutout the same Arlington team 4-0. He followed that up with a 5-1 victory over Westfield, which advanced Quincy into the final.

Also starring for Quincy was Aidan Pugsley, who scored both goals for Quincy in the opening game. In game two, the line of Matt Hannon, Justin McGaffigan and Andrew Kiley continued to frustrate teams with tenacious fore checking, which created countless turnovers. The defense was lead by Matt Kozlowski, Matt Monahan, Mark Gillespie, Freddy Flynn and John Quirk who continuously thwarted the opposition's attack.

Quincy came into the GBL playoffs as the number two seed behind first place Framingham. In game one they faced third seed Somerville. The two teams played six times in the regular season with Quincy holding a 4-2 advantage, but Somerville came into the playoffs as the hottest team. The game was a cleanly played, up and down affair.

There was a non-stop pace from the outset, with Quincy breaking through six minutes into the first period. Matt Hannon won a faceoff in the Somerville zone back to Matt Kozlowski. Kozlowski put a heavy wrist shot on net, which was stopped with a left arm save. The puck popped into the air to the left where Justin McGaffigan was standing. McGaffigan didn't wait as he smoothly swatted the puck in to give Quincy a 1-0 lead.

The lead stood as Higgins made key save after key save, including a breakaway. Quincy dug down deep and withstood the Somerville attack, setting up the finale against a tough Framingham team that had overcome a 5-2 deficit in its own first round game to beat Parkway, in overtime, to get to the final.

Quincy opened the scoring seven minutes into the final game. Freddy Flynn pinched down along the right side wall in the Framingham zone and got a hip high wrist shot to the net. Sean Farnham stationed about 10 feet in front of the net, deftly tipped the puck out of the air. The puck darted through the goalie's legs to give Quincy the early 1-0 lead.

Quincy held the lead early into the second period, when Framingham broke into the zone for a 3 on 2 rush. The winger took a shot from the right faceoff dot, which Higgins was able to make a kick save on. The rebound came to the right-winger, parked at the corner of the net who took a shot that broke through Higgins' catching glove to tie the game.

At this point the game became very chippy. Framingham seemed determined to finish their checks and try to intimidate Quincy. Quincy would have none of it, as they continued to counterattack. Andrew Kiley stabilized the situation with tenacious fore checking, and in the defensive zone, John Quirk and Mark Gillespie sent a very clear message to Framingham that Quincy would not be intimidated, with some thunderous body checks.

Quincy took the lead five minutes into the second period. Michael Gendreau carried the puck down the left wing and deep into the zone. From the corner he got the puck halfway back up the wall to defenseman Matt Kozlowski. Kozlowski fed the puck to the slot where Patrick Trenholm was tangled up with a defender. Trenholm whirled around and fired a heavy wrist shot that went through the goalie's five hole to give Quincy the 2-1 lead.

The lead stood up well into the third period until the Framingham player fired the puck from a sharp angle to tie the game. This goal could have been a back breaker, but Quincy came right back to take control.

With three minutes left in the game, Silcox won a faceoff in the offensive zone. The puck went back to Farnham, who fired. Eoin Hurley, crashing the net, turned deftly and tipped the puck past the prone Framingham goalie, as the Quincy crowd went wild, sensing victory. Alas, the game was not done, and neither was Hurley.

Late in the game Framingham rushed into the zone. The puck carrier pivoted to the right side and fired a hard wrist shot, which broke in between Higgins' chest and right arm, and suddenly, with 1:42 to play, the game was tied and the Quincy bench was deflated. They were able to withstand the Framingham attack for the final minute and a half, and as the buzzer went off Quincy was granted a reprieve, to rest and regroup. It was exactly what they needed.

The break seemed to give Quincy new life, and when play resumed the team was inspired, and the end came quickly for Framingham.

Silcox again won the faceoff, and was able to get the puck to Trenholm on the right side. Trenholm pushed the puck forward, saw a streaking Eoin Hurley to his left, and fed Hurley the puck as he was breaking past the flat-footed defenseman. Suddenly, Hurley had a clean breakaway and he made no mistake. He brought the puck to the middle, saw a crack, high glove side, and fired. The puck beat the goalie top shelf, as Roche Arena in West Roxbury exploded.

"In the era of AA & AAA elite programs, it was extra special to watch these kids win a championship with their friends and for their home town," said coach Bobby Flynn.

The Quincy Bantam B team would like to thank Paul Cleary and the Dunkin Donuts on Sea St. for their help with the team this year.

THIS IS A HAMMER

Picking the Right Plumber

Q: I need some repairs to pipes under my house that have small leaks, plus some other minor fixes around the house such as dripping taps. But I'm nervous about getting charged too much. How can I find a reputable plumber? – May H., Knoxville, Tenn.

A: There are a number of things you can and should do when hiring a plumber for the first time. Following these steps will increase your chances of finding a plumber who will do the job right and at competitive rates.

–Ask a friend or relative: If they've hired a plumber who did a good job, they'll be glad to recommend him or her to you.

–Contact two or more plumbers: Compare the rate each will charge for the work, learn exactly what repairs they will make, and how long they'll take to complete the job. (For small jobs, some plumbers will give rates over the phone, but make sure they then put their estimates in writing before agreeing to the work.)

–Always ask for the plumber's license: Reputable trade professionals are licensed by the state, and you can check the license number with the state's professional licensing division, by phone or on the Internet.

–Don't be afraid to ask questions: Find out how long the plumber has been in business, how big or small the company is, get details about the job and who exactly will perform the work, and so on. It's your house and your money, and you have the right to ask and the right to refuse to hire someone for the job if you aren't comfortable.

–Don't make the decision alone: If you're having trouble deciding which plumber to use, have a trusted friend or relative by your side when each plumber arrives and when comparing estimates.

Finally, check the local Better Business Bureau to see if any complaints were registered against any of the plumbers you are considering. And, look at some of the free online business review sites out there (like Yelp.com, available in many cities) where customers leave good and bad feedback.

Have you hugged your plumber today? Duluth Trading Company is sponsoring the Hug A Plumber contest in honor of National Plumber's Day. Now through April 8, share a story about your favorite plumber and both you and your plumber could win $250. Duluth Trading, whose signature product is the Longtail T, a shirt that is 3 inches longer so it prevents the dreaded plumber's you-know-what, has all the details on its website at duluthtrading.com.

HOME TIP: Professional licenses are issued by each state and can be looked up by number. Check the blue pages for the phone number to the state division of licensing or go to the state's official website to quickly check the status of a license.

Conway Team Well Represented At Leading Real Estate Convention

The Jack Conway Company was well respresented at the 2011 Leading Real Estate Companies of the World® (LeadingRE) conference held recently at The Cosmopolitan of Las Vegas in Nevada.

Despite the economy, attendance at the annual event outpaced last year's conference, with 800 top real estate professionals from the U.S. and eight countries. Participating brokerages represented a significant share of the U.S. real estate market, with annual sales production of over $250 billion.

Joining Conway CEO Carol Bulman at the week-long event were President of Corporate Services Maureen McCaffrey and Marketing Director Al Becker. In addition to the general session, Bulman attended the Respro Conference, while McCaffrey attended the Luxury Portfolio session and Becker was at MarTech, for marketing and technology leaders. Bulman and McCaffrey were also featured speakers during the seminars.

"It is so vitally important for Conway to be a part of this training," said Bulman. "The information and tools we bring back will have a direct influence on our customers' success and our ability to get the job done."

The week-long series of four conferences in one boasted a noteworthy line-up of over 150 speakers from within the real estate industry and beyond, who addressed a range of topics relating to real estate management, technology, marketing and business development.

"We applied our 2011 conference theme of 'Engage. Innovate. Lead' quite literally to develop a program that inspires our members to compete at a higher level, create better ways to connect with consumers, and generally raise the bar," said LRE President/CEO Pam O'Connor. "Ongoing shifts in the housing market, technology and the way people communicate make it essential to continuously build competence."

JOINING CONWAY CEO Carol Bulman (center) at the Leading RE Companies of the World convention were Marketing Director Al Becker and Corporate Services President Maureen McCaffrey.

Jack Conway & Company is the local representative of Leading Real Estate Companies of the World®, the largest network of over 600 premier locally-branded firms producing almost $250 billion in annual home sales. LeadingRE provides a broad range of brokerage services to its affiliates, including lead generation, branding support, luxury marketing, Web exposure and technology systems.

Making A Do-It-Yourself Move

(NAPSA)-For a growing number of families, relocating has become a "moving experience." That's because whether they're going across town or across the country, they're choosing to move themselves. For some, it's a way to have more control over the process. For others, it can add up to significant savings.

To help you take part in this trend, here are some tips from the professionals at an industry-leading company-Penske.

• Rent from experts. Renting trucks from knowledgeable professionals can help ensure that your move is smooth and easy. "Moving is one of life's most stressful moments," said Don Mikes, vice president of truck rental for Penske. "Our goal is to help guide people through their journey."

• Select smart. A 12- or 16-foot truck can be a very versatile size-excellent for moving everything from a few large items or the contents of a small condo or apartment.

• Reserve early. Book your rental truck at least two weeks in advance.

• Pack wisely. Load your heaviest items first. Avoid injury by always bending your knees and lifting with your legs.

• The right accessories can make a difference. Boxes, bubble wrap, moving blankets and hand trucks are essential to protect your items and make your move more enjoyable.

RENTING A TRUCK from knowledgeable professionals can help ensure that your move is smooth and easy.

• Mark it up. Label as you pack. It makes it easier to put the boxes in the right room when unloading.

• Think safety first. Rental trucks are taller, wider, heavier and require more stopping distance than cars.

Pick up your truck early. Practice driving. Take precautions when the truck is loaded. Beware of low-hanging branches and overhangs when cornering. Park in well-lit areas-and padlock the rear door.

Penske Truck Rental has 24/7 emergency roadside assistance and optional protection plans.

• Get oriented. Ask the truck rental associate to walk you through the vehicle's features. It should be a clean and well-maintained vehicle.

• Drive green. Use a truck rental company affiliated with EPA's SmartWay program. A little preparation goes a long way to ensure an easier-and safe-move.

Nutrition & You

Enjoy The Benefits Of Breakfast-For Dinner

(NAPSA)-The next time you're wondering what's for supper-and you're the one who has to make it-you may want to wake up to the tasty idea of having breakfast for dinner. All too often, breakfast is eaten on the run in the morning. Have breakfast in the evening and you can turn it into a fun, relaxing and nutritious way to wind down a busy day.

Breakfast for dinner offers busy home cooks many advantages over preparing a more traditional supper. Such popular breakfast dishes as omelets, pancakes and French toast are easy to prepare and offer a great way to incorporate beneficial ingredients. For example, use nutrient-rich fresh fruits and veggies, and pump up the protein by adding breakfast meats like sausage, bacon or ham into your dish.

"Whether you prefer sweet or savory, breakfast is a great meal option anytime of the day," explained Jones Dairy Farm President Philip Jones. "Since most morning dishes are made up of basic ingredients you already have on hand, breakfast for dinner is a quick, easy and popular supper solution."

For example, here's a delicious breakfast recipe hearty enough for dinner that can even be made a day in advance.

WAKE UP dinner with a savory ham or sausage breakfast strata.

Ham, Smoked Gouda and Mushroom Strata
(Serves 8)

- 1 tablespoon butter
- 4 ounces sliced mixed exotic mushrooms
- 1/2 cup chopped shallots or onion
- 4 cups cubed bread of choice (about 6 small slices)
- 7 ounces Jones Ham Steak or Jones Ham Slices, cut into 1/2-inch pieces
- 1/2 cup dried cranberries
- 1 cup shredded smoked Gouda cheese or shredded Cheddar cheese
- 6 large eggs (or 3 eggs and 3 egg whites)
- 2 cups whole milk or light cream

Melt butter in a medium skillet over medium heat. Add mushrooms and shallots; cook, stirring occasionally, 8 minutes or until vegetables are tender and liquid evaporates. Arrange bread cubes in a greased or buttered 13- x 9-inch baking dish; top with layers of the mushroom mixture, ham, cranberries and cheese. Whisk eggs in a large bowl; whisk in milk. Pour mixture evenly over all. Press down on bread to allow milk mixture to coat the top. Cover and refrigerate for a minimum of one hour (up to 24 hours). Bake in a preheated 350° F oven 40 minutes or until center is set. Cut into squares.

For more delicious breakfast recipes, see www.jonesdairyfarm.com or call (800) 563-1004.

Put An End To Exercise Excuses

(NAPSA)-If you don't exercise as much as you'd like, you're not alone. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, (CDC) about one in four adults engages in little or no regular physical activity. While there are lots of excuses not to exercise, there are ways to take control and make exercise part of your daily routine.

Here are three common excuses and suggested solutions that may help you make a positive change:

1. I don't have time. Exercise doesn't have to take up as much time as many think. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services recommends at least 150 minutes of aerobic activity a week, which works out to a little over 20 minutes a day. What's more, you can split your exercise into two or more sessions. Do 15 minutes of exercise in the morning and another 15 minutes in the evening.

2. I just don't have the energy. Exercise can actually increase your energy level. Regular exercise releases endorphins, the feel-good hormones. Exercise can also help lower blood pressure and cholesterol and reduce symptoms of anxiety and depression.

3. I'm so out of shape, it's hard to get started. If you haven't been able to be all that active lately, you may want to start with shorter exercise intervals, say five to 10 minutes and gradually work up to your desired activity level. Keep at it and you could be there before you know it.

BEING PHYSICALLY active keeps you looking and feeling good and may be easier to do than you think.

Mitral Valve Prolapse Rarely a Health Threat

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: About 40 years ago, when I was in my 30s, I was examined by a famous heart doctor who went over me with great care and concluded I had mitral valve prolapse. He put me on medicine, which I have taken to this day. He also insisted I take antibiotics before dental work.

That doctor died, and my new doctor, quite young, says I don't have mitral valve prolapse and that I don't need medicine or antibiotics before dental work. He saw that I doubted him, so he had me get an echocardiogram. It showed no mitral valve problem. I still wonder about this. I can't accept that my former doctor was wrong. – J.P.

ANSWER: The mitral valve regulates blood flow from the upper left heart chamber – the left atrium – to the lower left heart chamber, the ventricle. When the ventricle contracts, it pumps blood out of the heart. Simultaneously the mitral valve closes to prevent backflow of blood into the left atrium. Mitral valve prolapse means that the mitral valve balloons upward into the left atrium during heart pumping and might leak blood.

In the 1960s, around the time you were diagnosed with this condition, mitral valve prolapse was first described and became a very popular diagnosis. Many of those who were then given a diagnosis of it really didn't have it. The condition was written about in newspapers and magazines, and dire consequences were ascribed to it.

Now, with new knowledge of how this valve works and with new equipment such as echocardiograms (sound-wave pictures of the heart), a clearer picture of the mitral valve is obtainable. Most people who have a ballooning valve are not considered to have a serious medical condition. In only a handful of these people does a significant leak of blood occur. Those are the people who require treatment, and those are the people who take antibiotics before certain dental procedures.

Your doctor wasn't wrong. He was a victim of the inadequate knowledge of that era.

Heart-valve disease is quite common. The booklet on it describes the more prevalent varieties. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue – No. 105W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What is your opinion of prolotherapy? I have quite severe osteoarthritis in both thumbs and have been receiving cortisone injections for it. I was told that prolotherapy would be more effective than cortisone and that the relief would be longer-lasting. – B.N.

ANSWER: Prolotherapy involves the injection of various substances around damaged ligaments and tendon attachments. It triggers inflammation. The inflammation, in turn, promotes healing by stimulating collagen formation. Often the material injected is dextrose (sugar) mixed with lidocaine (an anesthetic).

Some reports say that it is quite successful in things like tennis and golf elbow, where the pain comes from ligament tears. Other reports question its efficacy. It won't hurt you.

I find it hard to believe it is more effective than cortisone for the inflammation of arthritis.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

A Health Care Success Story

(NAPSA)-It may be time for many older Americans to take a healthy look at the new health care reform law. Some important changes are already here and more are on the way.

For example, one program that has been around for some time is working even better than many envisioned-the Medicare prescription drug program. This Medicare Part D is a not-very-well-known health care success story. With so much talk around the massive reform bill, a program working as well as the Part D program can be easy to overlook. A recent survey found that nearly 85 percent of enrollees are satisfied with their coverage-and the program is actually saving money for people and costing less than expected.

The most recent report from the Medicare Trustees projects future Part D spending will be below previous projections. In fact, total Part D costs have declined by 41 percent, or $261 billion, compared to the initial 10-year cost estimate, according to the report.

Additionally, the average monthly beneficiary premium for Part D coverage is $30 this year, far below the $53 originally forecast and an increase of only $1 over last year's average premium.

Part D is one element of the health care system that is working the way it's supposed to work. About 30 million beneficiaries have access to affordable prescription medicines as a result. That's important, because medicines help keep people healthy and out of the hospital, which is a key driver of health care costs.

For more information on the Medicare Part D program, visit www.cms.gov.

PLAYING HARDBALL

With baseball season on the minds of many youngsters, it pays for parents to remember that arm pain among young athletes is on the rise. In fact, one study shows that there has been a five-fold increase in shoulder and elbow injuries among youth baseball (and softball) players since 2000. Reasons for this increase include overuse stemming from playing one position exclusively or specializing in a single sport. Cross-training helps prevent injury. In addition, young baseball pitchers often experience toughening and tightening of the posterior-inferior glenohumeral ligament, which leads to limited range of motion and the potential for cartilage tears. Chiropractors can assess a young player's risk of injury by looking at muscle balance and measuring range of motion.

Sports injuries nearly always jar and misalign the spinal column. In fact, many traumas to the body have an effect on the spinal column because the spine is at the centre of the body. There is no question that an athlete performs better when the spinal column is balanced. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we're currently accepting new patients and welcome your call at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Remember, you do not have to be a professional athlete, or team member to benefit from chiropractic care. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Baseball pitchers are twice as likely as fielders to experience significant loss in their range of motion.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Human beings can be very complicated creatures . . . Ever notice how a man or a woman can be pleasant one day and disagreeable the next. . . cheerful in the morning and downcast in the afternoon. . . generous in some circumstances and downright stingy in others. . . more than fair at one time and positively unjust at another . . . It is not uncommon to hear one person say of another . . . "You wouldn't believe it was the same man."

The Russian writer Tolstoy once compared man to a river. "The water is alike in all of them, but every river is narrow in some places and wide in others; here swift and there sluggish, here clear and there turbid; cold in winter and warm in summer. The same may be said of men. Every man bears within himself the germs of every human quality, displaying all in turn; and a man can often seem unlike himself – yet he still remains the same man."

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Regarding your upcoming challenges, the Aries Lamb should very quickly size things up and allow you to make the best possible use of whatever resources you have on hand. Good luck.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You rarely blame others for missteps that worked against you. But this time you need to lay out all the facts and insist that everyone acknowledge his or her share of the mistakes. Then start again.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might want to start making vacation plans. And don't be surprised by unexpected family demands. Maintain control. Be open to suggestions, but don't get bogged down by them.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Work with both your Moon Child and Crab aspects this week to keep both your creative and your practical sides balanced. Your intuition sharpens, giving you greater insight by the middle of the week.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat finally should have all the information needed to move on with a project. If not, maybe you'll want to give everything a new and more thorough check before trying to move on.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Too much emotional pain caused by someone you can't win over as a friend? Then stop trying to do so. You have other things you need to work on this week. Go to it, and good luck.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It's a good time to reassess where and how your strengths can help you build, and where your weaknesses can hinder you. Remember to build on your strongest foundation.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) That personal matter that seemed so hard to deal with should be less confusing now. Don't rush. Let things happen easily, without the risk of creating even more puzzlement.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Change continues to be a strong factor in many important areas. Keep on top of them, and you won't have to worry about losing control. A personal situation takes on a new look.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A business offer sounds intriguing. But if you don't check it out thoroughly, you could have problems. Take a set of questions with you when you attend your next meeting.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your self-confidence should be coming back. That's good news. But it might be a bit over the top right now, so best to let it settle down before you start making expensive decisions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your life, your decisions. Good enough. But be sure you have all the facts you need to put into the decision-maker mixing bowl and hope it will come out as it should.

BORN THIS WEEK: You find much of your creativity with new people who give you much to think about.

Residents Quiz Milton Officials On Impact Of Proposed Wind Turbine

committee considered three sites for the town's wind turbine project and eliminated two of the three sites. They then focused on the property abutting the Granite Links Golf Course and finalized their wind turbine by-law.

According to Clark, that zoning requires that turbines be 1300 feet from a road, 1200 feet from a house and 100 feet from a golf course.

"It sounds like spot zoning to me," said Palmucci who described the lengthy process that he and others undertook in drafting Quincy wind turbine ordinance. Palmucci contrasted that process to choosing the site and "drafting the (by-law) around it."

Palmucci also stated that the wind turbine will disrupt the views from the Blue Hills Observatory and asked why that was not a factor in considering its siting.

Milton's officials responded that the Friends of the Blue Hills Reservation have been silent on the project and on any potential disruption described by Palmucci.

Contacted Monday, Friends' President John Sheehan of Dover stated the wind turbine issue has generated a wide range of opinions during informal discussions by Trustees but that no resolution has been filed and no vote taken.

The turbine project has been overwhelmingly endorsed in Milton where its Board of Selectmen, Town Meeting and Conservation Commission have applauded the project easing it through multiple approvals oftentimes with unanimous votes.

That's not the case in Quincy where City Council recently asked Milton to review the project plans and where Quarry Hills Associates LLC (QHA) has filed a lawsuit to halt the project.

QHA's first legal hearing is set for April 21 when its legal team will seek a "Cease and Desist" order through Norfolk Superior Court, Dedham.

While QHA's spokesman Chris Sleeper spoke very briefly at last week's meeting, he did distribute a 'white paper' disputing Milton's claims regarding the wind turbine.

In that paper, Sleeper asserts, "We need to be very, very careful."

Sleeper cited the effect of the planned turbine on the view from the Blue Hills; the dangers of a structure equal to a 50-story building and challenged Milton's financial projections regarding the turbine as well as its cloudy history on protecting conservation areas.

In addition, Sleeper claims that Milton has provided no instrument or bonding to cover the cost of removing the turbine if health hazards, ice throws or accidents, erupt.

"The addition of an industrial wind turbine into a residential neighborhood is at best a highly risky proposition," Sleeper warned at the beginning of his review. "There are always consequences."

Foreclosure Prevention Counseling Services Expanded

with the Notice to Foreclosure information, NHS can help struggling families arrange loan modifications and possibly prevent them from losing their homes."

Weymouth Mayor Sue Kay added, "The economy is impacting the ability of many residents of all of our local communities to meet their housing costs. Weymouth is very supportive of this pro-active effort to help homeowners facing foreclosure and to provide assistance to residents to help them through this crisis."

Robert Corley, executive director of Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, noted that the South Shore has been particularly hard hit by the foreclosure crisis. Between May and October of 2010, there were 168 foreclosure petitions filed in Quincy – up from 43 during the same period in 2009. Weymouth had 157 petitions, compared with 48 during the previous year. That increase in local foreclosure petitions has continued into 2011, Corley said.

"The continued wave of foreclosures has impacted hundreds of local families while also hurting the local tax base, putting more of a burden on already strapped city budgets," Corley said. "Keeping working people in their homes is not only good for their individual families, but also for the community as a whole."

Corley stressed that the free foreclosure counseling services are open to homeowners of any income level who are struggling to make their mortgage payments, such as a family where one spouse may have lost a job, had their hours cut or has had to take a pay cut.

"They just need a little relief until they can get reemployed so they won't lose their homes," Corley said. "The important message is homeowners don't have to wait until they've received a foreclosure petition to come get help. If they come to us early on, Neighborhood Housing's counselors can try to arrange a loan modification and payment plan that can help preserve their financial stability and prevent foreclosure."

For more information on Neighborhood Housing Services' foreclosure prevention workshops, visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

Community Passover Seder April 19

A community seder will be held Tuesday, April 19 at 6 p.m. at Temple Beth El, 1001 Hancock St., Quincy.

Passover commemorates the Israelites exodus from Egypt. Its name comes from the Book of Exodus (Chapter 12, verse 11), when God stated that he would pass over the houses of the Israelites during the tenth plague.

It is traditional to eat only unleavened food during the eight days of Passover in recognition of the Israelites leaving Egypt before their bread had time to rise.

The Passover seder (meaning "order") is one of the most beloved and celebrated rituals. The seder is the telling of the Exodus story and fulfills the commandment of teaching the story to children.

This is the fourth year of the seder and all are welcome.

Cantor Seth Grossman of Temple B'Nai Shalom of Braintree will lead the seder, which will include a kosher meal.

Reservations must be made by April 10. The cost is $38 per person and $15 for children under 13.

For more information, contact Marylou FIshman at 617-773-3567 or maryloufishman@comcast.net.

Services for Passover will be held on April 19 and April 26 at 9:15 at Temple Beth El. For more information about Temple Beth El and services, visit www.templebethelquincy.org.

United Methodist History, Policy Topics April 3, 10

The United Methodist Church will have discussions about United Methodist History, and United Methodist Policy following the 10:30 a.m. worship services April 3 and April 10.

Leading the discussions will be Pastor Susan F. Jarek-Glidden.

Rev. Glidden said, "These sessions are for just about everyone. People who have been United Methodists all of their lives, people who are thinking of becoming United Methodists, or people who are learning about another faith. Everyone is welcome.," she said.

Thechurch,whichishandicapped accessible, is located at 40 Beale St., Wollaston. For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

Lighthouse Topic April 6

The Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum will hold an open meeting for members and the public Wednesday, April 6 at 7 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

Becky Bates McArthur and Paul Fiori of the Cohasset Historical Society will give a presentation on the subject of Cohasset's Minot's Ledge Lighthouse. They will tell the story of the first Minot's Light which was destroyed in a storm in 1851 and replaced by the second structure which was built with Quincy granite from the Granite Railway Quarry.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On April 5, 1614, Pocahontas, daughter of the chief of the Powhatan Indian confederacy, marries English tobacco planter John Rolfe in Jamestown, Va. Pocahontas had been kidnapped and used as a hostage for peace negotiations. By the time she was released, she had fallen in love with John Rolfe.

• On April 9, 1859, a 23-year-old Missouri youth named Samuel Langhorne Clemens receives his steamboat pilot's license. During his time as a pilot, he picked up the term "Mark Twain," a boatman's call noting that the river was only 2 fathoms deep, the minimum depth for safe navigation. He used it as a pseudonym in his writing for nearly 50 years.

• On April 10, 1866, the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is founded in New York City by philanthropist and diplomat Henry Bergh. Bergh's impassioned accounts of the horrors inflicted on animals convinced the New York State legislature to pass the ASPCA charter.

• On April 6, 1896, the Olympic Games, a long-lost tradition of ancient Greece, are reborn in Athens – 1,500 years after being banned by Roman Emperor Theodosius I. King Georgios I of Greece and a crowd of 60,000 spectators welcomed athletes from 13 nations to the international competition.

• On April 4, 1913, Chicago bluesman Muddy Waters is born in Clarksdale, Miss. Born McKinley Morganfield, he wrote "Rollin' Stone," "Hoochie Coochie Man," "Mannish Boy" and "Got My Mojo Working," songs that would later provide inspiration to Bob Dylan.

• On April 7, 1920, classically trained sitar virtuoso Ravi Shankar is born in Varanasi, India. The Beatles studied under Shankar and experimented with the distinctive sitar sound in songs such as "Norwegian Wood" and "Within You, Without You."

• On April 8, 1974, Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves hits his 715th career home run, breaking Babe Ruth's legendary record of 714 homers. A crowd of 53,775 people, the largest in the history of Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium, was with Aaron that night to cheer when he hit a 4th-inning pitch off the Los Angeles Dodgers' Al Downing.

project in Massachusetts comes a week before the City is slated to meet with the MSBA Board Directors to finalize the project's budget, which expected to be $50 million. Central will be the first middle school in Massachusetts to be built under the Model School Program.

The MSBA's Model School Program adapts and re-uses the design of successful, recently constructed schools; simplifying the design process, reducing the amount of time projects are in the design phase and lowering design fees, officials said. Using elements of a previously designed Model School allows projects to begin construction faster and reduces construction costs for the project. At least a year of design work can be saved by using a Model School.

Mayor Koch stated that the City also saved substantial money by negotiating the purchase of Hancock Street land for the school without using costly and time-consuming eminent domain proceedings.

"We are proud of work to date, but we are only just beginning," Koch said. "The parents of this City have already waited too long for a new Central, and we are going to get it done."

JOHN M. GILLIS, longtime former Quincy City Clerk and current Norfolk County Commissioner, receives the Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award for outstanding community service at a recent reception at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center. Making the presentation are Mr. Bosworth's daughter, Donna Gray, business manager of The Quincy Sun; and Mr. Bosworth's son, Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth.

For Outstanding Community Service

John Gillis Honored With Henry Bosworth Citizenship Award

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

John M. Gillis – a lifelong Quincy resident, esteemed public servant and goodwill ambassador for his beloved Quincy Point – was honored as the recipient of The Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award presented by The Quincy Sun at a recent reception at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

Gillis, whose career in public service has spanned more than 50 years, was recognized as a "champion of the little guy" for his innumerable good deeds to those needing a helping hand from all walks of life.

Some 150 family, friends, past and present elected officials and other invited guests attended the tribute for Gillis who served 33 years as Quincy city clerk before being elected a Norfolk County commissioner in 1992 – a post he continues to serve.

"John Gillis the epitome of what a good citizen is and has provided outstanding community service in a myriad of capacities," Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth

Absentee Landlords Must Pay For Police Details At Unruly Addresses

Property Owners Face Charges For Illegal Activity

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Property owners will now feel the pain when repeated illegal activity erupts at their homes, businesses, rental units and empty lots, due to amendments that City Council approved Monday to the city's Public Safety Enforcement ordinance.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci filed the ordinance revision which allows the city to charge property owners for private details assigned to unruly addresses after eight reports of "arrestable" offences.

"Nobody wants one of those properties next to him or her," said Palmucci who said the revised law "benefits everyone."

Palmucci said the changes add teeth to the ten-year-old statute that allowed the assignment of police details.

That law was only used

Census Reflects City's Changing Diversity

City Clerk Joseph Shea told councillors Monday that the biggest change in the Quincy's population in the past decade is its rising diversity.

According to federal figures, Quincy's residents listed as "white" now account for 67.3% of the city's total population while those residents listed as Asian account for 24%. In 2000, the white population was 79.66% and persons listed as Asian was 15.79%.

According to the 2010 federal census calculation, the total Quincy population is 92,271 which allows the city to qualify for added federal funds.

"We've crossed the 90,000 mark on population," said Shea, adding, "Federal reimbursement is clocked

Alternative Town Brook Plan Pitched - Page 2 ◆ High School Sports Spring Forward - Pages 21, 22

Alternative Proposal Would Daylight Town Brook Through Quincy Center

Proponents Seek Citizen Support

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Town Brook has been shunned like a ragged relative, hidden for the last hundred years beneath culverts, squeezed into pipes and buried in cement beneath Quincy Center, according to local environmentalists Steve Perdios and Pat Artis who believe that can change and become a unique attraction in Quincy Center.

Town Brook can be daylighted through Quincy Center rather than being re-routed along the Concourse, according to both Perdios, spokesman for the Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) and Artis who represents the Wollaston Garden Club. Both groups are volunteer organizations dedicated to the protection and beautification of the environment.

The groups jointly sponsored the March 29 presentation of a plan that proposes a daylighted Town Brook flowing in full view across the city's center through the Ross Parking Garage location to the Hancock Parking Lot. Some 100 supporters and observers attended the event at Thomas Crane Public Library.

The joint proposal was offered as an alternative to the plan outlined March 9 by Street-Works, the developer overseeing Quincy Center Revitalization.

In the Street-Works plan, Town Brook would run underground beneath the Ross Parking Garage and Hancock Lot acreage, but will be daylighted along the Concourse and a pocket park will be developed at the site of Quincy American Legion Post 95 at Mechanic Street and Revere Road.

On Tuesday, Artis said that supporters would now undertake efforts to influence decision-makers at the local, state and federal levels and to show the value of their plan for Town Brook in the new Quincy Center.

Supporters of daylighting Town Brook will begin contacting state and federal agencies through letters, contacts and at meetings, according to Artis who said Monday, "The next step is to give citizen witness. We need to educate the politicians."

"By daylighting Town Brook, we make a better development. It would be something special, something unique," predicted Perdios.

From his opening statements to his final words, Perdios offered his support for the Quincy Center Revitalization and for Street-Works, but sought a new dialogue on the Town Brook issue.

"I would hope we have a real civil discourse," Perdios said. "We want the redevelopment to be successful. Nobody wants to see this project go down the tubes."

Perdios acknowledged the QEN proposal had some downsides, including its cost, but said the benefits outweigh the drawbacks, and predicted that daylighting Town Brook would not only enhance the new Quincy Center, but, also, add considerable value to the center's economic development.

"We like water views. People flock to water views," said Perdios. "The Town Brook is a beautiful feature."

Perdios described the limits QEN faced in developing its plan which could only be proposed on the current city-controlled property and not involve the taking, purchasing or demolition of any existing building.

Despite those restrictions, Perdios said the QEN plan works.

"We're not asking them to reduce the building footprint (of the new developments) by one square foot, not by one foot," said Perdios.

However, the QEN plan does entail demolishing the Ross Parking structure ahead of schedule, eliminates approximately four parking spaces near the Hancock Parking lot and requires that one proposed structure be "nudged" over several feet, according to Perdios.

Perdios also noted that Street-Works officials feared a deep chasm would be formed at the point where Town Brook rolls far below street-level.

Perdios said that could be solved by terracing and landscaping.

Near the conclusion, Perdios cited a chart developed by Street-Works which scored the QEN with a failing grade of 53 to an 89 for the developer's plan.

"Those numbers should be reversed," said Perdios after citing multiple failings of the Street-Works plan.

Several observers at last week's meeting worried about the cost, and others asked how the QEN plan would affect flooding.

Perdios said that allowing Town Brook to run its own course reduced flooding potential as the brook rises and recedes naturally.

Both Artis and Perdios did express disappointment that the Street-Works plan offers so little benefit for Town Brook.

"We've been working on this since the fall of 2008," said Artis while Perdios described his numerous meetings.

When City Council endorsed the Street-Works proposal and signed the Land Disposition Agreement for the two parking lots, Perdios expected an open discussion of the brook but said that never occurred.

"I feel we walked away

ESTATE JEWELRY

Those with an appreciation for estate jewelry should be familiar with the terminology that defines older styles and periods. The word "antique" applies to any piece of jewelry that is at least 100 years old. The word "period" refers to jewelry of a recognized style that is less than 100 years old. Victorian (1835-1890) is known for drop earrings and beaded tier necklaces in silver-topped gold. Edwardian (1890-1915) imparts a light and airy mix of platinum, diamonds, and pearls, with filigree settings. Art Nouveau (1890-1910) generally features gold in very stylized swirls and curls, without many precious stones but plenty of enamel. Art Deco (1915-1935), characterized by its geometric style, pairs platinum with diamonds mixed with (semi)precious colored stones.

A journey through Vintage and Estate Jewelry is like a trip around the world and a journey back in time.You are cordially invited to view all that we have to offer at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. Our educated staff along with experience, skill and knowledge will help you make a confident purchase. Call us at 617-773-3636 or come in to see the outstanding pieces we have to offer. Understated beauty or bold splendor, whatever your choice, any of our wide selection of jewelry will look magnificent on you.

'Very Serious Dialogue' With Capitol Hill Leaders

Mayor, Street-Works Pitch Downtown Plan In D.C.

A brief trip to Washington D.C. together with the City's downtown development partners, Street-Works Development, LLC, led to a "very serious dialogue, and very positive response" to the City's plans from Capitol Hill leaders, Mayor Thomas Koch said Tuesday.

Koch and Street-Works Co-Managing Partner Ken Narva met individually with Senators John Kerry and Scott Brown, and Congressmen William Keating, Michael Capuano and Stephen Lynch to outline the unique, privately-anchored financing plan for $1.6 billion project to discuss potential federal funding sources for a portion of the necessary public infrastructure work.

"I am very grateful for the time we were able to spend with our elected leaders in Washington, and left very encouraged by the enthusiasm for our plans to create thousands of new jobs, millions of dollars in new growth every year, and do it in way that protects our taxpayers," Koch said.

Added Narva:

"We are encouraged by the State and Federal interest in this project. The meetings in Washington D.C. reconfirmed that we are unique in size, economic benefit to the community and historical importance. We remain committed to completing the tasks ahead with the support of Washington."

The Administration and Street-Works team also met with high-ranking officials from the U.S. Department of Transportation, the Environmental Protection Agency, and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to discuss both grant opportunities and permitting processes for several components of the plan.

City Welcomes 'Here Comes The Boom'

After serving as the shooting location of several movies in the past few years, Quincy is welcoming "Here Comes the Boom," starring Kevin James, Salma Hayek and Henry Winkler.

In the film, Kevin James stars as a high school biology teacher who moonlights as a mixed-martial arts fighter in an effort to raise money to save the school's music program. The film will be released in theaters nationwide July 27, 2012.

Taking a page from the film's premise, Quincy Mayor Tom Koch has decided to use the money from the rental of the old high school to fund the new high school music program.

"All film productions visiting Quincy make a real difference to our community, but in the case of 'Here Comes the Boom,' those benefits are tangible," said the mayor.

"When we heard about the premise of the movie, we thought it was a natural to use the money to fund the high school music program. It's a win-win – the production gets the perfect location for their movie, and our students get the music program that they deserve," Koch added.

Quincy Film Bureau Commissioner Mark Carey said, "We can track just about every dollar that comes into our community through these productions. 'Here Comes the Boom' and all of the people affiliated with the production have been very good to the city by utilizing as many resources as they can while they're here. We set up a Quincy casting call and the production has cast Quincy and North Quincy High School students as band members," Carey said.

"We're working to make Quincy a friendly home to film productions, and it is paying dividends to our local economy," he added.

Determined to pay off your mortgage as quickly as possible?
This loan is for you!

There are so many good reasons to love the 15-Year Mortgage. For some people, it's about being debt-free. Others want the mortgage paid off by the time the kids go to college or before they retire. Some see paying off their mortgage quickly as a kind of "forced" savings. Here's the simple fact: If you can swing the somewhat-higher monthly payments, a 15-Year Mortgage knocks years off your original loan. Your equity builds very quickly. And you pay thousands less in interest, compared to a longer-term mortgage loan. Rates are still at historic lows. How much longer? Who knows. If a 15-Year sounds good to you, let's talk. Soon! Come see us or call Angela Blanchard or Richard Coleman at 617-471-0750. Or apply at colonialfed.com - click the Loans tab. (Also available for debt consolidation and for new home purchases.)

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On April 17, 1790, American statesman, printer, scientist and writer Benjamin Franklin dies in Philadelphia at age 84. Deeply interested in science and technology, his inventions include the Franklin stove, bifocal eyeglasses and the lightning rod.

• On April 11, 1814, Napoleon Bonaparte, emperor of France, abdicates the throne and, in the Treaty of Fontainebleau, is banished to the Mediterranean island of Elba. He died at age 52 on May 5, 1821, possibly from stomach cancer, although some theories contend he was poisoned.

• On April 12, 1908, a fire in Chelsea, Mass., at the Boston Blacking Company leaves 12 dead, 85 missing and presumed dead and more than 17,000 homeless. Due to high winds, a good portion of the city burned. It took nearly 10 years for Chelsea to be completely rebuilt.

• On April 16, 1943, in Basel, Switzerland, Albert Hoffman, a Swiss chemist, accidentally consumes LSD-25, a synthetic drug he had created in 1938 as part of his research into the medicinal value of lysergic acid compounds. Widespread use of the so-called mind-expanding drug did not begin until the 1960s.

• On April 15, 1959, new Cuban leader Fidel Castro visits the United States. The trip got off to an inauspicious start when it became clear that President Dwight D. Eisenhower had no intention of meeting with Castro. Instead, Eisenhower went to the golf course to avoid any chance meeting.

• On April 13, 1964, Sydney Poitier becomes the first African American to win the Academy Award for Best Actor, for his role as a construction worker in "Lilies of the Field" (1963). He debuted on Broadway in 1946 in an all-black production of "Lysistrata," and by 1950 he was appearing in Hollywood films, beginning with "No Way Out."

• On April 14, 1975, the American airlift of Vietnamese orphans to the United States ends after 2,600 children are transported to America. Operation Baby Lift lasted 10 days and was carried out during the final, desperate phase of the war, as North Vietnamese forces were closing in on Saigon.

Gillis Eyes Sixth County Commission Term

It's a little too early for a final decision but it appears John Gillis will seek a sixth four-year term as Norfolk County commissioner next year.

Gillis, a Democrat, was elected a county commissioner in 1992 at the age of 67 after serving 33 years as Quincy city clerk. The lifelong Quincy resident has been re-elected four times: in 1996, 2000, 2004 and 2008. He's served 18 years as county commissioner and is at the midpoint of his fifth term.

GILLIS

Gillis – who will celebrate his 86th birthday May 16th – says he still enjoys public service. His career began in 1952 when he became a state auditor. Four years later, Gillis left his state post and became assistant city clerk. He served two years as an assistant before being elected city clerk by the city council in 1959.

Over the next 33 years, Gillis became a City Hall fixture as city clerk while serving citizens from all walks of life with fairness and respect. His good friend, the late Henry Bosworth, once wrote, "As city clerk, John bent over backwards to accommodate the public. And wearing his other hat as chairman of the License Board, he was a champion of the little guy – especially someone who needed a license to start a small business."

Today, Gillis remains one of the city's most respected public officials who still enjoys serving the people as a county commissioner.

"I am leaning towards running again. As long as I feel good, I'm going to run," he says.

Asked why he enjoys public service, he replies, "I enjoy meeting people and helping people."

Norfolk County commissioners serve as the executive authority of the county government. They set policy and budget and make other decisions that are carried out by the county director. Each commissioner earns about $30,000 a year.

Gillis has been an ardent advocate of the Norfolk County Agricultural School in Walpole. Admission to the "Aggie" has become very competitive, he says, noting some 1,800 students apply for only 100 seats.

He's also a big supporter of the county-run Presidents Golf Course located in Quincy. "The golf course is doing well. It's a money-maker," he says.

Gillis has become as popular as a Norfolk County commissioner as he was during his 33-year tenure as Quincy city clerk.

In 1992, when he was first elected a commissioner, he topped the six-candidate field in the final election.

That year, there were two openings on the commission. Mary Collins, who also served on the Quincy School Committee, did not seek re-election. Neither did James Collins of Milton. (There are three commissioners in all; the other seat is elected on a staggered term.)

After securing one of two ballot spots in the Democratic primary, Gillis finished first in the final election with 121,095 votes. Also elected was William O'Donnell of Norwood who came in second with 103,353 votes. Their nearest competitor was Republican Robert Frazier of Canton who polled 88,054 votes.

(O'Donnell finished ahead of Gillis in the Democratic primary by 3,540 votes. Not nominated were Peter Collins of Milton and John Youngclaus of Weymouth).

In both the primary and final elections, Gillis amassed big pluralities in Quincy enroute to victory. In the Democratic primary, Gillis polled 13,955 votes – 10,332 ahead of Peter Collins who finished second in Quincy with 3,623 votes.

In the '92 final election, Gillis collected 27,753 votes in Quincy – 18,135 ahead of O'Donnell who polled 9,618 votes here.

Gillis has been re-elected four times by comfortable margins or without opposition. In 1996, Gillis and O'Donnell were not opposed in the Democratic primary or final election. Gillis outpolled O'Donnell on both ballots: 20,481 to 14,825 in the Democratic primary and 158,381 to 144,918 in the final respectively.

In the 2008 race, Gillis topped the Democratic primary with 26,414 votes. Francis O'Brien, another elected commissioner also on the ballot, received 25,609 votes.

In the final, Gillis and O'Brien turned aside two challengers defeating Republican Tom Gorman of Dedham and Independent Michael Walsh of Westwood. Gillis was the highest vote getter with 144,130. (O'Brien received 132,074 votes to also win re-election.)

Gillis, some political observers maintain, could have been elected mayor back in the 1970s when he gave a mayoral run some serious thought. But, in the end, he wanted to remain the city clerk, a job he calls "the best I've ever had."

Does he miss his City Hall days?

"Oh sure. I enjoyed it," Gillis says. "You're always helping someone out. The poor treasurer: everybody hates the treasurer but the clerk he's always saying 'Yes, I can help you.'"

He commended his successor, Joseph Shea, who's also cut from the same "help the little guy" cloth.

SHEA

"Joe Shea is a good guy and he's as honest as the day is long," Gillis said.

"In the city clerk's job, you gotta be fair to people. They say I'm a big Democrat. But I gave the Republicans the same fair treatment as the Democrats. If you're fair to people it pays off in the long run. I think Joe is the same way, too."

Gillis has had a front row seat to many changes – and challenges – in city government over the years. He served during the administrations of seven mayors: Amelio Della Chiesa, James McIntyre, Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin, Francis McCauley and James Sheets.

During his tenure as clerk, Gillis advocated for punch-card ballots to replace the old paper ballots. The city finally switched to punch-cards during the administration of Frank McCauley who along with Gillis agreed retiring the paper ballots would save the city money and pay for themselves. (The city now uses opti-scan technology at the polls.)

"Frank was a smart mayor who put good people around him. He ran a good administration," Gillis says.

Gillis also had high praise for McIntyre whom he called the "smartest man I ever met."

It was McIntyre – a city councillor at-large at the time – who persuaded Gillis to leave his auditor's post to become assistant city clerk. Initially, Gillis declined but after giving it some more thought, he took the lower-paying job in 1957 serving under City Clerk Allen Cole.

Then, a year and a half later, Mr. Cole died unexpectedly. Gillis was soon voted his replacement by a unanimous vote by the City Council in the fall of 1959. He became the first Democrat to hold the post – and at the age of 34, he was also one of the youngest.

It's been John Gillis the public servant ever since.

PAUL BREGOLI, retired Quincy Public School elementary guidance counselor and present head girls' soccer coach at North Quincy High School, says he will run for a seat on the Quincy School Committee this fall.

BREGOLI

Bregoli, who is also a former school teacher and has been active in various civic organizations and in many youth sports coaching capacities, has taken out campaign organizational papers to set up his election committee. (The organizational statement must be filed before candidates can raise and spend campaign money.)

Nomination papers will be released by the Quincy Board of Registrars on Tuesday, May 3. (Those papers are for potential candidates to gather the required number of signatures in order to appear on the ballot this fall.)

Bregoli says he will officially announce his candidacy later this spring.

Quincy voters will elect a mayor, nine city councillors and three school committee members this fall.

Election dates are Tuesday, Sept. 20 (preliminary) and Tuesday, Nov. 8 (final).

Scenes From Yesterday

OFFICE OF FORE RIVER SHIP YARDS, QUINCY, MASS.

THIS IS A1917 postcard view of East Howard Street in Quincy Point looking south. The end of Winter Street is just out of view on the right. The long, low building on the left was the Howard Street entrance to the Fore River Shipyard, which had begun operation here in 1900. The Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation purchased the yard in 1913 and at the time of this photo it was conducting a major expansion, which included the large office building in the center of this view. One office in that new building was for the newly hired Assistant General Manager of the shipyard, Joseph P. Kennedy, who was the father of President John F. Kennedy. The U.S. had just entered World War I, and awarded several large contracts for a variety of different ships to be built by the company. The expansion enabled them to handle much of the work here at the Fore River yard, but they also opened a separate shipbuilding plant in Squantum, known as "The Victory Plant" where they built 35 destroyers. Between the two yards, 71 destroyers were built in a little over two years. The war ended in November 1918 and the Squantum plant closed a year later. Kennedy left the shipyard about the same time. The Fore River yard closed 25 years ago in 1986. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

$17 Million Building For North Quincy

By FRANK McCAULEY

City officials have completed negotiations for a $17 million ten-story office building in the city's North Quincy "gateway," according to Mayor Arthur H. Tobin.

The building will be located on the east side of Hancock Street, near the intersection of Hancock Street and Newport Avenue, including the present site of Menard Chevrolet according to Judy Cullen of the Planning Department.

This Week
1981
30 Years Ago

Negotiations were completed with a group of five developers, the most promising being Michael Harrington of Beverly, a former United States Congressman. The group is operating under the name of Gateway Quincy Realty Trust.

"If construction starts in the next several months, this will be the eighth office building under construction and about the 12th brought into the city by my administration," Tobin said.

FIRST WOMAN TO HEAD QUINCY POST OFFICE

Quincy's Post Office has its first female manager with the appointment of Mrs. Martha Brady Cannon of Squantum.

Mrs. Cannon manages 175 employees and is responsible for the delivery of over one million pieces of mail each week. She will also be instituting a "Model Office" in Quincy for instructional leadership for other post office managers.

"My first priority will be to insure mail delivery," said Cannon. "But at the same time I'll encourage employee participation in the mail system."

REACTION TO REAGAN SHOOTING: SHOCK, PRAYER, CONCERN

Quincy responded to the shooting of President Reagan with prayer, concern and indignation. At an Ecumenical Expression of Concern and Prayer Service, held at the First Parish Church, residents, clergy and elected officials gathered to voice the support and best wishes to the wounded president and the men felled with him.

Supports Tougher Ordinance Addressing Unruly Homes

I have followed closely the debate by the City Council about a proposal by my Ward Councillor, Brian Palmucci, to toughen the ordinance which would allow the Police Chief to place a police detail in front of an unruly home – and force the unruly home's owner to pay for it.

I applaud this effort and thank Mr. Palmucci for his work.

As a resident of the Brewer's Corner area I know that something different needs to be done. Why should residents have to endure living next to properties where drug dealers and thugs run amuck?

It took years for Police, who I know were working as hard as they could with the tools they had, to finally put an end to the drug dealing, partying, and general lawlessness of my neighbor across the street. The absentee landlord of that property did nothing when the tenant was arrested for selling drugs from his apartment or when he used pitbulls to guard his "business."

I for one have had enough, and am pleased to see that Councillor Palmucci, and hopefully the rest of the City Council, will stand up for the residents, like me, who simply want to enjoy their home and neighborhood without fear. I don't think a drug dealer will stay in business long if a police car is sitting in front of their home all night. And I, and the taxpayers of Quincy, shouldn't have to pay for that expense – the landlord who sits back and collects his check while doing nothing to stop the criminals should pay.

Questions Still Surround Youngster's Death

Days of wine and roses.

Ms. Zhang did not want to kill her son or herself, it was an accident.

If DA Michael Morrissey can meet the criteria to prosecute for pre-meditated murder/suicide, pounce on it. If he recognizes indicators suggesting it was an accident, he needs to concede promptly, and recognize involuntary manslaughter. His reputation is on trial too.

It is conceivable there is a reason for 'positioning' a bureau and locking the door to the bedroom with an activated Wok. Negligent, but not criminal.

The results from the toxicologist are inhalation of carbon monoxide (true) and 'excessive' over-the-counter hay fever medicine (so highly speculative that it mocks intelligence). The implication is hayfever medicine is a lethal contributory factor in conjunction. More like the mother's welfare for her child.

Morrissey has to prove not only did the mother of this child want him dead, he must demonstrate why the mother didn't use something more potent, like extra strength aspirin for example. Hay fever medicine???

He will also have to reveal if Ms. Zhang had possession of any prescribed medicine, why she didn't use it? She wanted him dead, right?

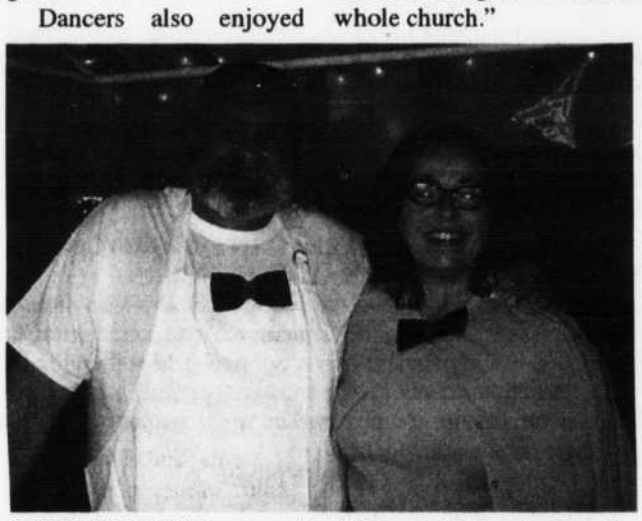
Rock-N-Roll Reunion Raises $2,200 For Point Church Elevator Fund

Sounds of the oldies and a sparkling pink hue illuminated the neighborhood surrounding Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St., Quincy, as the church hosted a recent "Remember When Rock-n-Roll Reunion."

People in poodle skirts, bobbie socks, varsity sweaters and white tee shirts danced to the live music of the band known as "Caddy and the Devilles." Band members include Adam McGhee, Ryan McGhee, Bulent Gunerlap, John Robie and Deanna Van Schagen.

Dancers also enjoyed tunes spun by D.J. Turn-Ta-Bill (Bill Hedvig).



Attendees dined on burgers, pizza and milkshakes brought to the tables by the youth of the congregation all dressed up for the era complete with bow ties.

The event was a success, raising about $2,200 for the Elevator Fund. The church is raising money to install an elevator to make the building more accessible to all.

"I am grateful to everyone who participated in sharing their time and talents," said Event Coordinator Joyce Romeri. "This was a rocking time for our whole church."

Interfaith Social Services Walk, Family Fun Day At Pageant Field April 16

Interfaith Social Services will host its 37th Annual South Shore Walk and Family Fun Day Saturday, April 16.

Hundreds of South Shore residents are expected to walk the streets of Quincy to raise awareness for impoverished local families.

The event offers family fun, exercise and an opportunity to help impoverished local families.

Walkers will assemble at Quincy's Pageant Field April 16. Registration begins at 11:30 a.m. The walk begins and ends at the field off of Merrymount Parkway.

"The Walk is much more than an important fundraiser for local families in need," said Interfaith's Executive Director Rick Doane. "This is a community event which raises awareness about poverty here on the South Shore and brings families together."

Walkers will take to the sidewalks in a route that wraps around some of Quincy's neighborhoods and along Wollaston beach. Festivities after the Walk include: hamburgers, hotdogs, ice cream, clowns, a bouncy house, face painting and live entertainment.

Many of the participants come from local youth groups, churches and schools.

"The Walk is a great way for students to get community service hours" said Doane. "It is wonderful that so many local schools now require kids to get out and serve. Those kids come to the Walk to fulfill a school requirement which results in their families spending an afternoon together. That makes all of the preparation worth it."

The South Shore Walk is held every year rain or shine. Those who are interested in participating can download a pledge form online at: www.interfaithsocialservices.org or call 617-773-6203 for more information.

This year's South Shore Walk Gold level sponsors are South Shore Savings Bank and New England Ice Cream. Silver level sponsors include: Eagle Stainless Tube and Fabrication, Manet Community Health Center, and Colonial Federal Savings Bank.

Interfaith Social Services' is a non-profit organization serving the residents of Massachusetts's South Shore, our mission is to strengthen family life and offer assistance to anyone in need.

Programs include:

• The Pantry Shelf, distributing over 400,000 lbs. of food to impoverished local residents every year.

• HomeSafe, providing assistance and homelessness prevention services to families and individuals in emergency situations.

• Harvest Helpers, organizes backyard gardeners and community groups who donate fresh local produce to food pantries.

• New Directions Counseling Center, serves adults, children, couples and families who are dealing with a myriad of life issues. A special program within the center reaches out to clients who cannot afford the help that they so desperately need.

• Quincy Medical Center Interfaith Chaplaincy, delivers counseling to hospital patients and grieving families.

• Bureau Drawer thrift shop, provides the community with an affordable option for clothing and household items. The shop is run entirely by volunteers.

• Career Closet, outfits low income job seekers with free professional attire.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Suzie's Delicious Brownies

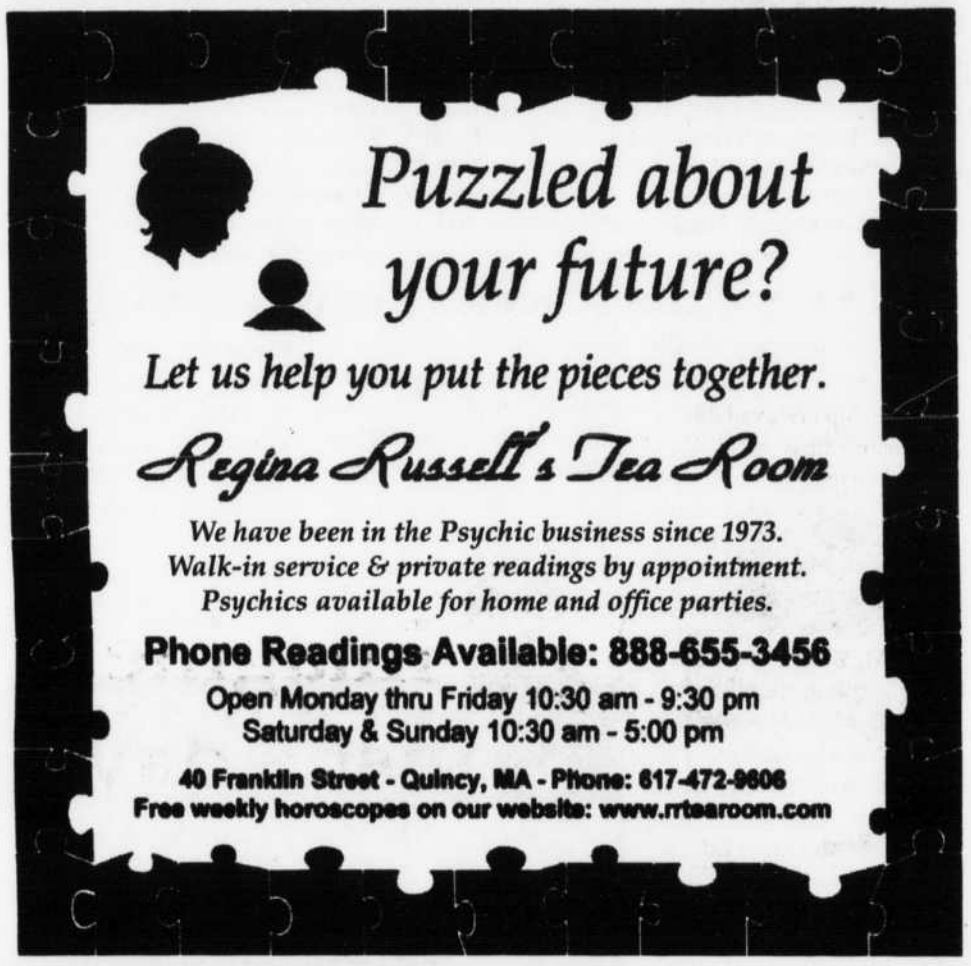
I think almost everyone loves brownies and sometimes feel guilty about eating them.

But today's recipe is a healthy way to enjoy them actually invented by my daughter Suzie, a holistic health coach.

At a birthday celebration for her daughter Carly, (my granddaughter) she made them, and also had a traditional birthday cake (a healthy one, of course).

I must say all of the brownies went way before the cake.

And she quickly wrote down the recipe when I told her I wanted everyone who reads this column to try this delicious dessert.



The black beans, included in this recipe takes the place of flour. And you'd never know it.

SUZIE'S BROWNIES

1 can black beans (rinsed and drained)
3 eggs
1/3 cup unsweetened applesauce
¼ cup unsweetened cocoa powder
½ cup agave
2 teaspoons vanilla
½ teaspoon almond extract
½ teaspoon instant coffee crystals
½ cup chocolate chips (grain, unsweetened) has less sugar

Mix well all the ingredients except the chocolate chips in a blender until smooth. Place in a slightly greased baking pan 9 x 11 inches.

Sprinkle the chocolate chips on the top, and bake in a 350-degree oven for about 15 minutes.

'How I Ended This Summer' Film April 14

The Russian movie "How I Ended This Summer" will be screened Thursday, April 14 at 6:45 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

On a desolate island in the Artic Circle, two men work at a small meteorological station, taking readings from their radioactive surroundings. Sergie, a gruff professional in his 50s, takes his job very seriously. His new partner is brighted college grad Pavel.

One day, inexperienced Pavel receives terrible news for Sergei from HQ. Intimated, Pavel can't bring himself to disclose the information. When the truth is finally revealed, the consequences explode against a chilling backdrop of thick fog, sharp rocks, and the merciless Artic Sea.

The 130-minute film is in Russian with English subtitles.

Although not subject to rating by the Motion Picture Association of America, the film is not recommended for ages under 17 wihtout parental permission.

The slide show is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Pieces Of Quincy's Granite Past To Be Part Of Quarry Museum

Slabs Saved After Bradford Building Razed

Pieces of Quincy's illustrious granite history will be permanently on display at the Quincy Quarry Museum after the razing of a Quincy Center building.

The Bradford Building, located at the corner of Chestnut and Maple Street, was razed in March by the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company who owned the building. With the announcement of the razing of the building, a member of the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum discovered that a section of the façade was extra dark polished Quincy granite.

Upon the discovery by museum member Tom Bonomi of the granite slabs, the museum contacted Steven Briggs, Vice President of Quincy Mutual to see if the granite could be acquired. Quincy Mutual was very supportive of the museum's effort to acquire the two 8 foot by 4 foot granite slabs and relocate them to the proposed site of the museum at the historic Lyons Turning Mill on Quarry Hills Drive in West Quincy.

The workers who built the building in 1919 would have used readily available Quincy granite for a portion of the façade of the building. The portion of the building that the granite was located was the home to Quincy Typewriter Service.

"We're really lucky to get it up at our site," said Al Bina of the Quincy Quarry Museum. "They were more than willing to donate them to us. It's great to have a company like that in the city who wants to preserve some of Quincy's history."

The granite slab along with other granite artifacts can now be seen at the mill site. Quincy is very fortunate to have companies such as Quincy Mutual and individuals who recognized the value of saving part of Quincy's rich history, Bina added.

Visit the museum web site to view additional information and photos: www.quincyquarrymuseum.org/future-home.html

Commercial Landscaping No Longer Accepted At DPW

Public Works Commissioner Larry Prendeville announces the DPW will no longer accept yardwaste from commercial landscapers at the DPW yard at 55 Sea St.

The new policy is now in effect.

Trucks bearing commercial plates will not be allowed in the yard and all residents must prove residency.

"The yard supervisor will be watching very closely for vendor scofflaws or 'repeat residents' dumping inordinate amounts of yardwaste," said DPW manager John Sullivan.

In addition, yardwaste will no longer be accepted from non-profit organizations and unused dump tickets will not be honored.

Due to increases in compost operations and budgetary cuts the City can no longer afford to offer the service to professional landscapers.

The decision was also exacerbated by a regional drop in demand for compost products and a reduction in available space to accept material.

The change in policy was mailed to all local commercial landscapers when the decision was made official in December, 2010.

"I was really hesitant to do this to our local small business owners who are trying to make a living offering these services, but my hands are tied," Prendeville said.

"The small fee we charged landscapers doesn't come close to covering a fraction of the cost of managing and producing a saleable product. Add to that, the fact that the market is down for compost material and I have no room to put it."

For many years the Quincy DPW was the cheapest, and for many companies, the only alternative for local professional landscapers.

Prendeville suggests that there are other area businesses willing to take the material for a reasonable fee.

South Suburban Oncology Center helps you spend less time fighting cancer and more time living.

South Suburban Oncology Center in Quincy offers pioneering treatment for early stage breast cancer patients. Electronic Brachytherapy is a new alternative in partial breast irradiation, through advanced technology that is breaking barriers in breast cancer treatment. SSOC is proud to be one of the first - and few - centers in the country to offer this to our patients.

- FDA-approved treatment for early stage breast cancer
- Eligible patients are treated for 5 days, twice a day
- Less radiation exposure to the heart and lungs versus MammoSite
- Clinicians can be at patient's side during treatment
- High levels of patient satisfaction

For more information, including eligibility, contact SSOC today.

This treatment may not be appropriate for all early stage breast cancers. A specific criteria will determine if a woman is eligible to participate with this treatment option.

Quincy Awarded $2.8M For Homeless Assistance

The Quincy/Weymouth Continuum of Care has been awarded $2,852,932 in homeless assistance funding under the 2010 McKinney-Vento Program, administered by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), announce Mayor Thomas P. Koch and Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington.

The grant's earmarks:

• $1,228,468 will be allocated among six renewal "Supportive Housing" projects, which will be used to provide housing with supportive services over the next year for 129 households, consisting of 130 adults and 48 children.

• $1,624,464 will be allocated to three renewal projects under the "Shelter Plus Care" program, which is a rental assistance program. These projects will provide housing vouchers over the next year for 108 households, comprised of 163 adults and 49 children.

• $69,547 in renewal funding has also been awarded to enable local housing providers to continue participating in a program called the Homeless Management Information System (HMIS), which provides homeless assistance data to HUD. HMIS also allows the local Continuum of Care to track homeless individuals and forecast trends in homelessness.

"Through this grant, we will be able to keep over 240 adults and almost 100 children in safe, decent housing," Koch said.

"Most, if not all of these individuals would otherwise end up on the street or in emergency shelter. I wish to thank Dennis E. Harrington, Planning Director, Nancy A. Callanan, Community Development Director, Planners Sean Glennon and Stephen Connelly, and our housing partners in the community for their continued efforts in addressing the issues of housing and homelessness head on."

Census Reflects City's Changing Diversity

by the number 10,000."

With those figures, the city is basically full, according to Shea who said, "It's built-out 100 percent."

While several councillors noted a few open lots here and there, most agreed with Shea that any new growth will occur only in Quincy Center.

On the local level, there will be some minor changes, according to Shea, who believes that a few precincts boundaries will be moved to accommodate the census numbers.

Shea told councillors he was still waiting for the census detail that will provide the census blocks needed to begin calculating balanced precincts.

"We'll bring a package back that I hope everyone can live with," said Shea, acknowledging the difficulty of bumping the fringe streets or border streets into different precincts and different voting venues.

Shea cited one particular example that requires that residents of one or two streets behind the CVS on Quincy Shore Drive to vote in Squantum.

"This might be the time to talk about fewer precincts," said Shea, citing the cost of computers and voting apparatus at each of the city's 30 precincts.

According to Shea, the next data on the federal census should include such information as income, and household figures.

As for re-precincting, Shea said he hopes to submit a plan to City Council by June and the mayor shortly thereafter with the finalization by the Fourth of July. The federal deadline is Aug. 10.

What follows is breakdown of data from 2010 federal census: White, 62,098 or 67.30%; Black, 4,248 or 4.6%; American Indian, Eskimo, 177 or 19%; Asian, 22,174 or 24.04%; Hispanic/Latino, 1,609 or 1.74%; Pacific islander 22 or .03% and other listings 1,943 or 2.10%.

Property Owners Face Charges For Illegal Activity

once because of the cost of the details to the police budget.

Not only is the majority of the council on board, but Mayor Thomas Koch said Tuesday that he will sign the legislation as soon as it comes to his desk.

"Councillor Palmucci's legislation sends a strong statement that this city will not tolerate absentee landlords who allow their tenants to become constant problems for our police and in our neighborhoods," said Koch in an official statement.

Several councillors described incidents in their wards that could justify police details charged to the property owners if the property owners do not address the issues.

Palmucci described one property where police were called dozens of times while Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest described a new resident who left needles on the street and was the subject of 25 police calls before the individual was finally forced to move.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3, said an empty lot in his ward had become a haven for drinking and drugs. Since the property owner ignores the problems, he could be paying for a private detail assigned by the police chief.

"I know how hard it is to get these unresponsive property owners to act," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, describing "unresponsive, unreliable and recalcitrant" property owners as "the ones we need to target."

While the councillors agreed that Palmucci's proposal was on the right track, reaching an agreement on the details wasn't that easy.

During a contentious three-hour debate, councillors offered eight amendments and substitutions. Those votes ranged from 6-3 to unanimous approval.

At one point, Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee challenged one of Coughlin's rulings and Assistant City Solicitor Janet Petkun was repeatedly asked to clarify or rule on issues.

Petkun said the proposal would have to be withdrawn and re-advertised if substantive changes were made but ruled that no substantive changes were made in the final amendments filed by Councillor John Keenan.

In the final vote, Councillor Joseph Finn and Councillor Daniel Raymondi voted against the proposal which included Raymondi's amendment requiring the appointment of a three-member appeals panel for property owners.

For his part, Finn repeatedly cited the wording related to 'arrestable' offenses, suggesting the word was too vague and, under the circumstances, citations or arrests should be the gauge for action.

In the final draft, owners will be responsible if eight "arrestable" offenses are recorded at a specific unit or property.

"Maybe there should be more citations, more arrests," said Finn who questioned the application of the word 'arrestable."

Finn cited police department figures offered by Petkun who said the police responded to 66,220 calls last year and made 2,202 arrests.

Councillors did agree to an amendment allowing a property owner to appeal to a three-member panel appointed by the mayor, rather than an appeal to the police chief who had ordered the detail.

While councillors may not have reached complete agreement, both Wollaston realtor Alyse Baker Boncaldo and Lt. Daniel Minton said, after the vote, that they were satisfied with the compromise and final wording.

Mother Pleads Innocent In Death Of 8-Year Son

By JOE REARDON

The mother who prosecutors said gave her 8-year-old son a high dose of diphenydramine allergy medication and lit a wok hibachi in an alleged murder-suicide attempt in January pled innocent to a single charge of murder Tuesday at Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham.

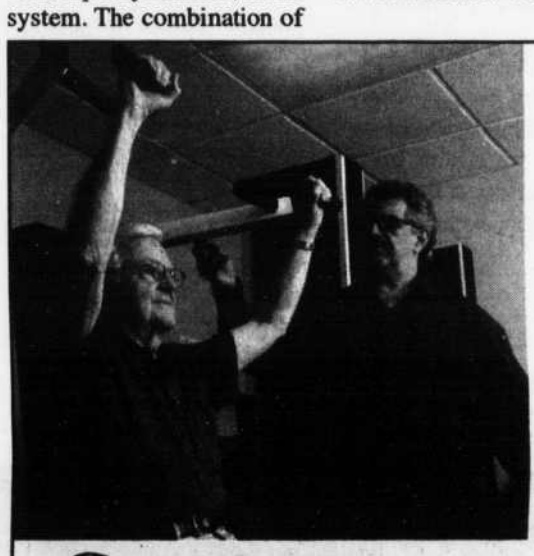
The arraignment marked the first time 39-year-old Li Rong Zhang appeared in Superior Court after being indicted by a Norfolk County grand jury March 23 for the murder of her son Brandon Yang. She is being held without bail at MCI Framingham.

Zhang is due back in court on June 7 for a pretrial conference.

According to the death certificate that was filed with the Quincy City Clerk's office by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts' medical examiner, Yang was found with diphenydramine, in his system. The combination of the drug and carbon dioxide fumes proved deadly. Yang lost consciousness and died on the afternoon of Jan. 13 at his 19 Yardarm Lane in the Germantown.

Zhang pled innocent when she was arraigned on first-degree murder charges at her bedside at Massachusetts General Hospital.

While it is used to treat allergies, diphenydramine also has a powerful "hypnotic effect" and is often used as a non-prescription sleep aid. A search warrant was obtained that night and police determined that the hibachi, which was located in a bedroom with Yang and Zhang, was burning charcoal.



Zhang's 16-year-old son, Dennis Yang, called Quincy Police when he arrived home from school at 3:40 p.m. to find smoke billowing of the bedroom window. The smoke and carbon dioxide detectors outside the room did not go off.

Firefighters weren't able to get to the pair immediately because they were hindered by a large bureau that had been placed in front of the door inside the room. Both individuals were unresponsive when firefighters reached them in the smoke-filled room. Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan said burning charcoal in a wok-type hibachi is commonly used in suicide attempts in China.

Zhang was unconscious, but was revived by CPR. Yang was transported to the Quincy Medical Center where he was pronounced dead. An investigation into the incident determined there were no problems with the heating in the apartment and there was no indication the hibachi grill was being used for heat. Keenan said that it didn't appear anything was being cooked on the grill.

Marty Aikens To Be Honored At Environmental League Gala

Marty Aikens of Quincy will be honored at The Environmental League of Massachusetts's (ELM) 15th annual Earth Night Saturday, April 9 at the Sheraton Boston Hotel.

Approximately 400 environmental, civic, corporate and political leaders are expected to attend.

Aikens will be awarded the Green Jobs Award for his steadfast support of renewable energy facilities in the Commonwealth.

Earth Night, Boston's landmark environmental gala, supports the Environmental League of Massachusetts (ELM) and its efforts to protect the air, water, and land of Massachusetts for the health of its citizens.

MARTY AIKENS

Earth Night features live and silent auctions and the Earth Fair, which showcases products and services of local businesses and nonprofits working to protect the Massachusetts environment. With innovative displays, Earth Fair gives Earth Night guests access to new environmental services and products.

This year's Earth Night will also feature a musical presentation by "Women of the World" an ensemble of Berklee College of Music graduates representing five continents.

"We look forward to celebrating the work ELM has accomplished to protect the Commonwealth and to share that success with so many of our guests and honorees who have played a vital role," said ELM President George Bachrach. "Our work is serious, but this evening is a time to have fun and enjoy each other's company and make new connections."

This year, Earth Night's live and silent auctions feature trips to the Amazon Rainforest in Peru and to Costa Rica, game tickets for the Red Sox, Bruins and Celtics, dinners around town and entertainment packages.

Exciting Things Are Happening at QMC

There are many exciting things happening at Quincy Medical Center this spring. The QMC Emergency Department is about halfway through an extensive renovation project aimed at updating the space and improving the overall patient experience. QMC physicians are conducting ground breaking research to improve patient care in Alzheimer's disease and colon cancer detection, the hospital is expanding services in collaboration with clinical affiliate Tufts Medical Center, and the QMC Center for Healthy Aging is reaching out to more seniors in the community to provide coordinated care both inside and outside the hospital.

QMC is also hosting a number of events this spring. The Green Brush Art Reception takes place Tuesday, April 26, 2011, from 6-9 p.m. in QMC's McCauley Building lobby, 114 Whitwell Street, Quincy. This year the reception will highlight fine Asian cuisine and beverages provided by local restaurants, including China Pearl, Beni Café, Fugi 1546 Bar and Restaurant, Shabu Restaurant, Bistro Chi, Kam Man Foods and many others. The evening will also include a silent auction of Asian art, brush painting and calligraphy demonstration, live musical entertainment and fashions by Drea Designs and Grandasia. Tickets are $88 each, and sponsorship opportunities are available. For information, please call (617) 376-5495.

On May 22 at 2 p.m., the hospital will host a rededication ceremony for its Breast Cancer Memorial Tree. Individuals may purchase bricks engraved with the names of loved ones who have been touched by breast cancer to be added to the memorial. If you would like to purchase a brick, please call 617-376-5495. A minimum donation of $50 is requested. Refreshments will be served in Conference Room A following the ceremony.

Save the date for the 22nd annual QMC Golf Classic at Granite Links Golf Club on Monday, June 13 to benefit QMC perioperative services. Call 617-376-5495 for more information.

THE GREEN BRUSH ART RECEPTION planning committee has a fun-filled evening of food and entertainment in store for all. This event is just one of the many exciting things happening at QMC this spring.

John Gillis Presented Henry Bosworth Citizenship Award

said in presenting the award renamed in memory of his father, Quincy Sun founder Henry Bosworth.

The inscription on the plaque – which features a clock symbolic of Gillis's many years of service – reads:

"The Quincy Sun Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award, presented to John M. Gillis: an esteemed public servant who has served his city, county, state and country with integrity, distinction and honor. A True Friend to All."

Mr. Bosworth and Gillis – who were both raised in Quincy Point and served their country in the Armed Services during World War II – were friends for 70 years. Mr. Bosworth died in 2009.

Accepting the award, Gillis remembered his longtime good friend.

"I'm truly honored to receive this award. Henry Bosworth and I grew up together. We were friends. Henry Bosworth you could depend on day to night. He was such a great guy," Gillis said.

Henry was also a great ball player in junior high school, Gillis recalled. But soon, Henry chose to write about sports rather than play them.

"Henry was a great ball player. He was a first baseman. We had a teacher – Miss Manchester. She told Henry he should be a writer rather than a ball player. Henry agreed with her and he was a sports writer for all those years."

Quincy Point, Gillis said, was the "greatest place" to be brought up.

"We had everything there. We had every nationality in the world. We had Lebanese, Syrians, Irish, Italians and Scotch was a big population because of the shipyard. We had a tremendous Jewish population and they were all great people.

"We had a mosque, a temple, Catholic church and a congregational church. You were what you were: if you were a good kid, you were a good kid. Religion or race didn't have anything to do with it. I'm so proud to have been brought up in Quincy Point. It was the greatest place in the world to be brought up."

Gillis's tribute also featured several companion presentations and lofty praise by friends and colleagues in government. Humbled by the honor, Gillis told his family, friends and admirers:

"I appreciate what happened today. I'm grateful and I'm so happy and I thank God for being a part of this great community. I love it."

A proud family man, Gillis introduced his wife of 59 years, Violet (Johnson), their son, Mark Gillis and daughter Pam DeGennaro as well other family members who beamed with pride during the tribute.

Then, Gillis – a Marine veteran of World War II – asked those gathered to stand and pray for the U.S. troops serving in the Far East.

It was a very special day for a truly special man.

Mayor Tom Koch proclaimed March 27 – the day of the reception – John M. Gillis Day in the City of Quincy.

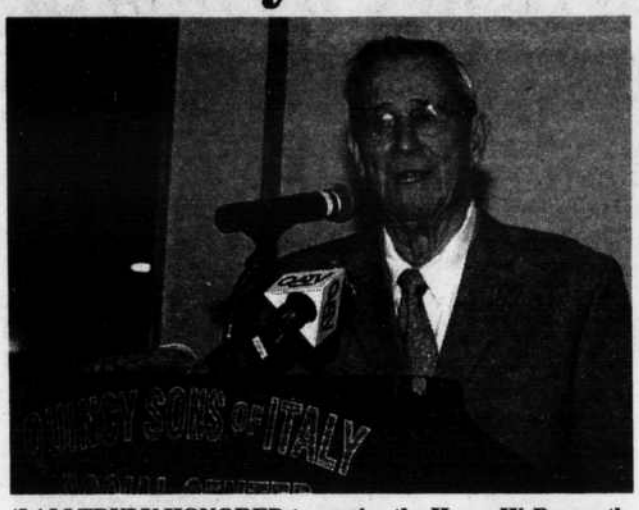
"John is one of those special guys who we're so fortunate here in Quincy to have had over the years and continue to have. As a friend, as a leader, and it's such a special, special day for all of us."

The mayor then quoted one of his favorite hymns: "give thanks with a grateful heart."

"In that song it talks about the weak will become strong, the poor will become rich. (John) You have made Quincy stronger, you have made Quincy richer and you never forgot where you came from. You always looked out for the little guy.

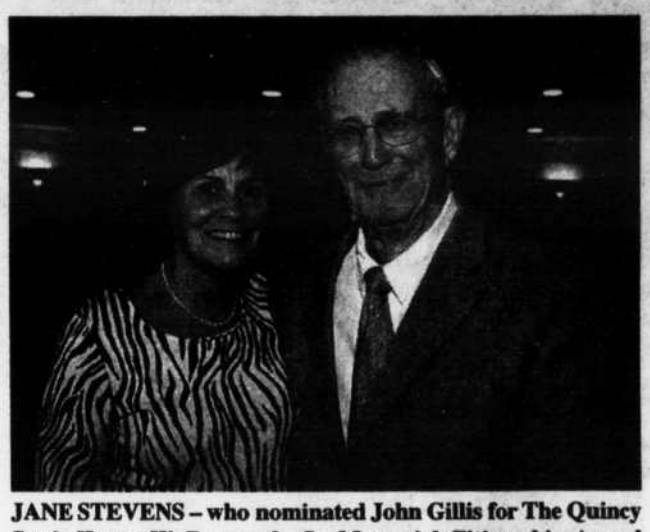
"That's the John Gillis we know and love," the mayor added.

Gillis, who is 85, attended the Adams Elementary School and Quincy Point Junior High School before graduating from Quincy High in 1943. He then enlisted in the Marines and saw action in the Battle of Saipan, a battle in the Pacific campaign of World War II.



After the war in 1947, Gillis became a Quincy firefighter and was stationed at Central Headquarters. But six months later, Gillis enrolled at Northeastern and captained the football team. He graduated in 1953 with a degree in accounting.

He worked as a state auditor from 1952 to 1956 before becoming assistant city clerk in1957. Two years later, Gillis was unanimously elected city clerk by the City Council, succeeding the late Allen Cole.



It was an historic occasion: Gillis became the first Democrat to serve as city clerk in Quincy. At age 34, he was also one of the youngest.

During his 33-year tenure as city clerk – the longest ever – Gillis served during the administrations of seven mayors: Amelio Della Chiesa, James McIntyre, Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin, Francis McCauley and James Sheets.

In 1992 at the age of 67, Gillis stepped down as city clerk but he did not retire from public service. Instead, he began a new chapter winning a four-year term as a Norfolk County commissioner that fall. He has been re-elected four times (1996, 2000, 2004 and 2008) and has served a total of 18 years in that post. He is leaning toward seeking a sixth term next year.

'I AM TRULY HONORED to receive the Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award. He was such a great guy,' Norfolk County Commissioner and former City Clerk John Gillis said in receiving the honor presented by The Quincy Sun in recognition of Gillis's more than 50 years of public service.

An array of other public officials and colleagues in government also paid tribute to Gillis for his dedication, devotion and duty to family, city and county.

Cong. Stephen Lynch presented Gillis with a framed copy of comments he entered in behalf of Gillis's service as a public servant to Quincy, Norfolk County and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts into the Congressional Record of the 112th Congress.

"I did not want to miss this (opportunity) John because you are such a good man," Lynch said before heading to troop deployment ceremony at Boston College the same afternoon.

Cong. William Keating presented Gillis with an American flag that was flown over the Capitol in Washington, D.C.

"This is something that you are richly deserving of for your service to your country and your city. John's been the center of Quincy. You were the heart of the city during your service as Quincy city clerk," Keating said.

Fellow Norfolk County CommissionerFranO'Brien, the commission's chairman, called John a "great guy and a great friend." He presented Gillis with four premium cigars as a token of his admiration.

Michael McFarland, the director of the Norfolk County Agricultural High School and city councillor, gave Gillis a blanket made from wool sheered from Norfolk County "Aggie" sheep.

McFarland praised Gillis – who serves as a school trustee – for helping students and staff alike as well as supporting the school's $30 million building expansion project.

"John really is a guy who is the champion of the little guy," McFarland said. "I don't care if it's a kid from Quincy or Quincy Point who needs a little push to get into the 'Aggie' or one of the staff members who is having a hard time and is down on their luck.

"John is there. All you have to do is mention to John that something's going on or a need needs to be filled and John is there."

As for the school project, McFarland added, "If it wasn't for the push of John and the rest of the trustees, this project never would have happened."

Quincy's State House delegation – Sen. John Keenan, House Majority Leader Ron Mariano and Reps. Bruce Ayers and Tackey Chan – presented a State House resolution to Gillis commending his many, many years of service to the community.

Ayers noted Gillis's hallmark of fairness as the chairman of the City License Board during his tenure as Quincy city clerk.

"I can recall the first time I met John Gillis," Ayers said. "I was just a teen-ager and my older brother Chuck who was a graduate of the Quincy Vo-Tech was applying for a license to start a two-bay auto garage in Montclair. The day comes to go before the License Board and they're deliberating whether or not to give him the license.

"It came down to a tie – two to two. Someone needed to make the swing vote. Low and behold, John Gillis piped up and said, "here's a kid who went through the Quincy School system, wants to start a business in Quincy. . . I say let's give him a license.

"Thirty years later he still has that business, John, and he's done very well. I think of the impact of that License Board decision made and your fairness in judgment. If you deserve a break, you got a break. If you didn't, you didn't," Ayers added.

Other public officials echoed those remarks.

"No matter where you were, what you were doing, what you needed, John Gillis treated you fairly and treated you with respect," Keenan said. "It's something I've never forgotten and it's something I try to remember every day in government."

"There's nobody better who deserves this award," Chan said. "He's the man of the year but he's also the man of Quincy."

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti thanked Gillis and the other commissioners for supporting an array of innovative programs that Bellotti has introduced during his tenure as sheriff. Those initiatives moved forward because of verbal agreements instead of being tied up in bureaucratic red tape.

"We've had an amazing, old-school type of relationship," Bellotti said. "Because of that lack of red tape, because of that trust, because of those friendships we were able to just grow together and we never had a problem. We were on other sides of issues, but we were always honest and it was very rare that we were.

"Without you and your colleagues, John, I would not have been able to do those outside programs," the sheriff added.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin presented a commendation on behalf of his council colleagues. He also praised John's wife and loving companion, Violet.

"I think every one of us who is an elected official would acknowledge that we couldn't do anything that we do without our companions and our spouses who stand beside us and stand with us. I think we should say a great thanks to Violet," Coughlin said as applause erupted.

Coughlin said he admires Gillis for being a "man who extends his hand of friendship to everyone who engages him.

"John's public life has truly been a reflection of his private life as evidenced by more than 50 years of public service. He's not just man of the year, I think this man is the man of the century.

"He's been guided by some pretty simple principles: kindness, respect, grace and a sincere desire to provide aid and assistance to whether it's a single individual that was in need of his help or advancing the betterment of the greater community.

"His willingness to help the little guy is legendary."

Coughlin then added, "John you have lived up to the true etymology of your name: a gift from God because you have been and continue to be a gift to your friends, to your family, to all who know you. You are a gift to the city of Quincy.

"We can do no better thing today than to remember that the highest appreciation is not to utter words but to live by them. If we simply live by the example that you have set, John, we will be doing well indeed."

Gillis becomes the 27th individual honored with The Quincy Sun/Henry Bosworth Memorial Citizenship Award since the honor's inception in 1985.

Nominations for the 2011 award will open in the fall.

MANY GOOD FRIENDS and colleagues in government were on hand to help honor former Quincy city clerk and current Norfolk County commissioner John M. Gillis who received the Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award. Among those attending the reception were (from left), Joseph Donovan, former associate commissioner of Massachusetts Public Works; his wife, Dolly Donovan; and Norfolk County Commissioner Fran O'Brien.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, March 26, at approximately 11:30 a.m., Detectives Duran and Ryan set up surveillance in Squantum, in unmarked cruisers after learning from a concerned citizen that drugs were being sold from a specific residence. Based on this information, detectives confirmed that the suspect (#1) had been named in the past by other citizens for possible drug sales.

LT. DAN MINTON

At approximately 12:15 p.m., the detectives observed a male exit his Squantum residence and drive off in his vehicle. The suspect drove behind the Squantum Elementary School and parked in the school lot. The suspect exited his motor vehicle and walked towards the Squantum Community Center, then stopped and approached the opened passenger side window of another vehicle that had just turned from Huckins Avenue onto Standish Road and stopped at suspect #1's location.

Suspect #1 reached inside the vehicle and appeared to make an exchange with the driver/suspect #2. After removing his hands from the vehicle, suspect #1 immediately put his right hand into his right pocket as if he was placing an item in his pocket. At that time, based on training and experience, the Detectives believed that a street level narcotics transaction just occurred, but chose to continue surveillance of the residence.

At approximately 12:40 P.M, the Detectives observed suspect #1 again leave his home and walk up to Huckins Avenue. Soon after, another vehicle pulled up and stopped where suspect #1 was. After a brief conversation, suspect #1 reached inside the vehicle and another exchange occurred with the driver, suspect #3.

After the exchange, suspect #3 drove away while suspect #1 quickly walked back towards his residence and appeared to run as he reached the front of his home. While walking, suspect #1 appeared to scan the area as if he was looking for a Police presence. At that time, the detectives believed that a drug transaction had occurred, the second one with suspect #1 involved in within 30 minutes.

The Detectives, with the assistance of Officer Jamie Karvelis, stopped suspect #3 on Quincy Shore Drive. Detectives' Ryan and Duran exited their vehicles and approached the suspect's vehicle. Detective Ryan instructed suspect #3 to exit the vehicle while Detective Duran approached the passenger side of the vehicle and made contact with the passenger, suspect #4.

Both suspects were removed from the vehicle to prevent evidence destruction and then separated for questioning. Suspect #4 was given his Miranda rights and after consenting to questioning, Detective Duran told the suspect that he wanted the narcotics. Suspect #4 said, "OK", and handed over five blue tablets wrapped in a plastic cigarette wrapper. This was Oxycodone (30mg) tablets. Suspect #4 stated that he did not have a prescription but takes them because he is "disabled and in pain". Suspect #3 was given his Miranda rights and then said that he just met a "friend."

Detective Ryan observed a large bulge in the front shirt pocket of suspect #3 and observed a glassine baggie. Detective Ryan retrieved the baggie, which contained 84 Oxycodone (30mg) tablets and $800 cash. Detective Ryan determined that suspect #3 and #4 did not have a prescription and placed them under arrest. The suspect then said that he had just purchased the Oxycodone from suspect #1.

Officer Karvelis and Detective Ryan then conducted a further search of suspect #3's vehicle and located a paper bag on the passenger side floor containing $2000 cash. The cash was wrapped in separate folds, with each fold consisting of $500. An additional $1117 in cash was located on suspect #3.

Detective Ryan located a false WD 40 can with glassine baggies inside containing 500 Oxycodone (30mg) tablets. Detective Ryan also found 17 Suboxone tablets in the vehicle. Back at the station, Detective Keenan joined Detective Duran in questioning the two suspects. Suspect #3 said that suspect #4 is his brother-in-law and that he was "only taking a ride today."

At approximately 2:15 P.M, Detectives Keenan and Duran went to the residence and spoke with suspect #1. The suspect turned over 120 Oxycodone (30mg) tablets along with $120 cash to Detective Keenan. Suspect #1 stated that he currently is prescribed Oxycodone (30mg) tablets and recently refilled his prescription, taking 4 tablets per day. Suspect #1 did not have his Oxycodone (30mg) tablets in his prescription bottle; they were in a prescription bottle with no label. Additionally,

Squeaks and Creaks

Q: The wooden staircase in my house has a couple of stairs that squeak loudly when anyone walks on them. They feel pretty solid. Is there a way to stop the noise? – Jim in Toledo, Ohio

A: As your house and its components age and settle, it's not unusual for a few squeaks and creaks to be heard in the floorboards or on the stairs, among other things. Of course, that doesn't mean you have to put up with them.

Squeaks in stairs are caused by the tread (the part that your foot steps on) rubbing against one of the risers (the vertical board between each step) or the stringer (the angled, notched board on which the stairs are built). Settling of the house, or expansion and contraction of the wood due to temperature and humidity fluctuations -- all of which are normal -- can cause a tiny misalignment of the stair's treads and risers, noticeable when pressure is placed on the misaligned board (e.g., you step on it).

Correcting the squeak is not too difficult, especially if you can access the underside of the stairs.

You'll need a hammer and small finishing nails, wood glue and several thin wooden shims or wedges (available at home-improvement stores). You also might need a drill and wood filler.

Have a helper walk up and down the stairs while you pinpoint the problem areas from underneath. After marking the squeaky stairs, spread a little wood glue on the top of a shim or wedge. Gently hammer the wedge into the space where the stair tread and the supporting riser meet. Add more wedges, equally spaced, if necessary to even it out. Also, place a wedge between the riser and the stringer, and between the tread and the stringer. Have your helper test the tread from above. If the finishing nails are short enough that they won't poke through the top of the tread or riser, carefully nail the shims into place.

What if you can't access the underside of the stairs? From the top side, locate the squeaky stairs and try to pinpoint exactly where the squeak is occurring. If the squeak is near the back of the tread, drill a pilot hole at an angle through the back of the stair tread toward the riser, then carefully hammer a finishing nail into the pilot hole all the way into the riser. Countersink the nail and fill the hole with wood filler that's the same color as the tread. Move to the side of the tread and repeat, drilling a pilot hole toward the stringer beneath the tread and hammering a finishing nail through.

HOME TIP: Got a squeaky floorboard? For a temporary fix, squeeze a bit of graphite powder between the joints underneath the floor to lubricate the space.

Raiders Struggled This Season Record-Wise But The Team Returns Nine Underclassmen

NQ Seniors Are Leaving Basketball Program In Good Standing

By SEAN BRENNAN

Some of the benefits of playing a sport while in high school include the bonds developed amongst teammates, which in turn opens the door for lifelong friendships. As a student-athlete young men and women are also given the opportunity to create legacies that last forever.

For four North Quincy High School basketball players, their final go-around on the parquet presented each of them with these opportunities. And Montana McBirney, Karla Fernandes, Emily Gray and Kelsey Powers did just that, settling into their roles as team leaders with each of them - knowing last winter would be the final time they donned a Red Raider jersey - making sure to take full advantage of the time left while at the same time making sure that they left the program they played for in better standing than when they started.

North Quincy did not have its best year –record-wise- this winter, but high school athletics is not always about wins and losses. What it is always about is giving 100% and making sure, especially if you are a senior, that they way you practice, the way you prepare and perform, both on the court and in the classroom, is done in a manner that makes underclassmen fall into formation.

McBirney, Fernandes, Gray and Powers were successful in this respect; as a result, North Quincy basketball should continue to improve next year and beyond.

"We all absolutely loved each other," said McBirney a team captain this season and a four-year varsity player. "We were one of the closet teams that I had ever been on in terms of sports. I think I'll have friendships that I will probably have for the rest of my life. I improved a lot. High school (basketball) made me love basketball and that is a positive that I am going to take away from my experience."

McBirney, who is deciding between Syracuse University, Villanova University and UMass-Amherst as her next leg of higher education, made sure that herself and the three other seniors kept things positive during a season that was lacking in the win department.

"It was always a new slate after a loss," she continued. "Everyone was always there to pick each other up. If one game a girl didn't have a great game or play as much as they wanted we made sure they would get support from everyone on the team; we were like family. We hated to see each other down so we always picked each other up. When we took a loss we took it as a team."

Like McBirney, Powers was also a four-year varsity hoopster for NQHS. As a tri-captain this winter she took her responsibility as a team leader seriously and despite the season's final outcome she made sure that everyone worked hard and everyone was committed to one another. She is planning on attending Northeastern University next fall.

"I had fun (playing basketball)," Powers said. "It helped me overall with time management and it helped me get into a routine. The team bonding is what makes playing basketball so much better. This year we had our pasta parties and the times on the bus on the way to away games were my favorite part because you really got to know the younger girls and form friendships."

"We had to rely on each other and try and keep it positive,' she continued. "We had our low points and we would get bummed out and go home but we would just come back the next day and work to be a better team."

Gray, a tri-captain along with McBirney and Powers, is attending Lyndon State College in Vermont and is the only senior who is planning on playing basketball at the next level, talked of how playing basketball for the Red Raiders helped her get ready for the next step.

Quincy Sun photo/Sean Brennan

"The time commitment was good because it gave me an idea of what it takes to do well in school and play a sport," she said. "It wasn't easy and there is not a lot of time for fooling around. But the friendships are what I enjoyed most because you may never have talked to these girls otherwise if basketball didn't bring everyone together."

"If someone was goofing off (the seniors) wouldn't yell at them," she continued. "We would just encourage them and tell them to knock it off and pay attention. We were close enough as a team that it worked."

The closeness of the team became a saving grace for Fernandes. She transferred to NQHS from Brockton HS during her junior year and found her niche at a new school, a difficult situation for any transfer student, because of the basketball program. Fernandes is planning on attending either Suffolk University or the University of Rhode Island.

"I played two years and I will always remember the friendships because this team was very welcoming to me after I transferred from Brockton," she said. "When I came in I didn't know what to expect but (the girls) were all so friendly. I am always going to keep them in my heart."

"I enjoyed the practices and games," Fernandes continued. "Everyone just really meshed together and that was great."

Despite these four seniors, this year's North Quincy team was on the young side with six juniors and three sophomores. With a younger, less experienced team bumps in the road were expected, but that does not mean that progress wasn't made, and improvement is exactly what McBirney, Fernandes, Gray and Powers expect next winter from the teammates they are leaving behind.

"Our juniors are awesome and they are all motivated girls," stated McBirney. "I think that we made a good impression on them because they realize that next year it will be a younger team again. I feel like they will be like us, very welcoming. There is a team atmosphere and the girls are really into it – people are excited to play."

Powers added, "The fact that we were a younger team affected our record but it also helped with the whole welcoming aspect and it united the team. Look at our jayvee and freshmen teams. They both did really well so North Quincy basketball will be fine in the future."

Varsity players returning next year include juniors Amber Jones, Taylor McKay, Courtney Timmins, Olivia Umoren, Julia Murphy and Erin Renken as well as sophomores Sam McNally, Annie Dow and Caitlin Bulger.

QRD Announces Vacation Week LEGO™ Workshop

The Quincy Recreation Department and Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, announced that the QRD will offer Vacation Week LEGO™ Workshops for boys and girls in Kindergarten through Grade 3 during the upcoming April School Vacation Week.

This workshop will offer children the opportunity to participate with others in the fun-filled, creative world of LEGO™ activities. With the emphasis on fun, children will create and build with the popular LEGO™ toys in both individual and group projects.

The workshops will be scheduled at four separate times on two separate days, and will be conducted in the Community Room of the Richard J. Koch Recreation Center, One Merrymount Parkway. The cost of the program is $20 for a three-hour session and will include the LEGOs™, supervised instruction and a snack.

The sessions are:

Wednesday, April 20 from 9 a.m. until 12 noon; Wednesday, April 20 from 12:30-3:30 p.m., Thursday, April 21 from 9 a.m. until 12 noon and Thursday, April 21 from 12:30-3:30 p.m.

Enrollment will be limited and a minimum number will be needed for each session for proper group activities.

Supervision will be provided by members of the QRD staff and participants will also be guided in related LEGO™ activities such as design challenges and games.

Registration begins today (Thursday, April 7) and can be done online at QuincyRec.com or in person at One Merrymount Parkway from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. For additional information please call 617-376-1394 or visit the website.

Games Were Held At Quincy High School

5th Grade Lady Presidents Win Championship

In a complete team effort, the 5th Grade Quincy Lady Presidents won the South Shore League Basketball Championship with a heart-stopping 27-24 overtime victory over Braintree recently at Quincy High School.

The heavily favored, number-one seeded Braintree team finished the season 16-0 beating their opponents by an average of 21 points. However it was Quincy's tenacious defense that decided the outcome of the championship game.

In the game, Liana Cunningham, Jen Butka, Caroline Bloomer and Amanda Cristiani bolstered Quincy's offense. Bloomer hit a free throw with three seconds on the clock to put the game into overtime. In overtime huge free throws by Cunningham, Cristiani and Butka decided the game.

"Braintree beat us in our first game by 36 points," coach John Franceschini said after the victory, "but the Quincy girls never gave up. They practiced hard and played as a team throughout the season, hoping they would get another shot at Braintree in the playoffs." Franceschini praised the dedication and commitment of the girls and said, "This was a complete team effort!"

Other members of the team were Caitlyn Caggiano, Jessica Caldwell, Meghan Davis, Gianna Franceschini, Caroline Hannon, Courtney Holler, Shannon Kelly and Carolyn Schaaf.

Quincy's 17-14 last-minute win over Plymouth propelled them to the championship game. Quincy finished the season 12-4, good enough for second place in their league. In addition to Franceschini, Gary DiNardo also coached the 5th-grade team. The team manager was Gabriella Franceschini.

The Quincy Lady Presidents and Quincy High School hosted championship game on Sunday as 16 teams from across the South Shore competed in eight championship games. Championship Sunday was made possible by generous donations from BJ's, Montillio's Bakery, Sea Street Dunkin Donuts, Spukies Pizza, Gennaros Eatery, Previtie's Market, Quincy High School's Culinary Arts Department, the Coffee Break Café, Romanzza Pizzeria, and Papa Ginos.

Popular Event To Be Held At Pageant Field

14th Annual Quincy Lions Club Run/Walk for Sight April 23

The Quincy Lions Club will hold its 14th Annual Run/Walk for Sight on Sat., April 23 at Pageant Field. Online registration is currently open at www.quincylionsclub.org/2011-Run-Walk-For-Sight.html.

Day-of-race registration will begin April 23 at 9 a.m., followed by the children's 1K race at 10:30 a.m. The adult 5K run/walk, which is on a course certified by U.S. Track & Field, begins at 11 a.m. Prizes will be awarded to race winners in a number of categories and the first 200 registrants will receive a free race T-shirt and runner's giveaway bag.

The registration fee is $20 for adults and $5 for the children's 1K race and includes a buffet lunch following the races. There will also be entertainment and a prize raffle.

"The Run/Walk for Sight is a fun event for the whole family," said Quincy Lions Club President Loretta McTiernan. "The local community has been very supportive of the Lions Club's efforts to help blind and visually impaired individuals and we hope everyone will come out and enjoy this fun and worthwhile event."

Proceeds from the Run/Walk benefit eye research and the Quincy Lions Club's community service activities, including providing free eye exams and free eyeglasses for local residents in need, offering free vision and health screenings, providing college scholarships to local high school students and more.

80-Member Team Looking To Make Its Mark

Q/NQ Track Teams Are Loaded With Talent

By JOE REARDON

Oftentimes in track, experience can make the difference between winning and placing, and picking up points, and between falling short and coming away with nothing to show for the effort.

Quincy/North Quincy has a handful of promising tracksters coming back who are no strangers to the pressure of competing against the top talent in the state. And when the weather warms, there could be a slew of personal bests running up and down Geoff Hennessy's roster.

Of the bunch, seniors Amber Jones and Erica Brady look to be the best bets to pick up medals in the statewide competitions. As a junior, Jones was a solid tenth in the Div. 1 Eastern Mass 200-meter dash and 24th in the long jump. She also picked up a bronze medal in the Patriot League's 200 against a strong field.

Brady has been a force in cross-country and track since her freshman year and she'll be looking to finish her high school career on a strong note. A tough two-miler, Brady isn't one to get intimidated by the competition, no matter how good. She pushed herself to an impressive 11:58.66 against a stacked field in the Div. 1 EMass meet last spring. If she's able to get comfortable and stick with a fast-moving pack, Brady could bring her deuce time under the 11:30 mark.

Sophomores Danielle and Briana Mullaney had big seasons on the track as rookies and hope to build off the momentum of a year ago. Danielle cracked the top 10 at the Patriot League meet in the 800 to take ninth place, while Briana's 5:56.69 was good for sixth place in the mile.

The squad is the deepest it has been in years with a whopping 80 athletes on the roster, the biggest team ever. Hennessy believes the numbers will make a difference in several meets.

"We're excited with the numbers," he said. "We have some balance and we're not weak in anything. It's exciting to have the new faces."

Junior Olivia Umoren is another athlete who could put up a monster year if she's able to stay healthy. A member of both the volleyball and basketball teams at North Quincy, Umoren was injured for much of last season and was never able to compete with any consistency. Healthy and hungry now, Umoren should produce in the weight events.

Si Han Huang is one of the team's top athletes in the discus and had no peers as a freshman a year ago. Rose Bennett, too, is back after a freshman year that saw her take tenth in the triple jump in the Patriot League championships.

Derrick Stone and Kevin Ung fared well in the big meets last spring and should set the tone for the boys' team.

Stone was 22nd in the 400 in Div. 1 EMass meet, but competing, as a freshman should prove invaluable this time around. He was a major force in the Patriot League, as evident with his fourth-place showing in the 400 at the league meet.

Ung bolted to a fifth-place performance in the 110-meter hurdles in the Patriot League championships to pick up a medal. Nick Gillespie returns as the team's top 800-meter specialist after taking eighth in the league meet.

Undoubtedly, there will be athletes in the pack who will step up and have big seasons, surprising both the coaches and competition. Other athletes who could prove to be wild cards are Danielle Denien, Krisi Gjini, Talia Hampton, Jackie Hsia, Sahra Warsame, Alanna Dean, Alexis Keough, Vivian Kung, Casey, Li, Cai Li, Sandy Liu, Devin Melendy, Ryann Melendy, Brenda Ngo, Georgia Papaconstadinou, Tara Parekh, Erin Renken, Cathleen Wang, Sarah Ward, Vanessa Bolden, Jannett Chin, Dana El-Chami, Ronisha Franklin, Tiffany Fung, Gayelle Ghossoub, Kelly Kung, Sophie Lee, Megan Lieu, Shannon McCleary, Sam McNally, Sanjana Pannem, Jaclyn Scuzzarella, Samantha Wong, Kelly Yu, Mary Zheng, Uendi Buda, Julianne Carey, Heidi Ching, Danielle Conteran, Hayley Forbes, Amelia Ho, Slena Hui, Erin Huynh, Antonnia Kelly, Jamie Lee, Amina Li, Karen Ly, Simone Matthews, Ivy Pham, Aditi Sharma, Nicole Tice, Olivia Todd, Maya Umoren Faith Whooley, Margaret Wu, Cassie Yee, Simon Escobar, Dan Green, John Green, Jonathon Chin, Reimond Poci, John Tan, Iok Wong, Risheng Zeng, Michael Burke, Nathan Donahue, Mouad Abibi, Antoine Allen, Zhenya Buckley, Zu Jun Chen, Long Gong, Eddie Guinto, Steven Liao, TJ Marshall, Cole O'Brien, Marvin Tang, Phillip Tran, Josh Valdez, Tommy Zhang and Tony Zheng.

High School Spring Season Sprung This Week

By SEAN BRENNAN

A small dose of April snow and a steady supply of rainy weather have come hand-and-hand with the start of the 2011 High School spring season. Early scheduled games are now at the mercy of Mother Nature, but as we do every season, The Quincy Sun is providing its readers with the time and dates of April's games. These times and dates are subject to change depending on postponements and rescheduling.

The Quincy Sun has also begun team previews, beginning this week with the Quincy/North Quincy track team (page 21), and these previews will continue for the next few weeks. Throughout the spring, game results, potential feature stories and other news can be sent directly to The Sun Sports Department by email at quincysunnews@verizon.net. The deadline each week is Monday by noontime.

Remember, the spring sports season is here and then it is gone. So, check out the below dates and times and head out and support all the teams from Quincy and North Quincy High School.

North Quincy HS

Baseball

The Red Raiders are set to open their home calendar today (Thursday, April 7) at 4 p.m. against non-league Marshfield HS. A Patriot League away game versus Hanover HS is scheduled for Friday at 4 p.m.

North Quincy has three home league games on the docket for next week: Monday, April 11 against Hingham HS (4 p.m.), Wed., April 13 versus Middleboro (4 p.m.), and Thursday, April 14 against Whitman-Hanson (3:30 p.m.); all home game are played at Adams Field.

Over the school vacation week, NQHS and QHS will host their annual baseball tournament along with Milton and Weymouth. The tournament begins on Tuesday, April 19 at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. with the Consolation and Championships games being held Thursday, April 21 (TBA).

Softball

The Lady Red Raiders (tentatively) opened the season Wed., April 6 with a home game against Patriot League foe Hanover (3:30 p.m., Mitchell-McCoy Field). This home game will be the followed by five consecutive away games beginning Monday, April 11 at Patriot League opponent Hingham (4 p.m.).

North Quincy continues its road stretch with league games at Middleboro (Wed., April 13, 4 p.m.) and at Whitman-Hanson (Thursday, April 14, 4 p.m.).

The Lady Red Raiders are scheduled to play at non-league Winthrop on Monday, April 18 and Tuesday, April 19 (TBA).

Girl's Golf

North Quincy was set to tee-off on Monday against Hingham and depending on the week's weather yesterday (Wed., April 6) at home versus Fontbonne Academy.

The team has an away match against Hingham today (Thursday, April 7) at 3:30 p.m. before hosting Brookline on Friday, April 8 at 3:30 p.m.

Next week, the Raiders have two road matches on the docket: Tuesday, April 12 at Saugus (3:30 p.m.) and Thursday, April 14 at Notre Dame Academy (3:30 p.m.).

Boy's Tennis

The Raiders hit the court for the first time this Friday with a home match against Hanover (4 p.m.) before hosting Hingham on Monday, April 11 (4 p.m.), at home against Middleboro on Wed., April 13 (3:30 p.m.) and home versus Whitman-Hanson on Thursday, April 14 (3:30 p.m.).

Girl's Tennis

The Lady Raiders were set to play at home yesterday (Wed., April 6) against Hanover and, next week, will play three straight road matches versus Hingham (Monday, April 11, 4 p.m.), Middleboro (Wed., April 13, 4 p.m.), and Whitman-Hanson (Thursday, April 14, 4 p.m.).

Boy's Lacrosse

The North Quincy lax team opened the 2011 season on Monday at Scituate. North Quincy dropped a 13-4-decision to the Sailors.

The Raiders are scheduled to travel to powerhouse Duxbury today (Thursday, April 7, 4 p.m.) before opening the home slate on Sat., April 9 against Coyle & Cassidy (10 a.m.).

The Raiders play two home games next week: Tuesday, April 12 against Old Rochester (4 p.m.) and Thursday, April 14 versus Tewksbury (4 p.m.).

Girl's Lacrosse

The Lady Raiders were to open the season Monday at home against Fontbonne and Tuesday, at home, versus Plymouth South. North Quincy has a home game today (Thursday, April 7) against Duxbury (5 p.m.) and Sat., April 9 versus Coyle & Cassidy (1 p.m.).

Next week, North Quincy has away game scheduled with Hull (Monday, April 11, 4 p.m.) and Scituate (Thursday, April 14, 4 p.m.).

Boy's Volleyball

The Red Raiders opened the spring season with 3-2-loss to Quincy before earning its first win of the spring with a commanding 3-0-match win over non-league Barnstable.

Next up, North Quincy is set to square up, four times on the road, against Greater New Bedford (Thursday, April 7, 4 p.m.), Wareham (Monday, April 11, 4 p.m.), Brockton (Wed., April 13, 3:30 p.m.) and Gr. New Bedford (Friday, April 15, 4 p.m.).

Track (Boy's and Girl's)

The teams were set to run off on Tuesday in an away meet at Duxbury-Middleboro.

Check the team preview by Joe Reardon to get a better idea of what to expect this season for the teams.

Quincy HS

Baseball

The Presidents, weather cooperating, were to open the 2011 season Tuesday at non-league Stoughton. The team's Patriot League schedule is set to start today (Thursday, April 7) at Silver Lake (4 p.m.) with another league road game set for Monday, April 11 at Pembroke (4 p.m.).

Later next week, QHS will host league foe Whitman-Hanson on Tuesday, April 12 at 3:30 p.m. (Adams Field) before traveling to Hanover on Thursday, April 14 (4 p.m.).

The team will be participating in the annual North Quincy/Quincy Baseball Tournament on April 19 and 21.

Softball

The Lady Presidents were set; again, weather permitting, to begin play Tuesday at non-league Stoughton. Consecutive home Patriot League tilts will be held today (Thursday, April 7) against Silver Lake (3:30 p.m., Mitchell-McCoy Field) and on Monday, April 11 against Pembroke (3:30 p.m.).

Later next week, Quincy will travel to Whitman-Hanson (Wed., April 13, 4 p.m.) and host Hanover on Thursday, April 14 at 3:30 p.m.

Boy's Tennis

Quincy first four matches begin today (Thursday, April 7, 4 p.m.) with an away match at Silver Lake; the schedule continues on Monday, April 11 at Pembroke (4 p.m.) before the team opens their home schedule on Wed., April 13 against Whitman-Hanson (3:30 p.m.).

An away match at Hanover on Thursday, April 14 is set to begin at 4 p.m.

Girl's Tennis

The Lady Presidents open their season today (Thursday, April 7) with a home match against Silver Lake (3:30 p.m.) and are set host Pembroke on Monday, April 11 at 3:30 p.m.

Next Wed., April 13, Quincy will travel to Whitman-Hanson (4 p.m.) before returning home to play versus Hanover on Thursday, April 14 at 3:30 p.m.

Boy's Volleyball

The Presidents started the season with a nice 3-2-match victory over NQHS.

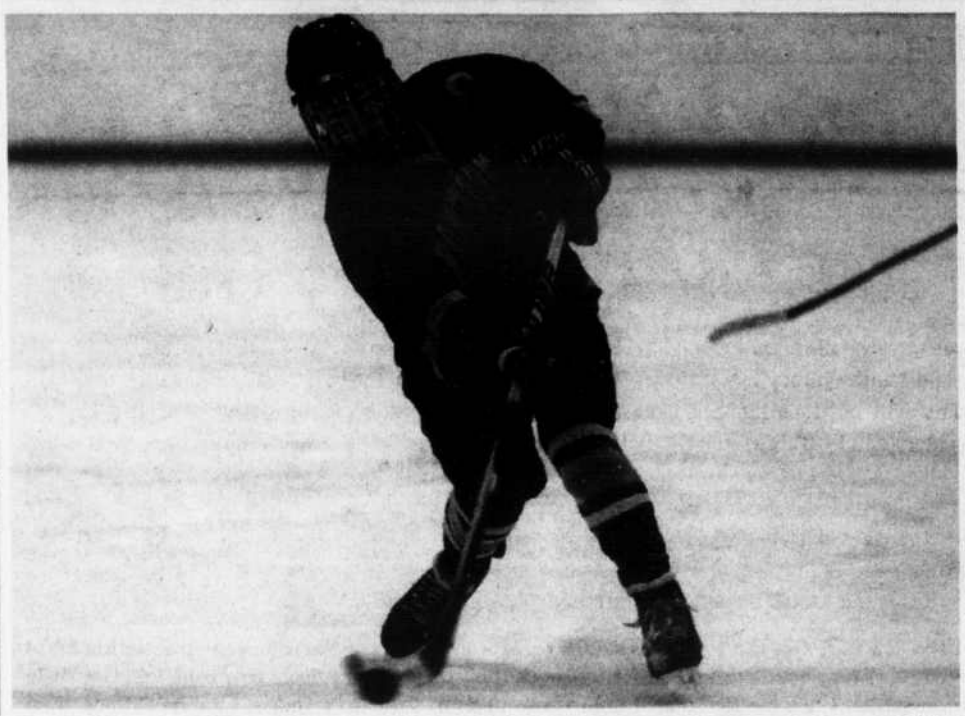
Quincy had a scheduled game versus non-league Brockton yesterday (Wed., April 6) and the team is at home against Durfee on Friday, April 8 at 3:30 p.m. before traveling to Taunton on Monday, April 11 (4 p.m.).

Later next week, the Presidents are set to host Wareham (Wed., April 13, 3:30 p.m.) and then travel to Gr. New Bedford on Thursday, April 14 (4 p.m.) and Barnstable (Friday, April 15, 4 p.m.).

Track (Boy's and Girl's)

The girl and boy's teams were scheduled to compete in a tri-meet on Tuesday against Duxbury and Middleboro.

Early Season Notes



The varsity baseball teams at North Quincy and Quincy High School play all home games at Adams Field; the varsity softball teams play home games at Mitchell-McCoy Field. Both facilities are located on Merrymount Parkway across the way from Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The NQ varsity lacrosse teams play home games on the turf at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The North Quincy tennis teams play home matches at the Bishop Field Courts, located behind Montclair School in North Quincy while the Quincy tennis teams play home matches on courts directly behind the new high school.

The Lady Red Raiders' golf program plays the majority of its home matches at Presidents Golf Course.

There is no varsity lacrosse program, at Quincy High School. Jayvee programs are being held.

QUINCY'S TAYLOR SHEPHERD ended her high school career with 107 goals. Shepherd lifted Fontbonne Academy to three consecutive state final appearances; she will attend Salve Regina University in RI next fall.

Fontbonne Lost To Duxbury, 2-1, In Div. 2 State Final Last Month at the TD Garden

Taylor Shepherd Finished Legendary HS Career

By JOE REARDON

Quincy's Taylor Shepherd didn't get a second state title this winter, but the Fontbonne Academy senior wrapped up, in stellar fashion, what will be looked upon as a legendary high school hockey career for years to come.

The Ducks' all-time leading goal-scorer with 107 tallies, Shepherd had a monster tournament with winning goals against Walpole and Norwood, before scoring Fontbonne's lone tally against Duxbury in its heartbreaking 2-1 loss to the Green Dragons in the Div. 2-championship game. Fontbonne, who finished the season at 16-3-5, was looking to bounce back from last year's loss to Winchester in the state championship game. The Ducks defeated Whitman-Hanson/Pembroke for the state title in 2009.

Fontbonne got off to a slow start against Duxbury in the TD Garden showdown on Causeway Street, but made adjustments after a sloppy first period and the offense began to click. The score remained 1-1 until Duxbury banged home the game-winner with under a minute to go in the third period.

"We worked well in killing penalties, but we struggled turning the puck over," said Shepherd. "It was a bummer because we worked so hard, but in retrospect we had a great season."

After scoring two overtime goals in the tourney, Fontbonne coach Bob Huxley was confident that Shepherd could weave her magic once more in the final against Duxbury. "She came through for us twice in overtime," he said. "If we got to overtime we thought Taylor could come through again for us. Three is magical."

Huxley said her selfless attitude through the season trickled down the roster. "She said, 'they can slash me and hack me. That's ok. Someone else will be open,'" said Huxley. "She was the glue that kept everyone together. She had a great high school career."

Shepherd, this winter, became the lone Quincy high school hockey player to ever score 100 goals in a high school career.

With the season over and Shepherd's attention now turned to softball for the spring, she has been able to soak in her career at Fontbonne as the greatest hockey player ever to wear the gold and blue. "It's definitely nice to look back on," she said of her time on the Ducks' squad. "We've come so far and had so much fun.

"We went to the Garden three times and you can't do much better than that."

The grind of the regular season and then the tournament caught up with Shepherd during the one week off before she took to the softball diamond. "I felt more sore that one week than I did all season," she said with a laugh.

Shepherd is looking to help lead Fontbonne's softball squad to another Catholic Conference title and come May, she'll begin strength workouts to prepare for her rookie season at Division 3 Salve Regina University in Rhode Island. Hockey team meetings begin in September and come this summer Shepherd will be skating three times per week to keep her legs in shape. "I want to start the season already in good shape," she said.

Two State-of-the-Art Scoreboards To Be Unveiled

Seniors At QHS/NQHS To Face Off Against QPD/QFD In Charity Hockey Game

Seniors on both the Quincy and North Quincy hockey teams will be donning their sweaters one final time – and it's all for a good cause.

The seniors will combine forces to take on a team made up of Quincy police and firefighters at the Quincy Youth Arena on Saturday, April 9, beginning at 7 p.m.

Proceeds from the game will go towards the booster clubs of both the Quincy and North Quincy hockey squads. Prior to the contest, two state-of-the-art scoreboards in memory of United States Marshall William Deegan and Quincy Police Officer Jamie Cochrane will be unveiled at 7 p.m. sharp.

Ticket prices are $10 for adults, $5 for students and anyone under age 12 gets in for free.

Instead of playing against each other, as has been the case in years past, Quincy Police Officers Bill Ward and Rich Gibbons, whose son Brendan played forward on the Quincy High squad, thought it would be more entertaining teaming up with the city's firefighters and playing against the seniors, giving them one final chance to wear their school colors.

"I can speak for the police, every one of us played for either North Quincy or Quincy High," said Ward in a phone interview with The Quincy Sun. "It's kind of a way for them (seniors) to go out on a high note.

"This will be more of a fun game. We're thrilled to play with these kids. We'd like to get a lot of people to show up for the seniors."

Fire Department Captain Tim Burchill said combining the police and fire departments adds an interesting nugget to the fundraiser. "We thought to spruce things up we'd band together and do something for the community," he said.

Come out and watch what should be a competitive, but more importantly, a fun-filled hockey game, all for a great cause.

The senior class at North Quincy High School includes Brendan Glynn, Jimmy Scribi, Dereck Graham, Michael Nelson, Vinnie Cameron, Frank Mastroilli, Connor Flynn, Joe Kowlski and James McManus.

The senior class at Quincy High School includes Brendan Gibbons, Chris Connelly, Danny Higgins, Myles Riddle, Nick Scibilio, John McNulty, Derek Murphy, Bobby Kozlowski and Robby Lawton.

Mackenzie Irving Commits To LeMoyne College

Fontbonne Academy senior, Mackenzie Irvin, a Quincy resident, was a top defensive soccer player for the Fontbonne Ducks. Her shining talent hasn't been missed; this fall, she'll be playing at LeMoyne College, a Jesuit school located in Syracuse, NY, as one of their freshmen recruits to fill their Division 2 Northeast-10 women's soccer team.

And Irving is excited about her decision. After applying "early action" to LeMoyne and sending a DVD to the soccer coach there, she was invited to a "Fast Footwork" soccer clinic with the LeMoyne soccer team. Shortly thereafter, her offer arrived. She'll be signing her letter of intent this week, and she'll officially be a LeMoyne Dolphin in September. She is looking forward to being a part of the tightly knit community at LeMoyne, and, she says, "being close to my classmates, like at Fontbonne." She plans to study Political Science with a concentration in International Affairs.

A varsity player at Fontbonne for the past three years, Mackenzie also plays soccer for the Galway Rovers out of Cohasset and will be traveling with them to Ireland during the April school vacation to play in a tournament there.

Mackenzie is grateful to her soccer coach for his support. "At Fontbonne you feel so supported academically, from those inside the building, but that carries over to the soccer field, to the teammates and coaches. Mr. Piotrowicz, my soccer coach, always went the extra mile for me, just like everyone at Fontbonne takes that extra step for you," she said.

Fontbonne Academy is an all-girls Catholic secondary school located in Milton, MA. It is a sponsored ministry of the Sisters of Saint Joseph of Boston.

(Release provided by Fontbonne Academy)

FONTBONNE ACADEMY senior, Mackenzie Irving, will sign her letter of intent to play soccer at LeMoyne College in New York. Irving is a Quincy resident.

NQ Baseball Spring Training Clinic April 16

The North Quincy High School baseball program, in an effort to raise monies for the upcoming season, will conduct a Spring Training Clinic on Sat., April 16 at O'Rourke Field on Quarry Street.

The camp, which is open to all kids ages 6-12 that are looking to get a head start on their spring baseball season, will run from 9 a.m. until 12 p.m. with registration starting at 8:30 a.m. The cost is $25 and that includes a hot dog and a drink for the participants – you don't have to live in Quincy to attend.

The camp will offer instruction in all areas of the game including pitching, hitting, fielding (both infield and outfield), base running, throwing techniques and stretching. Instructors will include the NQHS coaching staff along with all current NQHS players.

If you have any questions regarding the clinic call Angela Long at 617-328-9745 or Beth Liuzzo at 617-328-1416.

Water Meter Replacement and Automated Meter Reading System Project

Information for Residents

The Quincy Department of Public Works is updating 24,000 water meters throughout the city. The project includes the replacement of both the water meters and external reading system. The completed project will greatly improve the reliability and accuracy of water meter reading operations and will increase the efficiency of the DPW. The city has contracted with Easton Winwater Services, who will be performing the installations. Easton WinWater Services will need access to each water customer's house or business for this work. Please be aware that Easton WinWater Services will contact customers directly via U.S. mail. Residents of Quincy are reminded not to respond to unsolicited phone calls or home visits. All personnel installing water meters are issued identification and will arrive in uniform and in marked vehicles. A link to names and pictures of each installer can be found on the DPW website. If you believe you have been contacted by someone other than Easton Winwater or the city, please call the Quincy Police Department at 617-479-1212.

The meter replacement work will begin in September in the North Quincy/Squantum area, and will progress throughout the city by water meter reading route over the course of a two-year period. There is a systematic implementation plan for this project and therefore customers are asked to not contact Easton Winwater Service or Public Works for their meter replacement until they have received a notification letter from Easton Winwater. For a current update on this program please visit the DPW website at http://www.quincyma.gov/Government/PWD/WaterMeterRepacement.cfm

SPOTLIGHT on HEALTH and FITNESS

QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER'S Breast Cancer Memorial Tree will be redicated Sunday, May 22 at 2 p.m. To purchase an engraved brick in the name of someone who has been touched by breast cancer, contact Linda McCulley in the QMC Development Office at 617-376-5495 (lmcculley@quincymc.org) before April 30.

An Opportunity To Purchase An Engraved Brick

Breast Cancer Support Group To Dedicate Memorial Tree At QMC

The Breast Cancer Support Group at Quincy Medical Center will memorialize those who have lost their lives to breast cancer and celebrate those who are living with the disease during a rededication ceremony the hospital's Breast Cancer Memorial Tree Sunday, May 22 at 2 p.m.

The group is offering the opportunity for individuals to purchase bricks engraved with the names of loved ones who have been touched by breast cancer to be added to a special memorial at the base of the tree. A minimum donation of $50 is requested to purchase a brick.

The group first dedicated the lovely pink-blossomed weeping cherry tree in 1994 with the placement of 95 memorial bricks. The tree was recently moved from its original location in the courtyard to a more prominent position adjacent to the front entrance, and will be rededicated at the ceremony on the 22nd. Refreshments will be served in Conference Room A following the ceremony.

If you would like to purchase an engraved brick in the name of someone who has been touched by breast cancer, please call Linda McCulley in the QMC Development Office at 617-376-5495 (lmcculley@quincymc.org) before April 30.

Nutrition News: Dietary Guidelines

By PAULETTE LAMBERT

(NAPSA)-To make sure you are keeping fit, you may need to eat less of some foods-and more of others.

To promote healthy eating and physical activity in current and future generations, the USDA Dietary Guidelines for Americans offers advice on weight management, building healthy eating patterns, and specific food components, some of which should be reduced and others increased.

Enjoy your food, but "eat less" is one of the major messages from the Guidelines, reinforcing healthy choices and reaching out to the 72 percent of men and 64 percent of women who are either overweight or obese.

As a Registered Dietitian and Director of Nutrition at California Health & Longevity Institute, I know that many of my clients struggle with how to implement these recommendations into their daily lives. Small, premeasured portions can help. Awareness of your caloric intake is a great way to be sure you're meeting your healthy-living goals and following the dietary guidelines.

Building healthy eating patterns may sound daunting but really, it's about structuring your meals and snacks to provide food options that are in line with your goals. Eat enough to stay in control; long periods of limited food often result in overeating. Most adults should eat at least every five hours; three meals and one to two snacks are usually adequate. Make sure to include fresh fruits and vegetables and portion-controlled snacks. This is a great way to make sure you have easy op_tions ready when you need them.

MOST ADULTS should eat at least every five hours and include plenty of produce in each meal.

Ideally, your meals will have at least half the plate full of produce, which, according to the new Guidelines, most people should eat more. Americans were also called on to reduce sodium (maximum of 2,300 mg per day), trans fats (zero if possible) and cholesterol (less than 300 mg per day). All produce is naturally low in sodium and cholesterol-free.

Following the Dietary Guidelines can help you set your course toward a long and healthy life. Now is the time to make a choice for your wellness.

Triptans Offer Some Relief From Migraines

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please write about migraine headaches. My granddaughter, age 22, suffers from them. She is a college student and also works. What causes these headaches? – E.F.

ANSWER: Migraines start out as one-sided throbbing headaches that can last 24 or more hours. As time passes, the entire head might hurt. Along with the pulsating pain, nausea often strikes, and sometimes people have to vomit. Migraine sufferers are sensitive to light and sound, so they seek a quiet, dark room where they can lie down.

The cause of these headaches is controversial. A popular theory is that a wave of slow electrical activity spreads over the brain and inflames its coverings, which produces the pain.

The above "cause" of migraines, I am sure, is not what you wanted. You want to know what brings them on. Triggers for migraine include too little or too much sleep, skipping meals, strong odors, bright lights and loud music. Women often find that menstrual periods will usher in the headaches. Stress, both physical and emotional, can start them. Foods that often serve to initiate a migraine are chocolate, cheeses, fatty foods, sausage, salami, oranges, tomatoes, onions, red wine, peanuts and hot dogs.

In the past 20 years, triptans have brought a marked change in the treatment of migraines. Sumatriptan (Imitrex), zolmitriptan (Zomig), almotriptan (Axert), rizatriptan (Maxalt), frovatriptan (Frova) and naratriptan (Amerge) can control severe migraines and are available as pills, nasal sprays and self-administered injections. For less-intense pain, aspirin, Tylenol, ibuprofen and naproxen are sufficient.

When migraines recur with disrupting regularity, preventive medicines have a place in treatment. They include propranolol (Inderal) and verapamil.

The booklet on headaches deals with the common varieties, including migraines. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue – No. 901W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My biggest health problem, if you can call it a health problem, is getting to sleep at night. I lie in bed for what seems an eternity before I fall asleep. A friend told me she had the same problem and cured it with melatonin. I'd like to try it if it's safe. Is it? I am 76 years old and would like a few years of good sleep. – T.R.

ANSWER: Melatonin is a hormone secreted by the pineal gland, a small gland attached to the brain. It conditions the body to adapt to day-night cycles. Melatonin secretion is 10 times greater at night, with peak secretion occurring between 11 p.m. and 3 a.m.

Evidence suggests that this hormone shortens the time it takes to fall asleep and lengthens the time spent in uninterrupted sleep. Melatonin production wanes with age, and its lack could explain your sleep problems.

It also has been used for shift workers to get their brains and bodies conditioned to new sleep-wake cycles, and travelers sometimes take it to prevent jet lag.

Melatonin isn't sold as a drug, so it's not closely supervised. Serious side effects haven't been reported. A safe starting dose is 0.2 mg to 0.3 mg.

HEROES AND VILLAINS

One villain responsible for tooth decay is the bacterium streptococcus mutans, which breaks down sugar and produces the sticky molecules (glucans) that are responsible for allowing bacteria to cling to our teeth. This villainous bacterium also produces an enamel-eroding acid responsible for cavities. The heroes that counter these effects are called "polyphenols," which are found in the fermented stems, seeds, and grape skins left over from wine production. These compounds, which are also found in cranberries, block streptococcus mutans' ability to produce glucans. As helpful as polyphenols are, however, no one is suggesting that we drink wine or sugary cranberry drinks to prevent tooth decay. Instead, scientists hope to isolate these compounds and put them in toothpaste and mouthwashes.

Today's helpful and interesting column has been brought to you as a public service. We can recommend a personalized oral home care program to meet your specific needs. We take the time to talk, and answer any questions you may have. Please call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We explain all procedures and what they will do for your smile, and we take the time to be gentle. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our friendly staff and relaxing environment will put you at ease. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The beneficial compounds found in wine leftovers and cranberries mentioned above are called "A-type proanthocyanidins."

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

ACTIVE INGREDIENT

One of the primary objectives of chiropractic treatment is to get the patient moving as soon as possible without pain. The days of recommended bed rest for back-pain patients are long over. Now, nearly every health professional realizes that movement helps the body function and heal better. Encouraging patients to become as active as their discomfort will allow during periods of low back pain improves disc and cartilage nutrition. That is to say that activity promotes the flow of fluid into the discs, which keeps them in the spongy state needed for them to act as shock absorbers between the bones of the spine. Physical activity also promotes bone and muscle strength.

Your doctor of chiropractic is a uniquely trained expert who can help you with your back pain problem. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we will outline a care plan just for you. Our chiropractic care is a natural, drug free method of health care, and deciding to begin treatment often means the first step to a healthier, more active life. We focus on correcting injuries and problems associated with your spine and nervous system. PH: 617.472.4220. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Physical activity increases the body's production of brain chemicals (endorphins), which help lessen the feeling of pain and raise spirits.

Prayer Service For Unemployed, Underemployed

The Social Justice Council of Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy, will sponsor a prayer service for unemployed and underemployed persons and their loved ones Saturday, April 16 at 10 a.m. in the lower church, 386 Hancock St.

Following the service, there will be an opportunity for networking and an informational session with guest speakers Chris Driscoll O'Neill from One Life at a Time and Attorney Dan Biagiotti from The Legal Advocacy and Resource Center in Boston.

One Life at a Time is a non-profit organization which provides free career legal services to those who are new to or returning to the workforce.

Biagiotti will speak on the process and requirements of unemployment benefits, potential health insurance benefits, and basic employment law.

Coffee and pastries will be served.

All are welcome.

Special Service Sunday To Commemorate Holocaust

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold a special worship service Sunday, April 10 at 10:30 a.m. to commemorate the Holocaust, the first such service in the church's history.

"The service will feature music and a poem written during the Shoah, as well as eye witness testimonies from various countries," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of the church.

The service is dedicated to the memory of Sonia Weitz, a survivor of Auschwitz and a founder of the Holocaust Center Boston North.

Rev. Glidden said, "I met Sonia many years ago, when I first became connected with the Center, and during the years I served on its Board of Directors I came to know her which was a joy and privilege. Sonia passed away last June, having kept her promise to her father that she would tell about what had happened to her and her family. This service is a way to honor her and to keep her legacy alive."

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Mark Twain once confessed that he could live for three weeks on a compliment, and Twain was not an exceptionally vain man. He was just admitting openly what most of us feel privately.

One might say there is good flattery and bad flattery. Bad flattery is the kind which the flatterer engages in because it will "pay" him. He might get something out of it. No person of sense or sensibility can help but see through it and despise it.

The other sort of flattery – the good flattery – is not extended because it gives profit to the donor but because it gives pleasure to the recipient. And most of us need this sort of life from time to time.

When most of us pay a compliment, we generally pay it to the person's strongest, and most obvious, point. But to do the greatest good a compliment should be directed to the person's weakest point – or what he thinks is his weakest point.

Twain could not be elated because somebody came up and told him what a fine writer he was; the whole word accepted that fact. But he was radiant if someone complimented him on an invention he had helped develop...

Oscar Wilde once said – "An acquaintance that begins with a compliment is sure to develop into a real friendship."

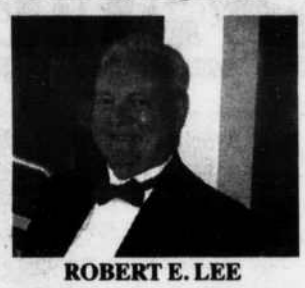
Robert E. Lee, 84

Active Member Christ Church, Engineer

A funeral service for Robert E. Lee, 84, of Quincy, an active member of Christ Church, was held Monday in Christ Church, Quincy. The Rev. Clifford Brown officiated.

Mr. Lee died March 30 at Quincy Medical Center following a brief illness.

He was the loving husband of nearly 64 years to Lorraine E. (Johnson) Lee.



Mr. Lee was an active member of Christ Church, Quincy, where he was a Warden and member of the Vestry. He also previously served as a Eucharistic Minister, and Director of the Order of Sir Galahad.

He volunteered his time as a baseball coach for the former Koch Club, and was also a Quincy YMCA church basketball coach in the 1960's and 70's, and a former member of the Adams Heights Men's Club as well as the Telephone Pioneers Club.

He enjoyed bowling, golfing, and camping.

A veteran of both World War II and Korea, Mr. Lee served his country in the U.S. Navy, and was honorably discharged from active duty on Dec. 5, 1951.

As an engineer in the telecommunications field, Mr. Lee worked for New England Telephone & Telegraph, and later, Nynex. His career took him around the country, which afforded him the opportunity to bring his family with him to experience our great nation's heritage.

ROBERT E. LEE

In addition to his devoted wife, Lorraine, he leaves three sons: Robert E. Lee, Jr. and wife Bonnie of Lynnfield, Gary F. Lee and wife Joan of NC, and Kenneth L. Lee and wife Lee Ann of Methuen, and a daughter, Linda Lee Barry and husband Mark Cozzens of Braintree.

He is also survived by sisters Phyllis Cassidy and her husband Richard, Virginia Hillier, and a sister-in-Law Alice Lee, all of FL, as well as 9 grandchildren and 1 great granddaughter. He was the brother of the late Alfred & William Lee.

Interment with military honors was at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St. Quincy Center.

Memorial donations may be made to the Alzheimer's Foundation of America, 322 Eighth Ave, 7th Floor, New York, NY 10001 or to Christ Church Food Pantry, 12 Quincy Ave, Quincy, MA 02169.

Helen A. Kelly, 80

Teacher's Assistant, Bus Matron

A funeral Mass for Helen A. (Cuddy) Kelly, 80, of Quincy, was celebrated April 2 in St. John's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Kelly died March 28 at Quincy Medical Center.

Born in Boston, she was raised and educated in Mission Hill, Roxbury, until moving to Quincy, where she spent most of her life. She worked for the Quincy Public Schools as both a teacher's assistant and bus matron. She loved children and possesses a wellspring of optimism for the future of all the kids with whom she worked.

Mrs. Kelly also worked at Quincy City Hospital as a nurse's aide where her compassion for her patients shined as one of her many endearing qualities. She also served for many years as a Den Mother for the Cub Scouts of America where she taught the importance of giving back to our country and communities.

She was also active in Quincy politics and was an artist in the field of arts and crafts. Her pride was in her family and the bond she shared with her husband served as a true inspiration for her children.

Wife of John "Jack" Kelly, Sr.; mother of Maureen Shepard and her husband G. Frederick of CT, John S. Kelly, Jr., of Quincy, Kenneth J. Kelly and his wife Debbie of Plymouth and Brian E. Kelly and his wife Renee of NC; grandmother of Marc, Derek and Genevieve Shepard, all of CT, and Stephanie and Caroline Kelly, both of NC; one of 16 children, she is survived by Patricia Maguire and her husband Francis, Rita Haynes and her husband Durwood "Jack," Cecilia Magee and her husband Charles, Mildred Stonis and Pauline McLaughlin; daughter of the late Charles and Olive (Hudson) Cuddy.

She is also survived by many nieces and nephews, in-laws and extended family.

Interment was in Pine Hill Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Bolea-Buonfiglio Funeral Home, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, 26 Broadway, New York, NY 10004.

Joseph A. Grimaldi

Retired Bank Vice President

A funeral Mass for Joseph Anthony "Nono" Grimaldi of Quincy, an Air Force veteran and retired bank vice president, was celebrated Tuesday in Holy Trinity Parish at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, Quincy.

Mr. Grimaldi died April 1 surrounded by his loving family.

He was an Air Force veteran serving in Germany as a Russian linguist.

Mr. Grimaldi had a long career in banking and was a retired vice president at Bank of Boston as well as a software consultant. He also taught history as an adjunct professor at Northeastern University.

Mr. Grimaldi fully enjoyed many things in life. Most of all, his family, children and grandchildren. He loved travel and vacationing in Florida.

He was a lifelong fan of Boston sports teams and was a competitive golfer for many years, as well as being an active member of Weymouth Elks. He had many passions, including playing cards, and reading books; which he shared with family and friends.

He loved his garden, often producing beautiful displays of flowers.

But above all, he reveled in getting family and friends together at his house for Christmas or his annual 4th of July cookout. The role of family patriarch fell naturally Mr. Grimaldi and he would host, lecture, regale, challenge and reminisce with all the generations in his domain.

JOSEPH A. GRIMALDI

Beloved husband of Marie (O'Connell) Grimaldi of Quincy for 35 years. Loving father of Christina "Tina" Grimaldi of Whitman, Joseph Grimaldi and his wife Kim of Quincy, Mike Grimaldi and his wife Ann Marie of Abington and Marc Grimaldi of Quincy.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) It isn't always easy for the rambunctious Aries to give a second thought to their often spur-of-the-moment choices. But aspects favor rechecking a decision before declaring it final.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Information emerges for the business-driven Bovine who feels ready to restart a stalled project. Be prepared to make adjustments as needed at any time during the process.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Part of you wants to complete plans for an upcoming event, while your other self wants to see how things develop first. Compromise by moving ahead with your plans while being open to change.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An unexpected change in a relationship could open up a problem or could lead to a much-needed and too-long-delayed reassessment of a number of matters. The choice is yours to make.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Time for the Lion to total the plusses and minuses resulting from recent personal and/or professional decisions. See what worked, what didn't and why, and base your next big move on the results.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The clever Virgo can make persuasion work by presenting a case built on hard facts. Sentiment might touch the heart, but it's good, solid information that invariably wins the day.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You usually can win over the most stubborn skeptics on your own. But this time you can benefit from supporters who have been there, done that and are willing to speak up on your behalf.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You win admiration for your determination to do the right thing. Don't be distracted from that course, despite the offer of tempting alternatives that might suddenly turn up.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) While you still need to maintain control of a dominant situation, a new development emerges, making the task easier and the outcome potentially more rewarding.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) New factors might have a positive effect on a still-pending matter, but only if the information proves to be credible. Trusted colleagues might be able to offer needed advice.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) The week favors moderation, especially if a health problem is involved. Resist the impulse to do more than might be good for you at this time. You can catch up later.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You could feel more than a mite upset by someone or some people who might be creating problems for you. Find out why they won't change their ways. Their reasons might surprise you.

BORN THIS WEEK: You know how to inspire others to do their best by setting a persuasive example of your own.

OBITUARIES

Mary T. McEachern

Daily Communicant At St. Ann's Parish

A funeral Mass for Mary T. (Donna) McEachern, of Wollaston, was celebrated Wednesday in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. McEachern died April 1.

A devout Catholic, she was a daily communicant at St. Ann's Parish in Quincy as well as member of the Ladies Sodality. She found great pleasure in gardening, reading and puzzles. She also loved to cook for her family and the true essence of her life was her family and her faith; she saw to it that her children grew up with a childhood rich with family love and tradition, which would become the foundation for all that was important to her.

MARY T. McEACHERN

Wife of the late William F. McEachern; mother of William F. McEachern, Jr., and his wife Diane of Weymouth, Anne Burns and her husband Thomas of Quincy, Marie Cunniff and her husband William of Quincy, James McEachern and his wife Carol of Carver and Susan Wentzell and her husband Mark of Weymouth; sister of the late Elizabeth Youngworth Deegan and J. William Donna and Joseph Donna.

She is also survived by 14 grandchildren, 14 great-grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

Interment was in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, Quincy.

Catherine T. Cahalane, 84

A Mass for Christian Burial for Catherine T. (Carroll) Cahalane, 84, of Milton, formerly of Quincy and Dorchester, was celebrated March 25 in Saint Agatha Church, Milton.

Mrs. Cahalane died March 19 at Massachusetts General Hospital after a short illness.

Born in Boston and raised in Dorchester, she was a graduate of Saint Gregory High School and Fischer College, Boston.

Mrs. Cahalane raised her children in Dorchester and Quincy before moving to Fuller Village in Milton, where she quilted, sewed, baked and was a member of the Red Hat Society.

She was known as an active, independent, vibrant, fun-loving and cool person.

Beloved wife of the late Jeremiah F. Cahalane, she was the loving mother of Kathleen Powers, Maureen Cahalane Gallagher and her husband Michael, Jeremiah Cahalane and his wife Karla, all of Milton, Terrence Cahalane and his wife Debra of South Boston, Carol Cahalane Coombs and her husband Wes of Exeter, NH, Laureen Cahalane Tyne and her husband Patrick of Milton, Michael Cahalane and his wife Carol of Walpole and Eileen Cahalane of Quincy.

Nana to Tara, James, Breeda, Catherine, Jerry, Devin, Dylan, Gillian, Emily, Shelagh, Andrea, Aisling, Aidan, Lila and Colin. Sister of Charles Carroll of Braintree and the late John Carroll, Mary Colburn and James Carroll. Kay was also the treasured aunt to many nieces, nephews and God-children and devoted friend to many.

Interment was in St. Mary's Cemetery, West Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Dolan Funeral Home, Milton.

Memorial donations may be made to the Massachusetts General Hospital Development Office, Attn: Surgical ICU, 165 Cambridge St., Suite 600, Boston, MA 02114.

NQHS Students Compete In History Bowl

Nineteen North Quincy High School students recently travelled to Everett High School to compete in the state level of the National History Bowl, an interscholastic team history competition that takes place in 40 states across the country.

North Quincy scholars placed at the top of the state, earned victories at every round, and all three teams qualified for the National Tournament in Washington, D.C. and the school will be sending one team to compete in the national event. After an extremely close match in the semi-finals between the North Quincy A Team and North Quincy C Team, the A Team emerged a winner and proceeded to the final round, where seniors Tenley McKee, Tom Nigl and Mike Pizziferri, and junior Nolan O'Brien placed second in Massachusetts.

National History Bee, a competition for individual students, was held on the same day.

North Quincy sophomore Tim Bill dominated this contest, winning every round, placing first in the state in the final round.

Nolan O'Brien also made a strong showing, placing third in the state. The National History Bee and Bowl is founded by director David Madden of Princeton University, whose goal is to foster an appreciation for history, especially the idea that history is not just names and dates, but a key to understanding every human endeavor, from the battlefield to the baseball field, from the political arena to the photography studio, from sacred places to the science lab.

Rummage Sale Saturday At United First Parish Church

A rummage sale will be held Saturday, April 9 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the parish hall – and on the church grounds weather permitting – at United First Parish Church, The Church of the Presidents, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Unsold items will be taken to Goodwill.

Clothing leftover from the rummage sale will be available Sunday, April 10th, for a free clothing exchange following the church service.

Donated items will be accepted Saturday morning, from 9 to 11 a.m. and Friday, April 8 between 6:30 and 7:30 p.m.

Among the items that Goodwill accepts in good condition: antiques, collectibles; small appliances, artwork, bicycles, books, records, tapes and CDs and DVDs; bicycles, clothing, belts, scarves, ties, pocketbooks, cookware, jewelry and sporting goods.

For a complete list, visit the Goodwill website.

completely empty-handed. I don't believe there's any malice," Perdios said.

Carolyn Spicer, spokesperson for Street-Works, said in an e-mail there have been few changes since last fall.

"We have made some adjustments to certain features based on feedback received from the QEN, but the location remains essentially the same."

Spicer continued, "While QEN's influence can be seen in several aspects of our proposed plans including the increased amount of daylighting and enhanced amenity area, their preferred route was unfortunately determined to be unfeasible due to an inordinate number of constraints such as land control, constructability, and environmental impacts."

While Perdios has no estimates on the cost of the QEN plan, Street-Works officials estimate their plan will cost $14.9 million and construction could begin in the second quarter of 2012. Perdios said that figure does not include the purchase and demolition of the American Legion post.

Street-Works began seeking the required approvals from nine agencies this week with its first review under the MEPA (Massachusetts Environmental Protection Act).

The Conservation Commission and Department of Public Works, the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection, the federal Environmental Protection Agency and Fish & Wildlife Service, and the state's Division of Marine Fisheries must also approve the plan.

Mental Health, Substance Abuse Committee Hearing Tonight

The Joint Committee on Mental Health and Substance Abuse will hold a special informational hearing Thursday, April 7 at 6:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at the James R. McIntyre Government Center (City Hall), 1305 Hancock St.

"Like elsewhere across Massachusetts, the district I represent is wrestling with how to handle the mental health and substance abuse issues that are driving up local police and court costs, eating away at limited funds available for health care, and driving wedges between so many friends and families," said Sen. John F. Keenan, of Quincy, the committee's co-chairman.

"I am very appreciative of my co-Chair, Rep. Elizabeth Malia, for agreeing to hold this very important hearing in the City of Quincy."

The hearing will feature invited testimony from local officials, police officers, advocacy groups, and service providers. There will also be time for comment from the public.

NQHS Students Remember Rachel With 'Good Deeds'

MEMBERS OF North Quincy High's S.A.D.D. chapter (Students Against Destructive Decisions) stand in front of the wall of hands as part of "Rachel's Challenge." Each hand represents a good deed a student has done to help bring happiness into someone's life. The program is in honor of Rachel Scott, the first student killed during the shooting rampage Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold unleashed at Columbine High School in 1999. The students, from left to right are Rick Long, Connor Flynn, Jim Scribi, Chelsy Jusseaune, Courtney Timmins, Winnie Akoury, Siobhan Greene and Dan Whooley. Story on Page 10.

50 Citations Issued Monday After Serious Auto Accident

Sea Street Speeders Crack Down

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Beefed-up police patrols along Sea Street in Adams Shore and Houghs Neck netted 50 offenders on Monday, according to Captain John Dougan who said the crackdown followed an accident last week involving serious injuries.

"We wrote 50 citations yesterday morning," Dougan said, adding that speeding is the major offense on the dangerous stretch that offers the main artery into Houghs Neck and Germantown.

"It's basically a four-lane

Total Of $1.94 Million Approved For Repairing, Maintaining Local Roads

City To Receive Increase In Road Projects Funding

Quincy's legislative delegation – state Sen. John F. Keenan and state Representatives Ronald Mariano, Bruce J. Ayers and Tackey Chan voted last week to give final approval to legislation that would provide $200 million in state Chapter 90 funding to rebuild and repair roads and bridges throughout Massachusetts over the next fiscal year.

"Considering the tough winter we've had, it is crucial to provide additional funding to maintain and repair our streets," Keenan said. "This money will surely help Mayor Koch and city officials continue their aggressive road repair program throughout the city."

This significant capital investment, a 29 percent increase from last year, aims to create construction jobs, improve transportation and public safety and encourage long-term economic development across the Commonwealth.

Mariano, the House Majority Leader, said, "Maintaining the quality of our roads is crucial for residents and local business owners alike. We are pleased to be able to provide this increase in funding for the City of Quincy, knowing that in times like these every dollar counts at the municipal level."

Under the proposal, endorsed by the House and Senate and signed Monday by Gov. Deval Patrick, the city of Quincy will receive an additional $431,748 for a total of $1.94 million in Chapter 90 assistance. The funds are allocated using a longstanding formula based upon community road miles, population and employment.

"The additional funding for the repairs and maintenance of road projects is necessary for the Quincy community. This financial assistance will provide the essential means to strengthen and enhance the roadways and bridges," said Representative Ayers.

"I'm pleased to work with the delegation on fighting to get as much local assistance as possible. This funding is important to help the city repair and maintain its roads," Chan said.

"Our Quincy delegation clearly understands just how vital infrastructure projects are to the future of our City, and their support for this increase in Chapter 90 funding is a testament to their commitment to rebuilding our aging roadways," Mayor Thomas P. Koch said.

"I am grateful for the hard work of Senator Keenan, Majority Leader Mariano and Representatives Ayers and Chan on behalf of the citizens of this City."

Five Alumni To Be Memorialized With Banners

War Heroes Tribute At NQHS Atrium

The extraordinary stories of sacrifice and service to the country made by North Quincy High School alumni will be memorialized when the school's atrium is transformed into a poignant permanent tribute later this month, Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday.

The "Atrium Of Honor" will see the previously bare, three-story walls of North Quincy's atrium adorned with a series of framed five-foot-by-eight-foot banners bearing the names of North alumni killed in war and specific tributes for two World War II Congressional Medal of Honor recipients, two long-time Vietnam War prisoners of war, and the U.S. Air Force General whose orders included flying planes in both of the final bombing missions over Japan in World War II, all of whom attended North.

War Heroes Tribute At North Quincy High Atrium

"These stories of sacrifice, honor and the burden of war absolutely must be passed on from generation to generation, and this tribute will be something that every student who walks through the halls at North will be able to see, learn from, and pass on to future generations." Koch said. "I wish to thank Superintendent DeCristofaro, Principal Metzler, Veterans Services Director Tom Stansbury and our City's veterans' groups for helping make this project a reality."

The Atrium of Honor will be formally dedicated in a ceremony scheduled at the School on April 29th at 8:30 a.m., and will include presentations from students on the five veterans being honored, remarks by former Vietnam POW Orson Swindle and a keynote address by Four-Star Marine Corps General Joseph Dunford, Jr. a Quincy native who is Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps.

Mayor Koch invites the public to the ceremony, and he specifically encouraged families of those who will be honored, including relatives of NQHS alumni killed in war, to the event.

The men who will be honored in the atrium are:

WILLIAM R. CADDY
Private First Class, U.S. Marine Corps
NQHS 1938-1942

William Robert Caddy, Private First Class, United States Marine Corps, NQHS 1938-42: Private Caddy dove on a live grenade during the Battle of Iwo Jima in World War II, sacrificing his own life while saving the life of his platoon leader and several other soldiers. For his courage, PFC Caddy was posthumously awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Everett Parker Pope, Major, United States Marine Corps, NQHS Class of 1937: Outnumbered and outgunned, Major Pope and his men fought off waves of enemy attacks by using rocks and their bare fists during a battle on the Pacific island of Peleiu in World War II. Major Pope was the first soldier awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor by President Harry Truman.

RICHARD A. STRATTON
Captain, U.S. Navy
NQHS 1943-1948

E. Alan Brudno, Captain, United States Air Force, NQHS Class of 1958: Captain Brudno was among the longest-serving POWs in American history, held captive for a total of 2,675 days in one of the brutal Vietnam prison camps. He committed suicide just four months after he was released, leading to a national discussion about the treatment of POWs in Vietnam.

Richard Allen Stratton, Captain, United States Navy, NQHS 1943-48: Captain Stratton spent 2,251 days in the infamous Vietnam prison camp known as the Hanoi Hilton. Together with his fellow POWs, he refused to be released early unless all American POWs were freed at the same time.

E. ALAN BRUDNO
Captain, U.S. Air Force
NQHS Class of 1958

Charles Sweeney, Major General, United States Air Force, NQHS Class of 1937: Major General Sweeney piloted planes for both the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombing missions that ended World War II. There are few men in American history who know the burden of war more so than Major General Sweeney.

EVERETT P. POPE
Major, U.S. Marine Corps
NQHS Class of 1937

Stratton was invited to attend the ceremony but cannot make the event. The other four members of the distinguished group are deceased.

Banners bearing the names of the roughly 65 North Quincy alumni killed in service during World War II, the Korean War, the Vietnam War, and the most recent Persian Gulf War, will be a focal point of the Atrium of Honor.

CHARLES SWEENEY
Major General U.S. Air Force
NQHS Class of 1937

"This is a tremendously fitting and lasting tribute to these veterans from North Quincy High whose sacrifices made an indelible mark on American history. Just as fitting is the prominent space chosen for this tribute, where it will be appreciated by every North Quincy student today and in the future," said Superintendent DeCristofaro.

Added NQHS Principal Earl Metzler:

"North Quincy High School is rich with tradition, and it is a privilege to be part of such an honorable community that produced these great men. This recognition of our alumni who defended our county is long overdue," said North Quincy High Principal Earl Metzler.

Correction

Due to a reporting error, the Street-Works' plan for Town Brook was inaccurately described in an April 7 report. The correct version is printed below. The omitted words are in boldfaced type.

"In the Street-Works plan, Town Brook would no longer run underground beneath the Ross Parking Garage and Hancock Lot acreage, but will be daylighted along the Concourse and a pocket park will be developed at the site of the Quincy American Legion Post 95 at Mechanic Street and Revere Road."

TIMELESS CLASSIC

The classic tank watch derives its name from the fact that its compact, boxy, mildly rectangular design was inspired by the Renault tank of World War I. The creator of the original tank watch, Louis Cartier, presented his creation to General John Pershing in 1917. Although the original design features leather straps, succeeding variations have incorporated metal bracelets, some of which bring to mind the caterpillar tracks of real tanks. The original Cartier design also includes sword-shaped blue hands and a blue sapphire cabochon on the winding crown. In addition, Roman numerals are a staple of the original. There is hardly a more distinctive design in the realm of wristwatches, which makes the tank watch a timeless classic.

Since the dawn of time the sun and the moon have been our essential timekeepers. As seasons changed, time changed and so did we. Today a wristwatch does more than tell time, it's an important fashion accessory. Let us help you accessorize. These timeless pieces are displayed in our showcases at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. Our educated staff along with experience, skill and knowledge will help you make a confident wristwatch purchase. If you have any questions about the watches we offer please feel free to contact us at 617-773-3636.

Criminal Complaints Filed After BB Shots Injure Two

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Police filed criminal complaints against an 18-year-old Quincy man suspected of shooting two women with a BB gun on Washington Street last Wednesday night, according to Police Lt. Jack Sullivan.

Sullivan said Monday that complaints filed in Quincy District Court charge two counts of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, to wit a BB gun. The suspect, 18-year-old Donald Rudolph, lives near the site of the incidents.

The two victims sought and received treatment at Quincy Medical Center, but were not hospitalized.

The shootings occurred two hours apart near 230 Washington St., according to the police report, which stated the first woman, heard "a whizzing sound" around 9 p.m just before a BB shot ripped through her jeans and struck her buttocks.

That same night at 11:15 p.m, a second woman was injured in the same vicinity when a BB shot penetrated her thigh.

Police identified Rudolph as a suspect and filed the application for a complaint in Quincy District Court.

Other Incidents

This is not the first incident in Quincy this year, according to police records.

In early January, police filed charges of assault with a dangerous weapon against a suspect who was allegedly targeting signs while working as a watchman at Fore River Shipyard.

One of his shots narrowly missed a nearby resident and damaged the siding on a home.

Such incidents involving BB guns and pellet guns crop up periodically, but there are few statistics and, according to police, even fewer laws address BB guns, pellet guns or air rifles, all of which carry warnings that they can be deadly.

In a more serious local case, a 15-year-old boy lost partial vision in one eye after a BB struck him two years ago in a Houghs Neck park and last January, 2010, three youths were arrested after a BB gun shooting spree damaged windows in homes and over a dozen vehicles in West Quincy.

Police Captain John Dougan said Monday that state statutes prohibit the firing of such weapons in any public area, street, alley or similar venue.

In addition, there are restrictions requiring persons under 18 using such weapons to be accompanied by an adult, according to Dougan.

However, Dougan believes there could be stricter laws such as requiring licenses or at least a Firearms Identification Card (FIC). The FIC not only identifies the individual, but, also, screens for criminal background.

Sterling School Raises $675 To Mail Items Collected In George DePaulo Troop Drive

The Sterling Middle School raised $675 to mail items collected in its sixth annual George DePaulo U.S. Troop Drive.

The drive was started in honor of George DePaulo who retired from the Quincy Public Schools and Sterling Middle School after 60 years of service. Mr. DePaulo recently passed away.

He was not only a hero to all at Sterling Middle School, he was a decorated U.S. Army Veteran of World War II who never stopped living for the values the Army instilled in him. These values include loyalty, duty, respect, service, honor, integrity and personal courage to name a few attributes.

In appreciation for our troops and in honor of Mr. DePaulo, Sterling is committed to this yearly community service learning event.

"This drive represents Sterling's appreciation of men and women who make such great sacrifices for our country," said Principal Christine Barrett. "Students not only brought in items to send to our troops, but wrote letters to them as well.

"Boxes and boxes of food, clothes and other items were collected and sent to our troops. Sterling Middle School worked collaboratively with carepacks.org. out of Weymouth in order to send these items to our troops," Barrett added.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On April 19, 1897, John J. McDermott of New York won the first Boston Marathon with a time of 2:55:10. Fifteen runners started the race but only 10 made it to the finish line. The marathon's distance was changed in 1908 in accordance with Olympic standards to its current length of 26 miles, 385 yards.

• On April 21, 1918, in the skies over France, Manfred von Richthofen, the notorious German flying ace known as "The Red Baron," is killed by Allied fire when an Australian gunner shoots him through his chest. He was 25 years old. Von Richthofen had downed 80 enemy aircraft.

• On April 23, 1923, "Mambo King" Tito Puente is born in New York City. Bandleader and percussionist Puente helped popularize Latin dance music and jazz in America. During a career that spanned six decades, the dynamic showman recorded more than 100 albums and won five Grammy Awards.

• On April 22, 1937, John Joseph "Jack" Nicholson, who would become known as one of the greatest actors of his generation and famous for his role in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," is born in Neptune, N.J. In his first film, Nicholson played a troubled teenager in the low-budget 1958 horror flick, "The Cry-Baby Killer."

• On April 18, 1945, Pulitzer Prize-winning war correspondent Ernie Pyle is killed by Japanese machine-gun fire on Okinawa. Extremely popular, Pyle had been at the London Blitz of 1941 and saw action in North Africa, Italy, France and the Pacific. A monument to him exists to this day on Okinawa, describing Pyle simply as "a buddy."

• On April 24, 1976, the Pittsburgh Penguins beat the Washington Capitals, 3-2, in 139 minutes and 15 seconds of total game play, making it the fifth-longest match in the history of the National Hockey League. A regulation hockey game lasts 60 minutes.

• On April 20, 1980, the Castro regime announces that all Cubans wishing to emigrate to the U.S. are free to board boats at the port of Mariel, west of Havana, launching the Mariel Boatlift. The first of 125,000 Cuban refugees reached Florida the next day in about 1,700 boats.

Miracles And The Marathon

On Monday, Quincy's Tracy Wilson will lace up her sneakers and hit her stride running in the 118th Boston Marathon.

Using her feet, she'll cover the storied 26.2-mile route from the starting line in Hopkinton to the finish line in Boston.

But with her kind heart and generous soul, she'll really accomplish so much more.

Wilson, 41, is running her fourth Boston Marathon to benefit Children's Hospital in Boston. She's raised $25,000 as a member of the hospital's Miles for Miracle team the last three years. This year, she hopes to raise another $10,000 to benefit Children's life-saving pediatric care.

But the dollars and the training miles don't tell the whole story of Wilson's efforts.

The other part of this marathon pursuit is steeped in the medical trials and tribulations of her "patient partner" – 10-year-old Maureen Walsh. A former Quincy resident, Maureen now lives in Braintree with her parents, Susan and Gregory Walsh, and two younger siblings.

The Walsh family is very familiar with Children's Hospital and the facility's phenomenal research and care in saving kids' lives.

When Maureen was 3, she was hospitalized at Children's Hospital after an asthma attack. Three days before her first day of kindergarten, she broke her femur after falling off her bike. Maureen had surgery and a rod was placed in her leg because the facture occurred so close to her hip. She spent a week at Children's and came home in a wheelchair.

After several weeks in her wheelchair, Maureen underwent months of physical therapy and she had to use a walker.

She continues to suffer from asthma and has been hospitalized many times.

But there's good news, too.

"She's doing well," Tracy reports with a smile. "She's very active. She is involved in gymnastics, dancing, soccer and she sings in the Saint Ann's (Quincy) Youth Choir."

Maureen's health issues should be more than enough for one family to endure.

Unfortunately, they have had more than their fair share of trips to Children's Hospital because Maureen's younger siblings Lauren and Gregory have also battled medical problems.

Following Lauren's birth, she was heavily sedated and medically paralyzed. She went into cardiac arrest. Lauren had to be resuscitated twice: one time for a full 13 minutes. She needed an artificial heart-lung machine to take over the work of her lungs and heart.

Five weeks later, Lauren was home after a miraculous recovery.

"The staff at Children's Hospital didn't think Lauren would make it," Tracy says.

Maureen and Lauren's brother, Gregory, was born with craniosynostosis, a congenital defect that causes one or more sutures on a baby's head to close earlier than normal. The condition creates problems with normal brain and skull growth.

Gregory required surgery at Children's Hospital – at the delicate age of nine months.

Today, all three children "are doing awesome," Tracy notes. "They are all amazing kids. They are all beautiful kids.

"They are as healthy as can be. Maureen still has asthma, but you'd never know there are any health problems," she adds.

Like Maureen, Lauren and Gregory also have patient partners running for them Monday.

It's not a cliché – nor is it an understatement – to suggest these kids are an inspiration to their running mates.

"We had our training run a couple of weeks ago – 21 miles – so when you're out there, and you feel a little bit of pain, or you're a little tired, and you know you have anywhere from 2 or 10 miles to go, I think about what this family has been through and I can't imagine being Mrs. Walsh in the hospital imagining what she's thinking and wondering what's going on with any of these incidents," says Tracy, who has two young children with her husband, Patrick McDermott, the Norfolk County Register of Probate.

"I'm going to be done with this (marathon) in a couple of hours. A few hours (running) is nothing compared to sitting and thinking about what these kids are going through," she adds.

QUINCY'S TRACY WILSON will be running the Boston Marathon for her Children's Hospital, Boston "patient partner" Maureen Walsh.

Tracy doesn't have a goal time-wise for completing Monday's marathon. She does think, however, that she stands a pretty good chance of crossing the finish in four and a half hours. Her best time in three marathons is 4 hours, 4 minutes and 4 seconds.

She runs about 20 miles a week in between balancing her career as an attorney and being a mother and wife. The longest run she's done is 21 miles. "Usually I do a long run on the weekend and during the week whatever I can get in," she says.

Training is a lot of leg work – but it's the inspiration of the children that helps her get her "second wind."

"I've learned that (running the Boston Marathon) is definitely more mental than physical. So that's why when you pair up with a kid, you think about what they went through or what their parents went through. It gets you through it."

Another helpful hint: breaking the 26.2 mile-route down by landmarks or personal focal points rather than mile markers.

"If you're on mile 1 and thinking 'I've got 25 more miles to go,' you're gonna make yourself crazy," Tracy says. "So you just think of a landmark or when you're going to see somebody."

For Tracy, her focal point on the Marathon route is Mile 13 in Wellesley. That's where Children's Hospital has one of its patient-partner cheering sections. It's also where Maureen and the Walshes will give Tracy an emotional boost at the midway point to Boston.

"I know I will see the Walshes at Mile 13. That's the biggest part of the run – seeing your patient partner. They'll put up signs and balloons. I look forward to seeing them."

Tracy met the Walshes before she started to run for them. She was very excited to be paired with them.

"I met them in Quincy and I knew they were part of Children's. We talked and I paired up with them the next year."

Tracy's pre-marathon routine is pretty simple. On Saturday night, she'll get together with her training partners for an informal pasta supper. On Sunday, she'll try to stay off her feet and get to bed early.

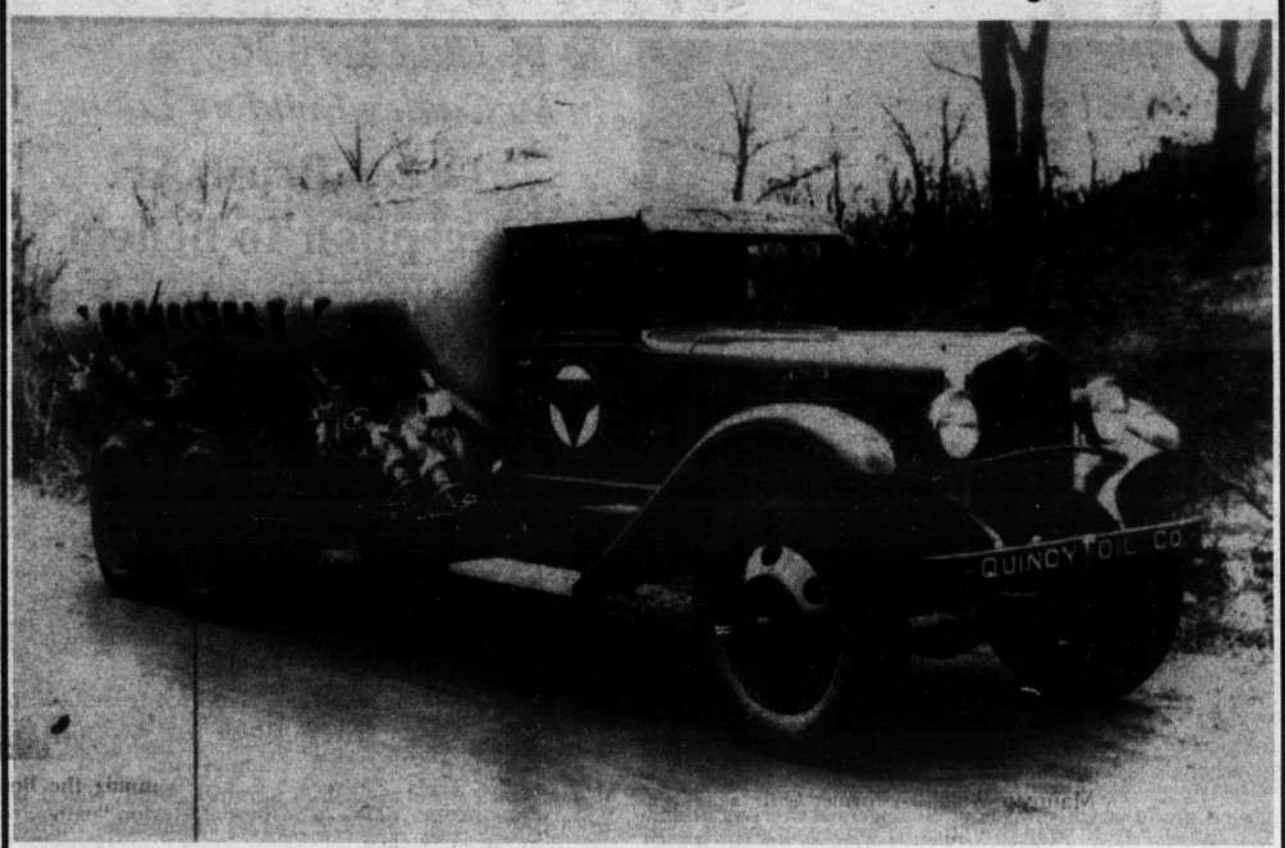
Monday morning, she'll head into Boston and board a bus at 6:15 a.m. carrying the Children's Hospital runners to Hopkinton. She hopes the weather is between 40 and 50 degrees and sunny.

Waiting at the finish line will be her husband and two children.

For those who find running a marathon an intimidating scenario, Tracy has these words of advice:

"If you put your mind to it, you can do whatever you want. The mental challenges are just as important as the physical challenges. You do have to be physically ready but that's only half of it. You have to put your mind to it."

And when she's done Monday, she knows there really is no finish line.



She plans to keep running for Children's Hospital well into the future.

"I love running for Children's Hospital. It's a great team. They have great resources. The coaches are great. And it's a great cause.

"Who doesn't want to help the kids?"

Anyone interested in helping Tracy achieve her fundraising goal can make out a check to Children's Hospital Boston and mail it to Tracy Wilson, 1372 Hancock St., Suite 203, Quincy, MA 02169.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1934 postcard showing a Quincy Oil Company delivery truck was published by the Sterling Motor Truck Co. of Milwaukee. The Quincy Oil Company was incorporated in 1916 by Fred E. Bergfors, Sr. who as a teenager started in business by selling kerosene from the back of a horse-drawn wagon in the streets of Quincy. The company he formed was an amalgamation of a dozen small oil companies, one dating back to 1883. In the 1920s, the demand for the company's petroleum products grew dramatically, first with the popularity of automobiles and then with the development of oil burning home heating systems. By the 1930s, the company had grown to include two ocean terminals, one in Chelsea, the other on the Town River in Quincy. Ships from Texas brought fuel oil and gasoline to these terminals from which the company distributed over one million gallons a day. They had 38 trucks similar to the one shown here with which they serviced over 300 gas stations, most of them leased, but they owned 26 stations in Eastern Mass. including four in Quincy. In later years, the company became known as Quinoil Industries and was then sold in the 1990s. Sprague Energy Corp. now owns their Town River terminal and their landmark lighthouse gas station on Southern Artery is now operated as a Super-Petroleum gas station. 'Open Campus' Asked For QHS, Vo-Tech

By FRANK McCAULEY

This Week
1971
40 Years Ago

A proposed five-week trial "Open Campus Program" was placed before the Quincy School Committee for its consideration.

Proponents said the program-affecting students at Quincy High School and Quincy Vocational Technical School would "reduce tension and student unrest."

The plans call for the five-week trial period of "released study" or "open campus" to begin this spring. Then, after proper evaluation, it would be instituted on a permanent basis in the 1971 fall term.

The proposed program was prepared by an Open Campus Advisory Committee consisting of some 16 members, three students from each of the sophomore, junior and senior high school classes, three teachers, three parents, as well as school officials and representatives of the Police Department, Thomas Crane Public Library, YMCA and the business community.

SMYTH ASKS CLEANUP AT MOSWETUSSET HUMMOCK

Ward Six Councillor J. Vincent Smyth asked the MDC to clean up the debris left by its employees at Quincy's historic Moswetusset Hummock.

In a letter to MDC Commissioner John Sears, Smyth wrote:

"The MDC's sewer construction project from Newlend Street, Squantum, to Quincy Shore Drive was completed in the fall of 1970."

"This important project necessitated the removal and replacement of the approach to the Hummock, which is located off the East Squantum Street Causeway."

"Your office is respectfully requested to improve and beautify the entrance to the Hummock by clearing the area of debris."

Clarifying The Town Brook Enhancement Project

I am writing to set the record straight following articles and meetings on the Town Brook Enhancement Project. There appears to be some misinformation about the Street-Works design, as well as alternative designs suggested by the Quincy Environmental Network (QEN). I would like to clarify the facts as they are known to me.

I have worked closely with the City of Quincy and Street-Works to carefully analyze the existing condition of Town Brook, and to develop a variety of alternatives to address the very apparent problems with the Brook. From the outset of our evaluation it was determined that the degraded condition of the Brook within Quincy Center must be addressed. Several options were studied but the team quickly determined that private property constraints were the primary factors associated with the feasibility of any relocation option. We were able to come up with an alternative using vacant land controlled by the City that could accommodate the relocated culvert, allow for 185 linear feet of day lit section, provides habitat enhancements sensitive to the smelt population and provides public amenity space.

A small number of QEN members have raised alternatives. We have carefully listened and studied all of the alternatives that have been suggested. We have spent over 30 hours with this small group, listening and discussing options for the Town Brook Enhancement and countless more evaluating their suggestions, some of which shaped our design. The most challenging issues with most of the alternatives is the reality of developing a plan that has no land control issues, minimal underground utility conflicts and provides adequate environmental and public benefit. These are not issues to be glossed over or deferred to a later date; they must be addressed in order to present any feasible alternative solution. The alternatives presented by QEN do not meet these criteria.

Downtown Quincy is on the brink of rebirth. The relocation of Town Brook is a necessary prerequisite for this incredibly complex redevelopment to occur. The current plan is constructible, addresses numerous design variables and provides us the best option to move forward and to respect the environmental sensitivity of Town Brook.

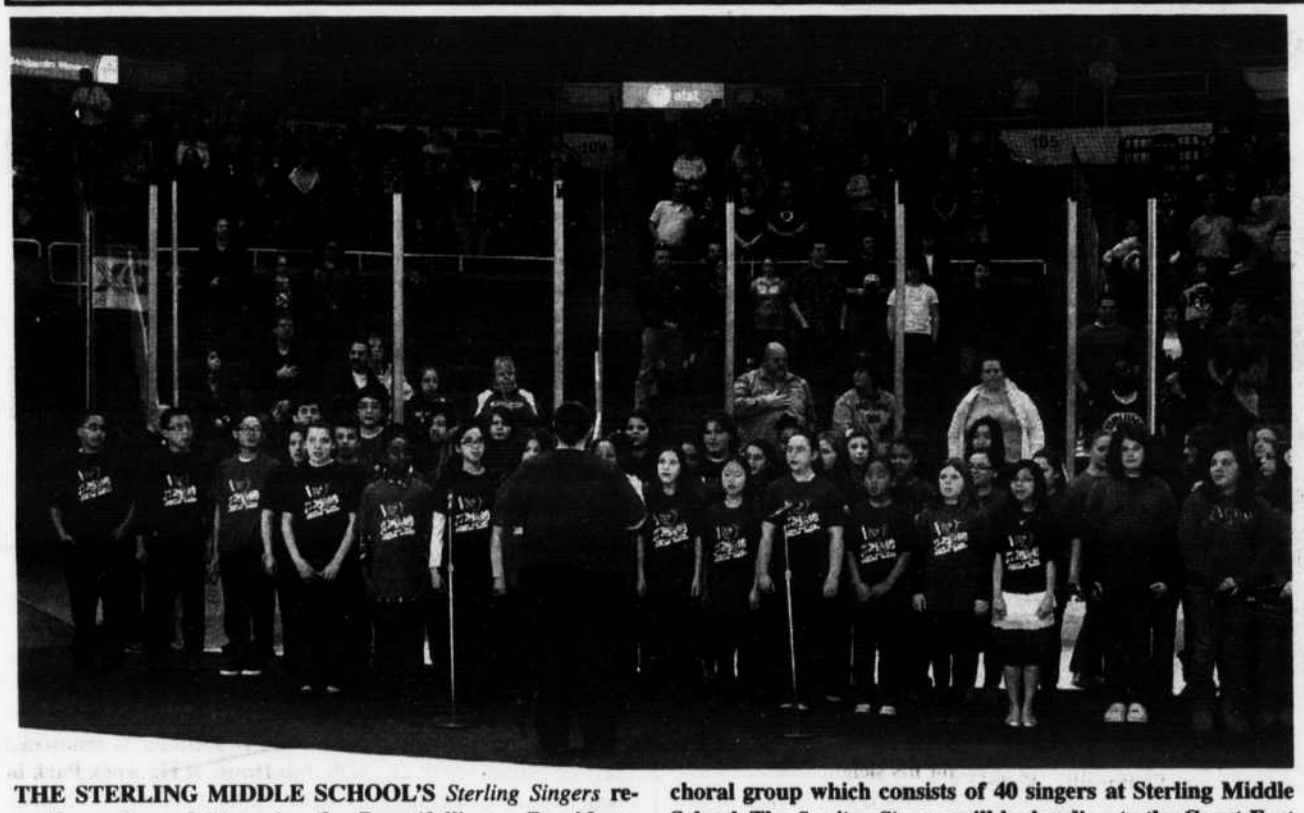
It Must Be Election Year Again

For the past three election cycles, the subject of the Faxon Field track has reared its ugly head. Three members of the School Committee, Dave McCarthy, Elaine Dwyer, Anne Mahoney; one former mayor – Joe LaRaia – and six others, have filed a complaint against the Quincy Park and Forestry Department and the Quincy Park and Recreation Board against the location of the Faxon Field track.

I see this costing the taxpayers more money with lawyers and courts.

Mr. McCarthy, Ms. Mahoney, and Ms. Dwyer, former Mayor LaRaia and the other six: don't know whether you know it, or if you've been paying attention, but the taxpayers of the City of Quincy are maxed out with court bills.



We also have a new high school that we're trying to pay for because the former mayor dropped the ball and the School Committee was asleep at the time, and I believe all three of you were on the School Committee at that time. The taxpayers also have to come up with the money for the Honeywell deal – what a bargain we got there! And now, the Woodward School for Girls.

I'm asking you, Mr. McCarthy, Ms. Dwyer and Ms. Mahoney, and in fact, all elected officials in the City of Quincy to put your differences aside and work with the Mayor to solve these problems in the best interest of the taxpayers.

Green Brush Art Reception To Benefit QMC Asian Services Fund

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) will hold its Green Brush Art Reception Tuesday, April 26 from 6 to 9 p.m. in QMC's McCauley Building lobby, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy.

The Green Brush Art Reception is a fun-filled evening of Asian culture, including art, fashion, music and cuisine.

Serving as co-chairmen of this year's event are Jimmy Liang of Fuji 1546 Bar and Restaurant, and Brian Moy of China Pearl.

The reception will feature Asian cuisine and beverages provided by local restaurants, including China Pearl, Beni Café, Fugi 1546 Bar and Restaurant, Shabu Restaurant, Bistro Chi, Kam Man Foods and many others.

The evening will also include a silent auction of Asian art, brush painting and calligraphy demonstration by the artists of the Chinese American Fine Art Society, the soulful song-stylings of singer Sophia Moon, music by the Canton Musical Association and fashions by Drea Designs.

Proceeds from the Green Brush Art Reception will support the QMC Asian Services Fund, which provides community outreach, free health screenings and services for the growing Asian population in the South Shore area. Green Brush Stroke top-level sponsors include Kam Man Foods, South Cove Community Health Center and Tufts Medical Center.

Tickets are $88 each, and sponsorship opportunities are available. For more information, (617) 376-5493.

North Quincy High School Hosts Foreign Language Night

NORTH QUINCY HIGH School's Foreign Language Department recently hosted its first Foreign Language Night. The event was a success as elementary and middle school students from throughout the city attended. North Quincy High School students led Tai Chi and salsa dancing demonstrations, helped younger children do arts and crafts, led a sing-a-long and played fun games. ENC A Cappella Choir Performs In New York City

Eastern Nazarene College's A Cappella Choir performed Tuesday at New York City's famed Lincoln Center, joining three other schools from across the nation in a concert performance of Faure's Requiem.

The concert, presented Tuesday evening in Lincoln Center's Avery Fisher Hall, featured the ENC choir performing with professional soloists as well as other choral groups from schools in Florida and Kentucky.

Prior to performing at the Lincoln Center, the A Cappella Chorus conducted choral workshops with local high school students and performed at a number of churches in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut as part of its annual spring tour.

Founded in 1938, ENC's A Cappella Choir has toured the world, with members performing in such locations as Austria, Germany, Romania and Boston's own Jordan Hall, where the choir is scheduled to perform at 4 p.m. Sunday, April 17.

For ticket information, call the ENC box office at 617-745-3715.

The choir's next international tour is scheduled for May, when the group will perform throughout Scandinavia.

Support The Wound Warrior Ministry Center Drive Saturday At Houghs Neck Church

This Saturday, April 16, the Quincy GOP Committee is sponsoring a drive to help support the Wounded Warrior Ministry Center at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center in Germany.

This is the hospital where ALL wounded military personnel from Iraq, Afghanistan, etc. are sent for treatment prior to being shipped back to the States. Most come direct from the battle field with nothing but their torn uniform on their backs. The hospital itself can only provide them minimum gear: hospital johnnies, paper flip flops, etc.

Military chaplains from all denominations maintain a supply of clothing and other items which they dispense to the troops so that they can wear something more and maintain their dignity. These chaplains rely on charity support to provide the needed items which include NEW (not used) sweat pants/shirts, athletic socks (ankle length), underwear, colored T-shirts in addition to toilet articles – the small travel sizes – tooth brushes, shaving cream, tooth paste, etc. Most military remain at the hospital only a few days before being sent back home so large economy sizes aren't practical.

Additionally, used DVD's are wanted. Each bed in the hospital has a TV with a DVD player attached and the only entertainment the wounded receive is watching movies. If you have any DVD's that you no longer watch, please donate them. We ask only that none with violence be included as these have proved to cause emotional problems to some.

This is an incredibly worthwhile endeavor and any help that you can provide will be deeply appreciated. The Committee will be the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Please stop by and show your support.

FWB Participating In Park Serve Day

The Friends of Wollaston Beach will partner with the DCR for The Commonwealth of Massachusetts Park Serve Day Saturday, April 16.

Saturday is a state-wide clean-up of state-owned parks and beaches.

Locally, a clean-up is scheduled Saturday, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friends of Wollaston Beach will focus on the northern cove across from CVS.

Volunteers will meet at 10:45 a.m. at the Moswetuset Hummock parking lot on East Squantum Street.

FWB volunteers are needed to help clean the areas where the DCR equipment cannot access.

Bags and gloves will be provided by the DCR to help volunteers remove the debris from numerous winter storms, said FWB President Neil McCole.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

John's BLT Delicious Pasta

Today's pasta recipe contains bacon, linguine and tomato and is called BLT pasta. My daughter-in-law Suzanne called me from their home in New York one day excited about this new recipe that she tried.

It is so popular around her house, that her son John (my grandson), home for spring break from Fordham University, prepared it for his friends Eva Marie and Phoebe. He used perciatelli for his pasta (a thick kind of spaghetti), but any favorite can be used.

The following recipe feeds two or three persons.

3 strips bacon (diced)
1 cup grape tomatoes (cut in half)
½ teaspoon sugar
½ cup thinly sliced leeks
¼ cup dry white wine
½ cup chicken stock
1 teaspoon red wine vinegar
¼ teaspoon red pepper flakes
4 ounces linguine (or a favorite)
1-cup fresh spinach leaves
¼ teaspoon minced fresh thyme

Cook the pasta according to directions.

In a large skillet, fry the bacon until crisp. Place on a paper towel. Pour off all but two tablespoons of the drippings.

Caramelize the tomatoes and sugar in the drippings over medium heat, about 5 minutes. Add the leeks and cook another couple of minutes.

Add the wine, simmer until nearly evaporated, and then add the broth, vinegar and pepper. Simmer for five more minutes.

Add the spinach, thyme and the bacon to the tomato mixture in the skillet. Transfer the cooked pasta and toss and season with salt and pepper to taste.

Grated cheese can be added if preferred.

Ruth Harcovitz At Ward 4 Community Center

Ruth Harcovitz was scheduled to perform songs by America's most popular tunesmiths Wednesday, April 13 at the Ward 4 Senior Center and Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

Refreshments and a meeting were set for 1 p.m. followed by the concert.

Admission was free.

The program was sponsored by a grant from the Quincy Arts Council, a local agency, and the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

RUTH HARCOVITZ

Harcovitz, a soprano, has been featured in summer concerts throughout Massachusetts.

A New England Conservatory graduate, her credentials include graduate study at the Vienna Academy of Music.

She has appeared as a soloist with choral societs and orchestras and is the recipient of hundreds of local cultural council grants.

ConCom To Revisit Neponset Landing Issues May 5

Public Comment Welcome, Chairman Says

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Conservation Commissioners will tackle Neponset Landing issues once again on May 5, according to Commissioner Maureen Glynn who said Monday that the public may speak at the meeting.

Those speakers will likely present proposals aimed at resolving decade-old disputes over public access to the Neponset River at Two Hancock Street, the site of the 12-story, 280-unit luxury complex built by Conroy Development of Stoughton.

Commissioners will consider compromises on the original agreements executed by Conroy for a walkway and amenities, a pier and kayak launch, and wetlands rejuvenation.

These are the same issues that Glynn and two other commissioners wrestled with in 2006. However, a Norfolk County court judge invalidated their original Order of Conditions due to the need for a public hearing. Commissioners discussed the project last week, but have not voted their decision.

At least five different groups have a special interest in the commission's decision as briefly described below:

• A citizens' group has litigation pending against Conroy for failing to execute the original agreement which requires public amenities.

• Friends of the Neponset Estuary (FNE), also, believe the original agreement can be enforced and support the construction of a pier and kayak landing.

• The Neponset River Watershed Association, NepRWA, is seeking public amenities but, apparently, would agree to develop a pier and kayak launch at a different Quincy site.

• Both Conroy, the developer, and Northwest Mutual Insurance, the current owner of the property, have financial stakes in the final decisions and in a quick resolution to the wrangling.

Representatives of each group had been operating separately with their different agenda until city councillors intervened earlier this year.

In February, City Council President Kevin Coughlin, along with councillors Doug Gutro, Ward 5, and Margaret Laforest, Ward 1, invited all the parties to a council committee meeting to discuss the Public Access Agreements.

The City Council then recommended that representatives from each faction begin meeting together to develop one single proposal for consideration by the Conservation Commission.

Several meetings have already been held and are continuing with one scheduled this week. The participants describe progress, but slow, very slow progress.

Coughlin described the multitude of issues and the goal of offering "public access and a certain number of amenities."

"There are multiple parties. I just think it's a process that will take some time," said Attorney Bryan Stevens who speaks for FNE.

Ian Cooke, Executive Director of NepRWA, echoed Stevens' assessment when he was contacted Monday.

"We're making some progress," Cooke said, but added, "I don't think we've got anything nailed down. I think I can safely say that all parties seem to agree on the walkway."

Other less controversial issues include benches, mutt mitts and a kiosk which would display historic information and notices of current events on the river.

While the different groups appear to agree on a walkway along the Neponset River, each vision of the walkway sounds somewhat different.

Some want a four-foot pathway which would have natural materials underfoot while others are lobbying for an 8 to 10 foot pathway.

"We're still hopeful of getting the eight to ten-foot, width," said Steve Pearlman, Advocacy Director for NepRWA.

Coughlin said his research appears to indicate that legal rulings on disability would require a walkway of at least five feet.

Pearlman also recommends a walkway of porous asphalt which absorbs moisture and, also, suggests possibly lighting on the side of Neponset Landing building.

Major issues still are plentiful as FNE members believe that Conroy's original agreement for a pier and kayak landing should be enforced.

Representatives of the groups plan to meet tonight (Thursday) for further discussion.

Efforts to reach William Keener, Chairman of the Conservation on Monday were unsuccessful. Other Conservation Commission members include Glynn, John T. Brennion, E. James Iorio, Jeffrey Graeber, Tom Carroll, and Stephen Striffler.

Zoning Proposals Topic April 20, 26

Ordinance Committee Chairman Douglas Gutro, Ward 5, has scheduled two meetings next week to discuss proposed changes in the city's zoning code.

Gutro will chair the first meeting set for Wednesday, April 20, and Councillor Michael McFarland will chair the meeting the following week on Tuesday, April 26.

Councillors are reviewing recommended changes in the first official overhaul of the city's zoning by-laws in over 30 years.

Covenant Church Holy Week Activities

The Covenant Church of Quincy, 315 Whitwell St. (corner of Granite Street) announces its schedule of Holy Week services.

On Sunday, April 17, at 10 a.m., Palm Sunday will be celebrated with traditional palm branches for the congregation and the sharing of the Passion Story.

On Good Friday, April 22, at noon, the congregation will join with the South Shore Evangelical Clergy Association in welcoming the community to the annual Ecumenical Good Friday worship service.

The service, centered around the sacrifice of Christ on the cross, will be held at The Evangelical Congregational Church of Atlantic. Several members of the community clergy will speak and there will be special music and a simple soup lunch will follow the worship.

The public is invited to the Covenant Church for the seventh annual Easter Fun Fest Saturday, April 23 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. There will be snacks, crafts and games for children as well as refreshments for parents and grandparents.

An Easter Egg Hunt will take place at 11 a.m. and at 11:15 a.m. the Easter Story will be told.

On Easter Sunday, April 24, the celebration of Jesus' resurrection will begin with the annual Sunrise Worship service. Sponsored by the South Shore Evangelical Clergy Association, the worship begins at 6:30 a.m. at Wollaston Beach between the Wollaston and Squantum Yacht Clubs.

At 10 a.m., the community is invited to worship at The Covenant Church. There will be special music by soloist Rachel Hallenbeck.

Rev. Karen Palmatier, pastor of the church, will bring the message of the morning.

'Rachel's Challenge' Alive, Well At N.Q. High School

By JOE REARDON

Kristin Houlihan slowly went through the stack of brightly colored paper, reading several of them out loud and shaking her head in wonderment at the thoughtfulness of the students who composed them.

The advisor to the North Quincy High chapter of S.A.D.D. (Students Against Drunk Driving), Houlihan knew that the "Rachel Challenge" phenomenon is alive and well in the school.

On the papers, which were cut out into the shape of a hand, students from NQHS wrote down specific goals they want to achieve, both this school year and long term.

"My goal in life is to get an A on my math test," Houlihan said, reading one of the cutouts. "I want to not care what people think of me."

The upbeat project, designed to spread goodwill and positive goals, came about after the students saw the presentation of "Rachel's Challenge" last fall. The documentary centered on Rachel Scott, the first victim in the shooting rampage Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold went on April 20, 1999. The pair killed 13 and injured 21 in the deadliest high school massacre in U.S. history.

Come September, Part 2 of Rachel's Challenge will be back at North Quincy as her brother, Craig Scott, will speak to the student body and faculty about his sister and her message. Houlihan and the members of S.A.D.D. emailed several photos of the influence "Rachel's Challenge" has had at the high school and Scott was moved by their commitment to the program.

RACHEL SCOTT, the first student killed in the Columbine shooting in 1999, is the inspiration behind "Rachel's Challenge" which focuses on spreading goodwill and kindness to others. Rachel's brother Craig Scott, who survived the Columbine shooting, will speak at North Quincy High in the fall.

"We're really looking forward to it," said Houlihan. "He's only speaking at three high schools in the country so we're very fortunate."

The impact of Rachel's Challenge is still very much alive in the Quincy North hallways. Senior Connor Flynn was especially moved by the presentation.

"Immediately after, you saw the changes in the hallway," said Flynn. "That's to be expected, but even today you can still see it. It's really a heartfelt story that really touches you. I want to go out and help someone, I want to start a chain reaction."

In her journals that her father found after her death, Scott had written of helping people and hoping to bring happiness to others, one person at a time.

"I have this theory that if one person can go out of their way to show compassion then it will start a chain reaction of the same," Scott wrote in her journal.

Also in the journal was the picture of Scott's traced hand. In it, she wrote that her hand would some day touch millions of lives.

"Rachel's Challenge" recently took it message to North Quincy High, where, along with all the students in the school, more than 200 parents attended and learned of the moving story of Scott's life.

"We just didn't want to let it go," said Houlihan. "These kids have such great goals. I was leery at first. I wasn't sure if they were impacted in the same way I thought they might be.

"The kids really were affected by it. We have hundreds of links now."

When teachers catch students doing something positive towards one of their classmates, a paper ring is given to that student. Members of S.A.D.D. have spent much of the school year linking the rings together and displaying them in visible locations throughout the building. The S.A.D.D. members are hoping to have in the neighborhood of 1,500 rings by the end of the school year.

Initially, members of S.A.D.D. had their doubts as to whether or not the kids would buy into the film, but by the time it ended, the auditorium was silent.

They needn't have worried. The students were more than sold on Rachel's message.

"You could tell how people were affected by it," said Siobhan Greene, a member of S.A.D.D. "Hopefully it will have a lasting impact on the rest of the school year."

"I liked it. I'm writing a college essay on it."

Another member of S.A.D.D., Chelsy Jusseaume, said the chain reaction approach has been very popular. Jusseaume fully believes there will be more than 1,500 links by the end of the school year.

"A lot of kids definitely knew what they wanted to write," she said.

One of the S.A.D.D. advisors, Kerry Ginty, said high school kids often draw attention from the community when negative things occur. The chain reaction program is such a positive commitment it gets the word out about good things the high school kids are involved in.

"I thought it was great," Ginty said of the Rachel's Challenge presentation. "I loved that the kids bought into it so much.

"It's (rings) based around getting recognition for good things. There's too much focus on negative things. The kids can do the program and say, 'This is the norm.'"

It wasn't just the kids who found Rachel's Challenge powerful and moving. Ginty found it to be inspirational. "It gives me the chills thinking about it," she said. "She was so forward thinking for a girl her age."

Senior Jim Scribi, a linebacker and offensive lineman on the Red Raiders' football team, had heard bits and pieces of Rachel's story, but found her message enlightening and motivating after attending the presentation. Scribi was very much on board with the chain reaction project.

"I think it's a great idea," said Scribi. "Everyone can see it when they're coming into the school."

S.A.D.D. member Winnie Akoury was impressed by the number of students who wrote their goals in the tracings. "The kids really took it seriously and did a good job with it," Akoury said.

Interfaith Social Services Walk, Family Fun Day At Pageant Field Saturday

Interfaith Social Services will host its 37th Annual South Shore Walk and Family Fun Day Saturday, April 16.

Hundreds of South Shore residents are expected to walk the streets of Quincy to raise awareness for impoverished local families.

The event offers family fun, exercise and an opportunity to help impoverished local families.

Walkers will assemble at Quincy's Pageant Field April 16. Registration begins at 11:30 a.m. The walk begins and ends at the field off of Merrymount Parkway.

"The Walk is much more than an important fundraiser for local families in need," said Interfaith's Executive Director Rick Doane. "This is a community event which raises awareness about poverty here on the South Shore and brings families together."

Walkers will take to the sidewalks in a route that wraps around some of Quincy's neighborhoods and along Wollaston beach. Festivities after the Walk include: hamburgers, hotdogs, ice cream, clowns, a bouncy house, face painting and live entertainment.

Many of the participants come from local youth groups, churches and schools.

The South Shore Walk is held every year rain or shine. Those who are interested in participating can download a pledge form online at: www.interfaithsocialservices.org or call 617-773-6203.

Police Cracking Down On Sea Street Speeders

road," said Dougan, adding, "We've had several serious accidents recently."

Dougan referred to a major accident last Saturday at Moffat Road and Algonquin Street.

Dougan said that radar is frequently used on Sea Street to track speeders who ignore the road's 30 to 35 MPH limit, but that it's a constant battle to contain the offenders.

While no one has an easy fix for Sea Street, Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest has repeatedly sought better signage and, more recently, solar markings for crosswalks after several accidents this year involved pedestrians.

Jack Gillon, the city's Traffic Engineer, said Tuesday that numerous efforts have been made to calm traffic despite a limited budget.

Just recently, Gillon said the city installed half dozen new signs and addressed other safety issues by correcting the median in 2005 as well as re-designing the yellow lines.

"There's nothing we could have done," Gillon said of last week's accident.

Gillon said he will analyze details of the accident report when the police department releases it and, then, he will make recommendations.

However, some studies and reports are never acted on as Gillon knows well.

"I did an in-depth report on the Sea Street Corridor in 2002," said Gillon.

A local reader described her experience related to Sea Street in a letter to The Quincy Sun this week. In the letter, she asked whether "automobile-related mayhem on Sea Street is so commonplace that it is not news."

She continued, "I can recall four vehicle homicides on Seas Street in the 21 years that I've lived off of it.... Two of my neighbors have been broadsided at Moffat Road."

Moffat Road was the location of last Saturday's accident.

Councillors Review Mayor's Proposals

Committee Focuses On Drainage, Roof Projects In $25M Capital Plan

City councillors last week analyzed proposals for drainage improvements and building repairs as they continued their review of Mayor Thomas Koch's $25 million Capital Improvement Plan at a meeting of the Public Works Committee.

The city's consultant Joseph Shea, Senior Vice President at Woodard & Curran, and Gary Cunniff, the city's Director of Public Buildings, testified at the meeting chaired by Councillor Joseph Finn.

Shea outlined many of the proposed $10 million drainage projects targeting flood problems across the city and said the projects will vastly reduce the number of flooding incidents.

However, Shea also cautioned that all flooding will not be eliminated particularly for 100-year events.

Even if all the money is authorized, there will still be occasional problems, according to Shea and Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest who said, "We can't say it's never going to happen again."

Koch's Capital Improvement Plan also addresses the neglect of municipal buildings, particularly school buildings and Cunniff described the dire need in many buildings.

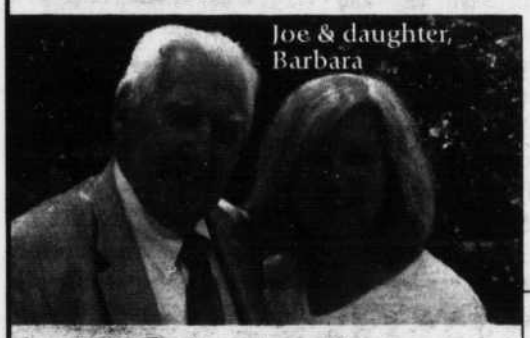
The list includes 16 schools that need new roofs, flashing, masonry, coating or re-pointing at an estimated cost of $2,397,750,

The cost projections developed in-house by city and school maintenance personnel run from a high of $500,000 for a new roof at the Bernazzani Elementary School to $10,000 for flashing at the Point Webster School.

According to the study, most of the school problems can be attributed to water infiltration.

Cunniff also briefed councillors on the $2.6 million estimated cost of repairs for city buildings including City Hall Annex ($350,000) and "Multiple Sites" at $427,000.

The major cost in city building repairs is a $1.5 million estimate to renovate Coddington Hall for the school administration.



As for the drainage proposals, those costs range from a high of $650,000 for the Broad Street Tide Gate to $100,000 to realign the Centre Street Drain Pipe.

Other drainage improvements include The Broad Street Tributary System Rehabilitation at $590,000 and the Sachem Brook and Sachem Street Tide Control System at $350,000 and $900,000 for the Miller Street, Cross Street, and Furnace Ave. Area Flood Control Station.

All of the proposed drainage and flood control projects would total $10 million which includes $2.5 million for the cleaning and inspection of Furnace Brook.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Survivors Benefits Explained

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security
Public Affairs Specialist in Quincy

The loss of a loved one can be painful. The death of a wage-earner upon whom a family depends also can be financially devastating.

If you're like most young or middle-aged workers, you probably think of Social Security only as a retirement program. But some of the Social Security taxes you pay go toward providing survivors insurance for workers and their families. Think of it as a life insurance policy you never knew you had — paid for by the same taxes that cover you for retirement or disability.

When you die, certain members of your family may be eligible for survivors benefits. These include widows, widowers (and divorced widows and widowers), children, and even dependent parents. In many cases, there also is a one-time lump-sum payment of $255 that can be made to a surviving spouse or minor children who meet certain requirements.

You may not think it will happen to you, but the stunning truth is that one in eight of today's 20-year-olds will die before reaching their full retirement age of 67. In fact, 98 of every 100 children could get benefits if a working parent dies. More than 6.4 million survivors receive benefits. The average Survivors benefit is $1,129 a month.

If you are a survivor, you should apply for survivors benefit right away. You can apply by telephone or at any Social Security office. Call us toll-free at 1-800-772-1213 (TTY: 1-800-325-0778). To help prepare you, here is the information we will need:

- Proof of death — either from a funeral home or a death certificate;
- Your Social Security number, as well as the deceased worker's;
- Your birth certificate;
- Your marriage certificate, if you are a widow or widower;
- Your divorce papers, if you are applying as a divorced widow or widower;
- Dependent children's Social Security numbers, if available, and birth certificates;
- Deceased worker's W-2 forms or Federal self-employment tax return for the most recent year; and
- The name of your bank and your account number so your benefits can be deposited directly into your account.

To learn more about survivors benefits, please read the online publication at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10084.html.

Visit the Survivors page at www.socialsecurity.gov/pgm/survivors.htm.

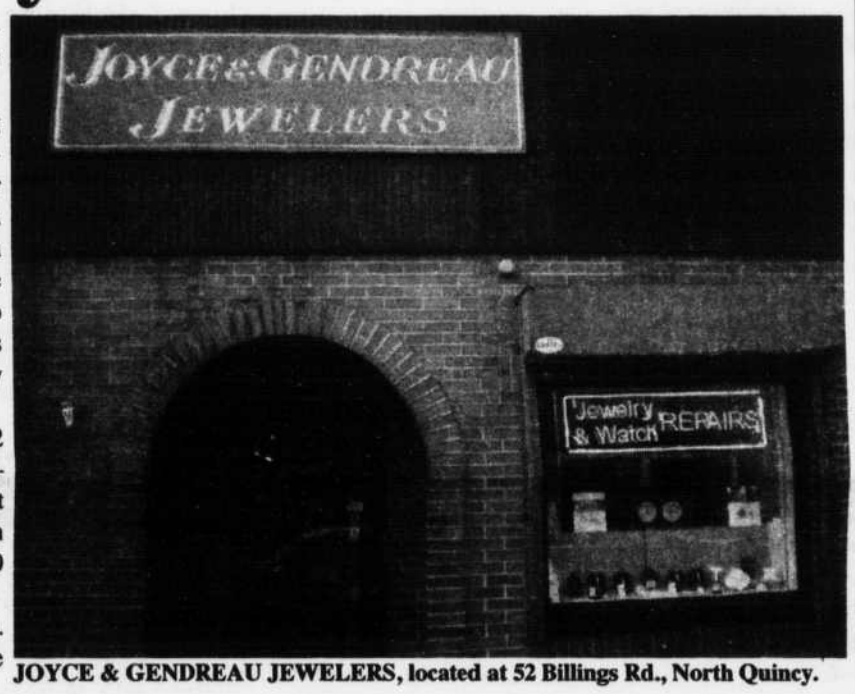
Joyce and Gendreau Jewelers has been a family-owned business since 1910 and four generations of Gendreaus have worked with Boston and South Shore families helping to celebrate their most treasured moments. Today Frank Jr., David and Denise Gendreau continue the tradition of excellence that was the hallmark of the business started by their great-grandfather over 100 years ago!



As one of the city's longest established jewelry stores, this brothers/sister team is working together, moving the store forward, keeping it current, while maintaining the stellar reputation that their father, grandfather and great-grandfather have set before them. We know there is a lot of competition, but truly feel we have something unique to offer. Our family loves the excitement of the jewelry business and is eager about developing relationships with our customers. If there is one thing we want all of our customers to know or remember, it's that we are completely committed to carrying on the tradition of fine craftsmanship and personal customer service that began long ago with our first store.

In addition to carrying both traditional and contemporary styles by well-known designers, Joyce and Gendreau Jewelers offers unique pieces that compliment an extensive line of products. We are dedicated to providing our customers with the best selection of jewelry, exceptional service, extraordinary quality and affordable pricing.

As you anticipate buying that Mother's Day, First Communion, graduation, birthday or anniversary gift, we invite you to come in and let us help you choose a present to celebrate that special occasion. We also carry a selection of baby gifts and jewelry. Flexible Layaway Plans are available.

Conveniently located at 52 Billings Road in North Quincy, there is both lot and street parking available. We are open Tuesdays-Fridays 9:30-5:30 and Saturdays 9:30-4:00.

A Reverse Mortgage May Be A Positive Financial Move For Seniors

(NAPSA)-If you are an adult with elderly parents, you may be used to getting periodic updates on the status of their physical health. When it comes to the state of their financial health, however, elderly parents may not be quite as forthcoming. Many adult children are surprised when they find that their elderly parents are actually struggling to make ends meet.

That's why now may be the right time to take a closer look at your parents' financial well-being. Here are some signs of possible problems:

- Stacks of unpaid bills
- Late-payment notices or calls from creditors
- A home that has fallen into disrepair.

According to Tim McDonald, head of Wells Fargo's Senior Products Group, some seniors may simply forget to pay bills or deposit checks, don't have enough income to cover their expenses or have become physically unable to write checks. Additionally, older homeowners may avoid taking on home repair projects because of costs.

"Most of the time, parents won't let on when they're having trouble managing things on their own," said McDonald. "But there will be red flags around the house when money is an issue."

That may be the time to call a family meeting, noted McDonald. "Those interactions can be a good way to learn about an elderly parent's financial situation."

A Reverse Mortgage May Be an Option

For many people, retirement means limited income and in_creasing expenses because of health care costs and prescription drug payments. A reverse mortgage loan can help seniors take care of their own needs and live more comfortably, and ease the concerns of adult children.

"Adult kids are taking care of their own families, and many are preparing to retire themselves. They shouldn't have to worry about their parents' finances at the same time," added McDonald. "A reverse mortgage loan can bring everyone some peace of mind."

How it Works

A reverse mortgage loan enables senior homeowners age 62 or older to convert a portion of their home's equity into tax-free proceeds without the burden of making monthly mortgage payments like a traditional mortgage. Seniors can use the proceeds for any purpose, including daily living expenses, home repairs, prescription drugs or long-term health care costs.

Interest accrues on the amount of money withdrawn, but instead of the borrower making monthly payments like one does on a traditional mortgage, the loan balance is due when the last surviving borrower no longer occupies the home as his or her primary residence.

Said McDonald, "The last thing retirees want to do is worry about money. A senior can turn to a reverse mortgage loan and receive funds in one lump sum, monthly proceeds or as a line of credit."

As a key consumer protection, all potential borrowers must participate in an education session with a HUD-approved counselor to determine if a reverse mortgage is the best option for the senior. All borrowers are responsible for paying all taxes and insurance as well.

A New Type of Reverse Mortgage

One of the latest developments in reverse mortgage products is the HECM Saver, which allows homeowners access to a lower portion of their home equity with lower upfront costs than a standard HECM reverse mortgage. The lower cost comes by way of a significantly reduced upfront-mortgage insurance premium.

HECM Saver loans have different qualification requirements than traditional home equity financing, and offer the same features and benefits of all FHA-insured HECM reverse mortgage loans, such as flexible payout options, no income or credit score qualifications and no monthly mortgage payments as compared to a traditional mortgage.

SENIORS CAN use the proceeds from a reverse mortgage for any purpose, including daily living expenses, home repairs or long-term health care costs.

Additionally, Wells Fargo currently offers no origination or servicing fees on all its FHA-insured HECM reverse mortgages, including the HECM Saver. The reduced fees mean senior borrowers will save more money upfront and over the life of their loans.

Social Security and Medicare Are Not Affected

Proceeds from a reverse mortgage loan are not considered in_come, so Social Security and Medi_care are not affected. Local program offices or attorneys should be consulted to determine how or if reverse mortgage proceeds might affect eligibility for other programs, such as Medicaid.

There are no income or credit score qualifications, except when reverse mortgage loan proceeds are used for purchase transactions. In this instance, verification of income sufficient to pay real estate taxes, insurance and maintenance costs on the borrower's new property is required. If the departure residence will be retained as an investment property or second home, verification of income sufficient to pay any mortgage payments for that property is also required.

Split Outdoor Pipe Disables Spigot

Q: I'm not sure how, but when checking the outdoor spigots this spring I noticed that the steel pipe behind one of them had swelled and split. I had turned off water to this pipe last fall so I'm not sure how this happened, and I don't see any water damage in the basement. Why did this occur? What's the cheapest fix so I can use this spigot again soon? – Frank T., Dover, N.H.

A: I'm not sure exactly why it happened either. Perhaps if the tap wasn't fully drained after you turned off water at the nearest shutoff valve, perhaps some water pooled just behind the spigot and, when a hard freeze occurred, the water froze, expanded and split the pipe.

I'm also not sure there's a truly cheap fix for this. Duct tape will keep water from spraying all over the place but won't stop a leak and will quickly break down. You need to keep the water turned off and the pipe drained, and contact a plumber as soon as possible. The pipe will need to be replaced, perhaps all the way back to the shutoff valve.

Get a written estimate – two or more if you're not sure how much the job should cost – and decide from there when and how you'll have the pipe replaced. Because it sounds like you've got galvanized steel pipe, the plumber will recommend a different material (galvanized steel isn't used anymore -- period) and he or she may recommend replacing all the steel pipes, though probably not all at once.

Meantime, it would be a good idea to check all of the other pipes leading outside for similar damage. Hopefully, that's the only one you have to deal with right now. Also, since the Northeast is still at risk in April of more hard freezes occurring, keep the outside spigots turned off and drained for a few more weeks. Homes with newer plumbing don't have to worry as much about outside pipes freezing and splitting in early spring, but older pipe systems need to be more closely watched.

HOME TIP: When turning on outdoor faucets, hook up garden hoses and sprinklers and run water through them to make sure they work properly and haven't sprung leaks.

Avoid Foreclosure Rescue Scams: 10 'Lines' To Beware

(NAPSA)–Following a few suggestions can help save many homeowners struggling with mortgages and other debt from seeing things go from bad to worse.

For one thing, you can get free assistance from a housing counselor approved by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development at (888) 995-4673 and makinghomeaffordable.gov.

As for people or companies offering mortgage modification assistance or foreclosure relief, Federal Trade Commission rules ban advance fees, require clear disclosures and prohibit false or misleading claims.

Experts at the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency suggest you beware of these 10 lines:

1. "Pay us $1,000 and we'll save your home." Companies cannot collect fees until you have a written, acceptable offer from your lender and a written description of the key changes to your mortgage.

2. "I guarantee I will save your home-trust me." Beware of guarantees like this one. Providers must give you realistic evidence for any claim they make.

3. "Sign over your home and we'll let you stay in it." Signing over the deed gives the recipient the power to evict you, raise your rent or sell your house-and you'll still have to pay the mortgage.

4. "Stop paying your mortgage." Don't trust anyone who tells you to stop making mortgage payments to your lender or servicer, even if that person promises to do it for you. You could lose your home and hurt your credit rating.

5. "If your lender calls, don't talk to them." Providers cannot tell you to stop communicating with your lender or servicer.

6. "Your lender never had the legal authority to make a loan." Don't listen to anyone who claims "secret laws" can erase your debt.

7. "Just sign this now; we'll fill in the blanks later." Read and understand everything you sign. Never let anyone else fill out paperwork for you. Don't let anyone pressure you into signing anything.

8. "Call (800) Fed-Loan." Beware of companies that imitate official federal programs. Providers must tell you they are affiliated with the government.

9. "File for bankruptcy and keep your home." Filing for bankruptcy stops foreclosure only temporarily. If you don't make your mortgage payments, the bankruptcy court will eventually let the lender foreclose. Some scam artists may file bankruptcy in your name, without your knowledge, to temporarily stop foreclosure and give you the impression that he or she has negotiated a new agreement on your behalf.

10. "Why haven't you replied to our offer? Do you want to live on the streets?" High-pressure tactics signal trouble.

You can learn more at help withmybank.gov, makinghomeaffordable.gov, consumerfinance.gov, consumeraction.gov and nw.org.

DON'T FALL for foreclosure scams. Let a HUD-approved counselor help.

O'Donnell Asks AG To Examine Whether Large Lenders Have Failed To Pay Recording Fees

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell announces he has requested Attorney General Martha Coakley to examine the issue of whether the large lending conglomerates have failed to pay the recording fees associated with the sale and assignment of mortgages as mandated by Massachusetts Law.

O'Donnell's request comes on the heels of the recent Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court's ruling U.S. Bank v. Ibanez, in which the Commonwealth's highest court stated that when a holder of a mortgage seeks to exercise its right to foreclose upon a home that mortgage holder must prove that it is the valid owner of the mortgage at the time of foreclosure.

The Ibanez case raises multiple issues concerning the practices of huge lending conglomerates utilizing the Mortgage Electronic Recording System, Inc. or "MERS" to keep track of the numerous and multiple sales and assignments of average homeowners' mortgages.

"Prior to 1995, the sale or assignment of a mortgage was traditionally confirmed by a recording at the Registry of Deeds." O'Donnell said. "The transparency of this practice not only afforded safeguards and protections for homeowners but resulted in revenue to the Commonwealth, the counties, and our local communities."

In tough economic times, O'Donnell added, when "Local aid is being cut, public safety shortchanged, and drastic adjustments made the revenue loss implication cannot be overstated and warrants inquiry."

O'Donnell noted that while local community banks and lenders appeared to have followed long held recording practices the failure of the huge lending conglomerates to follow suit in Norfolk County may have resulted in anywhere from $1.5 to $3.1 million in lost revenue in 2010 alone.

"It is a question of fundamental fairness and one to which I will personally support the Attorney General's efforts at examining," O'Donnell said.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information.

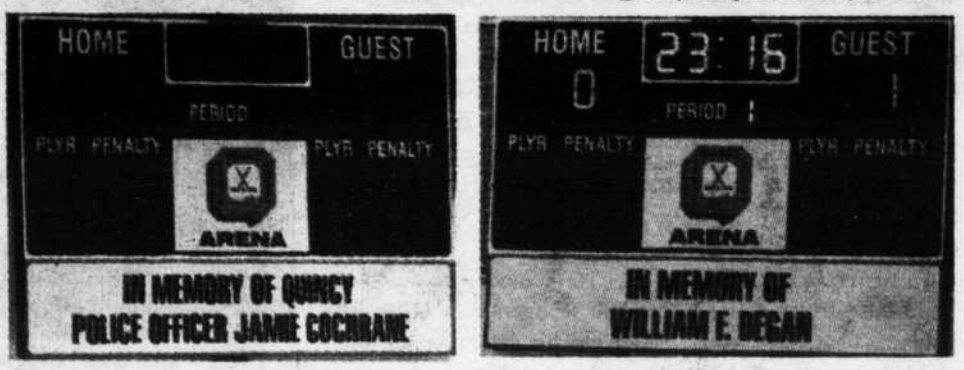
A Friendly Game of Hockey For A Good Cause

THE QUINCY POLICE DEPARTMENT was well represented on the ice last Saturday. The QPD and QFD joined forces to play against seniors from North Quincy and Quincy High School to help raise money to fund the two programs in the future.



MEMEBRS SENIOR CLASS from the North Quincy and Quincy High School hockey teams got together for a group photo before the start of last Saturday's charity hockey game at the Quincy Youth Arena between the seniors and members of the Quincy Police and Fire Departments. Proceeds raised will go to fund the hockey programs at both schools.

THE QYA unveiled two new state-of-the-art scoreboards, one at either end of the rink, before the start of the charity game. The scoreboard on the left was dedicated In Memory of Quincy Police Officer Jamie Cochrane, while the scoreboard on the right was dedicated In Memory of (US Marshal) William F. Degan.

Young Raiders Opened Season With 4-2 Win Over Hanover; Playing In Tournament Next Week

North Quincy Primed For Return To Tournament

By SEAN BRENNAN

A collection of talented underclassmen will lead the charge for North Quincy in its quest for a return to the postseason tournament as the program returns only five players off last year's team.

Last spring, the Red Raiders finished one game shy of qualifying after dropping a late-game lead to Scituate HS in the season finale and ending the season with an 8-10 record – one victory shy of inclusion.

North Quincy (1-0 overall) has already gotten off on the right track in 2011. The Raiders opened their campaign with a solid 4-2-win over Hanover on April 6 as junior pitcher Jackie Hughes threw a complete game, striking out four and sophomore shortstop Liz Kelly (two-run triple) and junior outfielder Julia Murphy (two RBI) provided the offense in a game played at Mitchell-McCoy Field in Quincy.

"It was a great way to start the season," said NQHS coach Kerry Ginty on Monday. "We still have a lot of stuff to work on but I was pleased with the initial effort from the girls. We spent a lot of time (in the pre-season) working on getting better and the effort displayed against Hanover is a testament to how excited they all were to get started."

"We had a couple of timely hits," Ginty continued, "and it was good to get that first win against a good team."

Hughes offers Ginty a strong piece at softball's most important position: starting pitcher. The junior worked her way into a prominent role last season, substituting in some games for since-graduated Sammi Bonanni. The experience that she gained should give her a leg up as the 2011 season continues on. Her composure and potential dominance was on full display against the Indians.

"Jackie did a great job against Hanover," said Ginty. "She is going to be our bulldog. We feel like she is a real good pitcher and she should give us a chance to be in every game we play."

In softball the most important positional player is usually the shortstop, and, again, North Quincy is blessed to have one of the most talented players in the Patriot League manning that spot in the infield. Sophomore Liz Kelly is a star in the making and should be a rock for the Red Raiders, both defensively and offensively this spring.

"Liz is an outstanding shortstop," said Ginty. "She is good all-around and we are excited about what she may do this year and throughout the rest of her career at North Quincy."

Hughes and Kelly are joined again this spring by returnees Tenley McKee (senior outfielder), Emma Ainsley (junior third baseman) and Taylor McKay (junior outfielder). Senior Justine Lomano will handle the catching duties this season while sophomores Kelly Thompson (second base), Kathleen Tansey (utility player) and Christine Kelliher (first base) and junior Julia Murphy and senior Amanda Yout (outfielder) will also see considerable playing time for the Red Raiders.

Two freshmen, Natasha Sautter and Steph DiPietro, may be called upon to make contributions as the season moves along.

There is lots of potential, but not that much experience, so the five returners are going to be asked to shoulder the early season load, which is something the Ginty is banking on.

"We are young but we have some players with varsity experience," she said. "These kids all have good softball IQ and I hoping that we can use that to our advantage. We have the talent to be in every game and be competitive and this team should surprise some teams."

The most important leader on the team could well be Emma Ainsley. Last year she played second base, but this season, she has shifted over to the hot corner. Ainsley can flat out rake. She batted over.400 last season and her bat will be key to any success the Red Raiders have on the diamond.

Taylor McKay will direct the outfield defense from centerfield, providing a final line of defense for North Quincy.

The goals for the Red Raiders, at the start of every season, are making the postseason and winning a Patriot League crown. Ginty understands that the league is loaded with teams like Quincy, Silver Lake and Middleboro as the teams to beat. But she feels good about her team's chances.

"We want to make some waves and our win over Hanover was a good start," she said. "It is a tough league."

The Red Raiders were set to play two league games earlier this week. North Quincy played at Hingham on Monday and at Middleboro Tuesday. Today (Thursday) the team will travel to Whitman-Hanson (4 p.m. start) before heading to Winthrop HS to play in a school vacation tournament on April 18-19.

14th Annual Quincy Lions Club Run/ Walk for Sight April 23

The Quincy Lions Club will hold its 14th Annual Run/ Walk for Sight on Sat., April 23 at Pageant Field. Online registration is currently open at www.quincylionsclub.org/2011-Run-Walk-For-Sight.html.

Day-of-race registration will begin April 23 at 9 a.m., followed by the children's 1K race at 10:30 a.m. The adult 5K run/walk, which is on a course certified by U.S. Track & Field, begins at 11 a.m. Prizes will be awarded to race winners in a number of categories and the first 200 registrants will receive a free race T-shirt and runner's giveaway bag.

The registration fee is $20 for adults and $5 for the children's 1K race and includes a buffet lunch following the races. There will also be entertainment and a prize raffle.

"The Run/Walk for Sight is a fun event for the whole family," said Quincy Lions Club President Loretta McTiernan. "The local community has been very supportive of the Lions Club's efforts to help blind and visually impaired individuals and we hope everyone will come out and enjoy this fun and worthwhile event."

Proceeds from the Run/ Walk benefit eye research and the Quincy Lions Club's community service activities, including providing free eye exams and free eyeglasses for local residents in need, offering free vision and health screenings, providing college scholarships to local high school students and more.

Running For Children's Hospital's 'Miles for Miracles' Team; Training Consisted of Running/Biking

Mike Miller Ready To Conquer His First Marathon

By JOE REARDON

When Mike Miller was suddenly forced to the sidelines with a leg injury in January, the thought of not competing in this year's Boston Marathon was never really an option.

Miller, though, was not going to let the painful injury interfere with getting in shape for the Patriots' Day classic.

Instead of packing in the miles running for the five weeks, the 43-year-old Miller got on his bike and traversed the hills of Quincy's neighborhoods, including the gut-wrenching inclines that make up the Blue Hills. At a rate of 50-miles per day, Miller was able to maintain his cardiovascular strength throughout and is on pace to run a solid race in his Boston Marathon debut over 26.2 miles.

Miller is also hoping to raise $4,000 in donations for the Children's Hospital as part of the "Miles for Miracles" team. The runners make a commitment to raise funds that are critical in helping the prestigious hospital continue high quality patient care, medical research, recruitment and training, and community health initiatives.

It's easy for Miller to think of the trials the kids at Children's Hospital go through when he starts to hurt. "I think to myself, 'How can I even think about complaining,'" he said.

Miller has plenty of road racing and triathlon experience, but he knew when he committed to running Boston that he was wading into unchartered water. Miller has run various sections of the course several times and has come to the realization that the Hopkinton-to-Boston layout is a thinking man's race.

He remembers watching Bill Rodgers race at Boston when he was a young boy and what his mother told him at the time. "She said it takes a very special person and you'll have to train for years," Miller recalled with a laugh. "I told her that some day I would run it."

QUINCY'S MIKE MILLER will be running in his first Boston Marathon next Monday. Miller, who has trained by running and biking the streets of Quincy, is running in support of Children's Hospital's "Miles for Miracles."

Miller has put in some heavy-duty, head-shaking workouts to prepare for the big day. He ran the first 21-1/2 miles of the course in February and followed it up with a 21-mile bike ride, and in March, Miller sandwiched bike rides of seven and 23 miles around the Half of Quincy 13.1-mile race he competed in.

Miller found the unforgiving downhill's of Boston far tougher than the inclines. "The downhill's were the toughest part," said Miller. "The first time I ran it I didn't even realize it was Heartbreak Hill."

Running conservatively at the start is key to Miller running a strong race. His game plan is to run slow in the opening downhill miles through Hopkinton and Ashland then "rev it up" on the flat sections.

"Normally everything has to be fast for me so it will be tough," Miller said of biding his time in the early miles.

During workouts over the Boston course, Miller let himself go on the long downhill from Wellesley Center to Newton Lower Falls, but started to feel his quads become incredibly sore with the pounding. Miller's veteran training partners have also advised him to throw caution at the downhills.

"They've been saying to take it slow because of the hills," Miller said. "I was shocked at how hard it is on the quads. I could really feel it. It really is an intimidating course."

Once this year's Boston is in the archive, Miller has several options he's weighing. He'd like to tackle the super-fast Marine Corps Marathon in Washington, D.C., as well as compete in some local triathlons. The Iron Man Triathlon is very much on Miller's radar and he'll eventually look to conquer it.

During the summer his training consists of a half-mile swim in the morning, 20 miles on the bike and another three to five miles running in the evening. Saturdays are reserved for his long bike ride of 50 miles.

"I know it's (Iron Man) within reach," said Miller. "I just have to commit myself to that year of training. It's enticing, that's for sure."

Presidents Already Showing Signs Of Improvement

By JOE REARDON

They took their knocks, punches and lumps last spring but it just may be time for the Quincy High volleyball team to dish out this year what was served to them in 2010.

Save for one graduate, the Presidents have their entire roster back and are off to a solid start at 2-2. The goal is a simple one: After finishing 5-12 last season, Stefan Miranda's team wants to reach the .500 mark and assure itself a berth in the postseason.

"They have a lot of energy," said Miranda. "They're looking to build on last season, which obviously didn't turn out the way they wanted."

Quincy has two huge tests this week with back-to-back away games against Greater New Bedford Voke and Barnstable on Thursday and Friday. "They're two long trips against two good teams," said Miranda.

Another aspect of Quincy that can't be overlooked is the influence of Miranda himself. A star volleyball player at Xaverian and Roger Williams College, Miranda brings with him big dose of credibility and a wealth of knowledge of the game.

"I think it helps," said Miranda. "Every coach can tell the players what he wants from them, but sometimes it's easier to show them."

The Presidents waited little time letting the Southern Alliance League know they had no intention of being close to the league's doormats. Quincy came out spinning on all cylinders in its season-opener against North Quincy. The Presidents kept their poise throughout and shutdown the Red Raiders with a big 3-2 victory. The win was especially satisfying after being dismantled by North Quincy in their two matches last spring.

"Last year they swept us 2-0, so beating them, especially in the first game of the year was a good win," said Miranda.

The "problem" Miranda believes he'll have to keep on top of is something most coaches could only wish for. The second-year coach will stress to the Presidents the importance of not getting too up for games to the point where they lose their focus.

"We need to work on consistency," he said. "Sometimes they get a little too emotional."

Quincy, though, has shown glimpses of being able to play teams tough for long stretches late in the sets. In their first five contests, three have gone to five games. "We've been put in that situation most of the time," said Miranda. "They're getting the tough plays when they need them."

The core group of players is solid and should be competitive against the top teams in the league. Co-captain Tim McNally handles the center and libero positions. Tough and talented, McNally is the spiritual leader of the team and is as mentally tough a player as anyone in the league.

"On the court he's a leader," Miranda said. "He's definitely the mental leader when he's out there for us."

Co-captain Zerick Fadairo holds down the outside and middle slots and is the team's best offensive player. Fadairo is at his best when he's dropping in quick points from the outside. Co-captain David Nhan is a solid force on the outside and brings stability to the other players on the court with his consistency.

The rest of the starting lineup has plenty of talent in Daniel Mongo, Duy Vo, Phu Tang and John Bottary. The group coming off the bench is a good one as well with Mario Cace, Dan Nguyen, Caique Reginaldo and Simon Hin all expected to see plenty of action.

QHS Baseball Alumni Association/ Hall of Fame Accepting Nominations

The Quincy High School Baseball Alumni Association and Hall of Fame Committee are now accepting nominations for induction into the Quincy High School Baseball Hall of Fame.

The day and time of the 2011 QHS Baseball Hall of Fame banquet will be announced at a later date.

Any Quincy High School graduate who played at least two years of varsity baseball (must have played their senior year) and graduated before 2002 is eligible for nomination. Please include the name and years played when nominating someone.

All nominations should be sent to: QHS Baseball Alumni Chairman, c/o Joe Brill, 87 Woodcliff Rd., Quincy, MA 02169. For additional information, contract Brill at 617-733-8026.

Youth Clinics To Be Held In June

A Quincy Football Clinic will be conducted June 27-30 from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. at North Quincy High School. This three-day clinic is for children currently in grades 2-8.

Applications were handed out to all children at school, but, if you have additional questions call Jim Connor at 617-838-9720 or email him at jimconnor7474@gmail.com for inquiries and information on the registration process.

During the same three-day period (June 27-30), there is also a Quincy Soccer Clinic planned at the Merrymount Elementary School; this three-day clinic will be held from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. and is for boys and girls currently in grades 1-8.

As was the case with the football clinic, applications were handed out to all children at school, otherwise call Connor at 617-838-9720 or email dinamg04@hotmail.com for additional information.

Team Has Qualified For Two Consecutive Postseasons

NQ Volleyball Looking To Make Some Tournament Noise

By JOE REARDON

A trip to the postseason for the third consecutive year is the first goal that must be reached by the North Quincy High volleyball team. This time around, head coach Jason Cai's 14-player squad wants to do its fair share of damage once the tournament gets underway.

One thing that's also inevitable is that North Quincy will surprise a lot of clubs that look at their season of a year ago.

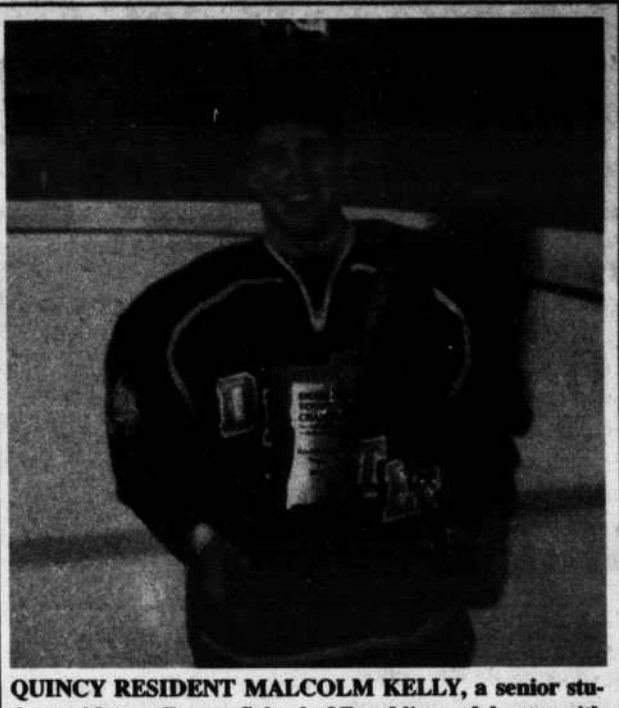
This year's team is vastly different from the North Quincy club of a year ago. The Red Raiders slipped into the tourney last spring with a 7-7 record and fell to a tough Brockton team 3-0 in first-round action. Sitting at 3-1 on the season as of Monday morning Cai believes North Quincy will put together a longer tournament run later this spring.

"A lot of them are returning varsity players and they have a good repoire with each other," said Cai, a 2005 graduate of NQ who captained the volleyball team his senior year. "So far this year, they've played very well. We're working on more passing to the center and more communication. That would help a lot."

How far the Red Raiders advance in the tournament has as much to do with who they play as it does with how well they are playing. But don't expect this North Quincy roster to be intimidated by any club they face.

"How far we go I'm not sure of," said Cai. "I know the team can make the tournament. I think it depends on who we're matched up with."

North Quincy's greatest asset may be the team's endurance and ability play hard as it delves deeper into a set. "They don't give up," said Cai. "Even if it goes four or five games they play all the way through."



The team has an impressive lineup with Derek Seto and Aris Bega, both returning South Alliance All Stars, back in the fold. Seto has the jumping ability to score key points at the center position while Bega has proven himself to be a deadly accurate outside hitter. Defensive specialist Johnny Ly brings plenty of experience to the libero position and will be vital in stopping opponents from putting on scoring runs. At 6-foot-1 Jiabo Shang is the tallest player on the squad and will be tough to defend at the net.

The Red Raiders are loaded up and down the roster with the likes of Jason Ng, Matt Macphil, Mike Chan, Mike Tran, Raymond Chiu, Alex Chan, Andy Sok, Andy Yau, Elijah Bun and Felix Mann. Much of the team's success, Cai believes, will be determined by the success of the underclassmen on the gym floor.

"I'd like to see the sophomores step up and play a bigger role on offense," said Cai.

This week's games will give Cai a better picture of how North Quincy sizes up against strong competition. The Red Raiders have already chalked up a huge win against a very tough New Bedford team and have dates with both Brockton and Greater New Bedford Voke coming up.

"They're really going to tell me what I need to work on more both offensively and defensively," Cai said.

QUINCY RESIDENT MALCOLM KELLY, a senior student-athlete at Dexter School of Brookline, celebrates with the New England Prep School Championship Trophy after Dexter defeated the New Hampton School of New Hampshire for the NE Prep School Hockey crown. Dexter finished the season with an impressive 22-4-3 record.

AFC Street Soccer Begins Friday

America FC will start their quarterly Street Soccer activity this Friday (April 15) evening from 6-7:30 p.m. at Quarry Hills Field. The activity is free and is open to any local youth soccer player ages U10 to U18 wishing to play pick-up soccer.

Interested players must simply arrive at the site by 6 p.m., they are then divided into age-appropriate teams and tournament-style play begins. The size and number teams depends on the number of players present.

In its third year, the Street Soccer event was simply designed to give local players an opportunity to engage in a fun and healthy activity on Friday nights. The event picked up steam last summer after club organizers decided to host it during the summer months; at the time, AFC club teams were participating in a similar activity in inner city Boston.

"Most of the inner city kids we were playing against were inherently more skilled than our players," said AFC club president James Abundis. "Soccer is simply a sport where you learn by doing – by play it a lot."

Event organizers were surprised last summer when they opened up a summer street soccer activity and a group of over 30 high school-age players showed up to play every Friday night.

"That was out largest age group since we started playing street soccer," stated Abundis.

During the one-and-a-half-to two-hour activity, there is no coaching. Organizers simply organize the players and supervise the activity. The Street Soccer event is scheduled every Friday through mid-June and plans are to continue the activity through summer and mid-fall just like last year.

For additional information, contact Abundis at 617-472-1278.

Residents Shining At College Level

Quincy pitchers continue to dominate at the Division I collegiate level.

Over the weekend, Scott Warwick of Fairfield University overwhelmed Niagara University as he struck out ten batters and allowed on three hits over 6-2/3 innings. Warwick improved his season record to 3-3; he is averaging a strikeout per inning pitched.

Last Friday, Glen Misho of the University of Massachusetts-Amherst beat Dayton to improve his record to 4-1 overall; he scattered six hits and struck out four in six innings of work.

Positional Players

Quincy positional players are building on their success from last season.

Michael LeBel, a junior at the University of Rhode Island, had a solid weekend playing against St. Louis University. He had four hits, including a double. For the season, LeBel leads the team in triples, and is second in runs scored, doubles and home runs. He is already second all-time on the Rams' list of triples hit.

Tom Conley, also a junior and Misho's battery mate at UMass, has developed into a leading defensive catcher. He has thrown out 45% of runners attempting to steal; he also ranks as one of the team's leaders in RBI.

Ricky Salvucci, a sophomore at Northeastern University, has a .308 batting average this season.

Matt Rodriguez, a sophomore at Curry College, belted a walk-off home run on Sunday in the first game of a doubleheader with Salve Regina and Conor Cavanaugh, a senior at Lasell College, is batting .347 and leads the team in home runs, doubles, RBI and slugging percentage; he was named the Greater Northeast Athletic Conference Player of the Week on March 22.

Quincy Softball Players

Olivia Berry, a freshman catcher at Trinity College and a QHS graduate, has been hitting for both average and power. Berry's batting average is .316 and her slugging percentage is .579. She leads the team in home runs.

Kasey O'Connell, a sophomore second baseman at UMass-Boston, has continued her fine play from last season. She is one of the team's leading batters at .303.

Quincy Youth Basketball 'March Madness' Winners

Quincy Youth Basketball concluded its eighth season back on March 6 when the playoffs wrapped up in front of an enthusiastic crowd at the Quincy High School gym.

QYB would like to thank everyone who contributed to another successful season and the league congratulates the following teams who emerged victorious in the championship round including:

Touch Base, the Boys Grades 3-5 Division, coached by Tim Kelly and John Kelly; Feenan Financial, Girls Grades 3-5 Division, coached by John Terranova and John Lyons, and Roche Brothers, Quirk Auto Dealers Division (Boys Grades 6-8), coached by Ricky Richardson and Brian Collins.

QYB would also like to congratulate the 8th Grade Travel Team, QYB Travel, Presidents Division, who competed in the Final Four in the South Shore Youth Basketball League (SSYBL) playoffs held in Braintree on March 25. Quincy Youth Basketball and QYB Travel, Presidents Division, hosted the Championship Playoff Games for SSYBL on March 27 at the new QHS gym; activities included three-point shoot-outs as well as the championship games for 6-8 grade teams from Hingham, North Quincy, Marshfield and Scituate.

On April 2, three eighth graders from QYB Travel, Presidents Division, Devin Davis, Dayvon Jones and Drew Myers, competed in the SSYBL All-Star Game (North v. South Teams) held in Rockland – they were members of the winning North Team.

The following eighth graders will be leaving the QYB program this year:

Jonathan Bain, Cole Bishop, Troy Bishop, Sean Cavanagh, Jimmy Chludzinski, Andrew Cook, Zachary Dangora, Devin Davis, Joseph Early, Evan Fienberg, David Free, Chris Golden, Conner Goulart, John Grasselli, Abraham Hoti, Maxwell Hurley, Dayvon Jones, Samuel Keane, James Lam, Alex Linskey, Nicholas Locken, Steven Marstjepovic, Cameron McHugh, Drew Myers, Nicholas Pham, Stephen Scolaro and Carl Zapata.

QYB is currently accepting registrations for the 2011-2012 season. Register by April 30 at the current rate of $116 ($65 for grades 1-2 instructional division). Fees will increase after April 30. Team sponsors and donations are also welcome for the upcoming season.

Visit www.quincyyouthbasketball.net for registration forms, sponsor and donation forms and additional information.

Tips On Dealing With Bullying

WHEN IT comes to bullying, adults can stop it, fix it and prevent it from happening again.

(NAPSA)-According to the ex_perts at the National_Education Association (NEA), one caring adult can make all the difference in the life of a child who's being bullied.

It's crucial for bullied students to know which adults in their school or community they can go to in their time of distress-adults who will really listen to them and then act on their behalf. Bullied students who go it alone because they don't know to whom to turn are far more likely to fall behind in their studies, get sick, miss school and drop out-even commit suicide.

Whether you're a parent, a teach_er or a friend of the family, there are six steps you can take to help the children in your life.

1. Take complaints seriously. Don't dismiss it as "just teasing." Listen to the problem and tell the child you'll take appropriate action. No allegation about bullying should be ignored because the charge seems improbable or because the behavior seems unlikely to recur or is perceived as a "harmless rite of passage."

2. Report the alleged bullying. Tell the principal about a school bullying case, especially if the bullying seems to be based on the student's race, ethnicity, religion or sexual orientation.

3. Reassure, don't judge. If a bullied kid comes to you for help, reassure him or her that you will do what you can. Don't, however, ask why the child is being bullied. It's the behavior of the bully that matters. If the child volunteers personal information, keep it confidential.

4. Get the appropriate professional help. If a young person seems to be in emotional or psychological distress, offer to get in touch with a counselor, social worker or school psychologist. Don't give advice beyond your expertise, however.

5. Stand up and speak out for children in need. Learn about bullying. Share what you've learned and advocate for bullied children.

6. Do something. If you witness someone being harassed and humiliated, intervene – but get additional support if necessary. Everyone involved – the victim, the perpetrator and the witnesses – needs to know this is unacceptable behavior.

As one of the world's foremost anti-bullying experts, Psychology Professor Don Olweus notes, "It now all boils down to a matter of will and involvement on the part of adults in deciding how much bullying will take place."

To that end, the NEA has come up with the Bully Free: It Starts With Me campaign. This aims to identify caring adults who will pledge to help bullied students. The NEA will provide the resources they need to support the bullied student, ask the right questions and take the appropriate actions.

You can learn more and sign The One Caring Adult Pledge at www.nea.org/bullyfree.

CONCUSSIVE FORCE

As instances of school athlete visits to emergency rooms increase, we should take a closer look at the term "concussion." Basically, it means that the brain has been jostled. The effects of this bump may be underestimated because it usually does not produce loss of consciousness. Neither do concussions show up on imaging scans unless there is bleeding or bruising. Concussions often cause headaches, nausea, dizziness, and concentration difficulties that may last about a week or persist for months. In any case, this is not an injury that one should "play through" or "tough out." As proponents of nerve energy's ability to heal and maintain health, chiropractors urge athletes, parents, and coaches to take a harder look at concussion's impact.

At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we specialize in treating a variety of conditions, from tension headaches, chronic low back and neck pain, to rehabilitation following an accident or injury. Our goal is to make your spinal column healthy, relieving the stresses from your nerves, muscles, ligaments, joints, and bones. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we're currently accepting new patients. Give chiropractic a try! Call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment for superior chiropractic care. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. To state the obvious, the brain is the complex center of the nervous system that controls the other organs of the body. If it does not function properly, an athlete is going to have a difficult time playing sports.

10 Overrated Restaurant Items

Not all "healthy" restaurant meals are created equal.

When dining out, protect yourself from being deceived by incorporating these tips from Beth LaCoste, R.D., L.D., nutritional expert for TOPS Club, Inc. (Take Off Pounds Sensibly), the nonprofit weight-loss support organization. Investigate, ask your server how items are prepared, and look at the restaurant menu's nutrition information online in advance, if available. With a bit of planning, your diet doesn't have to be derailed.

1. Salad - A plate packed with dark leafy greens, vegetables, and even fruit can be very nutritious. Avoid salads featuring heavy dressing and cheese, which easily adds on extra calories and fat.

2. Fish - Baked or grilled fish with lemon is an ideal choice, but a fried fish platter can quickly top 2,000 calories. Also steer clear of fish with butter or cream sauces.

3. Smoothies - A blend of low-fat yogurt and fresh or frozen fruit that you prepare yourself in a blender can be a healthy way to start your day. Smoothies found in the mall food court are a quick way to tack on calories, due to the added sugar – aside from the sugars that occur naturally in fruit – the use of full-fat milk, and commonly-found super-sizes.

4. Wraps - Depending on the type of sauce and amount of cheese used, these wraps can top upwards of 1,000 calories. For a healthy wrap, stick with one containing lean meats, plenty of veggies, small amounts of cheese, and no mayo or creamy sauces.

5. Coffee drinks - A regular cup of coffee with no "add-ins" has zero calories and fat. However, many flavored coffee drinks contain more calories than a large burger, due to the cream and flavored syrups added to them. Aim for skim milk, ask for sugar-free syrups, and withhold the whipped cream for a lighter pick-me-up.

6. Muffins - Many muffins found in bakeries and cafes are equivalent to a piece of cake in fat and calories. Think of these muffins as oversized cupcakes and avoid indulging.

7. Fried veggies - How do you make vegetables unhealthy? Be it sweet potatoes or broccoli, this growing, trendy menu option of frying veggies is a "don't."

8. Multi-grain breads/buns - "Multi-grain" can often be misinterpreted as being whole-grain. Multi-grained breads contain a variety of grains, but they are often refined, stripped of protein, nutrients, and antioxidants. 100% whole-grain breads are higher in nutrients and fiber and are a more well-balanced choice.

9. Chicken - A grilled chicken breast is a great option until condiments like cheese, mayo, and bacon are added. Top your sandwich with lettuce, onion, tomato, and other veggies, plus a low-calorie sauce or mustard for added flavor.

10. Salad bar - Just because a food item is included on the salad bar doesn't necessarily mean it's healthy. Avoid creamy, macaroni-and-pea-type salads, and watch the amount of shredded cheese you add. To build a healthy salad, stick to a variety of veggies and lean protein, like meats or hard-boiled eggs, and use light dressing or oil and vinegar.

Bladder Infections Are Bane of Women

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please explain urinary tract infections. Why do they recur? My doctor prescribes antibiotics, but shortly after I've completed taking them, I have another infection. What do you suggest as treatment? A pharmacist told me that I needed one or two days in the hospital to flush out my kidneys. – S.A.

ANSWER: Urinary tract infections fall into one of two types. Upper tract infections indicate that the kidneys are involved. These are serious and less-common infections. Lower urinary tract infections are bladder infections, and they are very common. That's the kind of infection I believe you have.

Women are prone to develop bladder infections for a number of reasons. One, the tube (urethra) that empties their bladder is much shorter than in males, so bacteria can gain access to the bladder more easily. Secondly, the opening of the female urethra is in a place with a large population of bacteria. And thirdly, sexual relations massage bacteria into the female urethra and bladder.

A bladder infection – cystitis – provokes frequent trips to the bathroom, an urgent need to quickly empty the bladder or suffer an accident, and pain, usually described as burning, during urination.

Women with repeated bladder infections need to be evaluated to see if the infection is a relapse (an infection with the same bacterium) or a new infection (infection with a different bacterium). The approach to treatment hinges on that information.

If a woman has another infection with the same bacterium, the doctor can put her on the same antibiotic for a longer period of time and can continue to treat long after symptoms have gone. The continued treatment is with a reduced antibiotic dose.

Another way to prevent a recurrence is to give the woman a prescription for an antibiotic that she takes after intercourse. Home remedies can be helpful. Drinking 8 ounces of cranberry juice daily benefits prevention of the most common cause of these infections. The kidney flush suggestion is not a good one.

The booklet on urinary tract infections delves deeper into these common maladies. To obtain a copy, write: Dr. Donohue – No. 1204W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have a small lump on the back of my left wrist. It's soft and doesn't hurt even when I push on it. It's been there for at least two months. I don't remember injuring it. Lumps freak me out. My brother had bone cancer. When I see things sprouting on me, I think of cancer. Could it be? – F.L.

ANSWER: It's not likely to be bone cancer. A more likely bet is a ganglion. That's a kind of cyst filled with thick, gelatinous material. It communicates with the wrist joint or with one of the wrist tendons. If it doesn't hurt or interfere with wrist motion, you can ignore it. It if does, a doctor can remove it without much fuss. Many ganglion patients want their doctor to drain it. Drainage is possible, but the recurrence rate is very high.

A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, April 6, at approximately 8:20 p.m., Officer Matt Tobin was on routine patrol when he drove southbound on Hancock Street near the entrance to the Rite Aid drug store at 475 Hancock Street. His attention was drawn to a male pacing back and forth near the entrance of a nearby, closed business.

LT. DAN MINTON

The suspect constantly looked up and down the street and this behavior increased the officer's suspicion that the suspect had or was about to commit a crime. The suspect then reached into a bush and removed a plastic shopping bag. The bag was empty as it blew in the wind. The suspect then made a direct route to the front door of Rite Aid and walked in. Officer Tobin cautiously followed the suspect to the store, exited his cruiser, informed QPD communications of his actions and entered the store.

The officer focused on the cash registers and pharmacy area but did not see the suspect.

After approximately 30 seconds passed, Officer Tobin observed the suspect hastily walk out of the store with a plastic bag, now filled with what he believed to be merchandise. Since Officer Tobin was situated by the registers, he knew that the suspect did not pay for any items in the store. There was also a line at the sole open register and the suspect was not in that line.

The officer followed the fast paced suspect out into the parking lot and yelled for him to stop. The suspect looked back, then picked up his pace as he removed items from the bag and dropping them to the ground. As Officer Tobin continued to close in on the suspect, he noted health and beauty supplies, consisting of creams and two hair curling irons, along with numerous sports cards on the ground.

Officer Tobin broke into a sprint to apprehend the suspect and then place him in handcuffs. Officer Dan Parisi arrived on scene at this time. The suspect said, "Cut me a break – I only stole way less than a hundred dollars."

A criminal record check of the suspect revealed 106 arraignments and 12 guilty findings for shoplifting. The suspect also has 7 open cases. Once the suspect was transported to the station, Officer Tobin met with the Store Manager and tallied the stolen items to a total of $142.32.

Officer Parisi, while searching the suspect, looked closer at an item in the suspect's ear that appeared to be a hearing aid and ended up finding a bag of heroin in the ear.

The suspect, a 40 year-old Boston resident, was charged with Shoplifting (3rd or more offense) and Possession of a Class A substance (Heroin).

Nice work!

Quincy Community United Methodist Church

An Easter Vigil will be celebrated Saturday, April 23 at 7:30 p.m. at the United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St.

"One phrase can sum up this powerful service, " said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of the church. "And that is 'expect the unexpected.' She added, in a very personal and heartfelt way, the Vigil celebrates the hope and promise of Easter."

Dating from the earliest years of the Christian Church, the Easter Vigil is a service unlike any other, literally leading the congregation from Lent to Easter. It does so through word, song, and most importantly symbols that refer to Scripture. Because many people today are unfamiliar with symbolic interpretation, explanatory notes are provided in the text of the Vigil service. Dr. Jarek-Glidden has also updated the ancient service somewhat, so that is "speaks" to today's Christians.

Everyone attending the Vigil is requested to bring a flashlight-an updated and safer version of the traditional candles. Some extra flashlights will be available, in case anyone forgets.

People are also asked to wear comfortable walking shoes because some walking is necessary.

The church, which is handicapped assessable, is located at 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

OBITUARIES

Robert P. Williams, 90

Former President Of Williams Coal & Oil

A funeral Mass for Robert P. Williams, 90, of Hingham, formerly of Quincy, was celebrated April 7 in St. Joseph's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Williams died April 3.

ROBERT P. WILLIAMS

Born in Quincy, he was raised and educated in Braintree and raised his family in Quincy before moving to Hingham in 1984. He was a 1938 graduate of Braintree High School where he was a class officer and legendary football player. He attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) before entering the United States Navy during World War II.

While in the service, Mr. Williams served as a submariner, reaching the rank of Chief, aboard the USS Pargo #264 in the Pacific Theater. When the United States dropped the bomb, the submarine was in Nagasaki Harbor while being depth-charged and was able to sink the last Japanese destroyer of World War II. He remained active with annual reunions of submarine veterans, which were held throughout the country and hosted several in Boston.

He was the former president of Williams Coal & Oil in Braintree, which was founded by his father in 1919. Mr. Williams was a master builder and craftsman. He was active in St. Joseph's Parish in Quincy Point and enjoyed summers with his family at Merrymeeting Lake in New Hampshire.

Husband of the late Catherine (Duane) Williams; father of Christina M. Eaton of Braintree, Robert P. Williams, Jr., of TX, Atty. Thomas Williams of Norwell, Roseanne McHugh of Hull, Brian A. Williams of Hull, Daniel D. Williams of Hingham, Michael E. Williams of Marshfield, Kathleen W. Kafel of West Bridgewater and the late Timothy J. Williams; brother of Marie K. Williams of Hingham and the late George A., Jr., Harold, Lloyd, Elliott, Charles and John.

He is also survived by 27 grandchildren, 17 great-grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

Louis P. Steinberg, 98

Retired Vice President Of Marketing Services At Stop & Shop

Funeral services for Louis P. Steinberg, 98, of Quincy, were conducted April 8 at Schlossberg-Solomon Memorial Chapel, Canton.

Interment was at Sharon Memorial Park in Sharon.

A memorial observance was held at the home of his son, Barry Steinberg, following interment.

Mr. Steinberg died April 6.

LOUIS P. STEINBERG

He won a scholarship in the depths of the Great Depression and was later employed as an advertising artist and later advertising manager at Stop & Shop for 44 years, retiring at age 72 as Vice President of Marketing Services.

Mr. Steinberg was creatively responsible for the red and green dots in the company's insignia and coined the name Super Stop & Shop for today's supermarkets. He also invented the shop concept by giving names to shops and to perishable departments – a practice now common everywhere.

He was president of the Brotherhood of Congregation Beth Israel of Quincy and a longtime member of the Board of the Synagogue.

Husband of the late Jeannette B. Steinberg who preceded him by five years after 71 years of marriage; father of Barry Martin Steinberg (bless him). A special mention must be made to his devoted day nurse, Debra A. Kelley, who cared for Mr. Steinberg for 15 years, seven days a week, with unswerving attention.

Memorial donations may be made to Young Israel-Kehillath Jacob of Mattapan and Randolph, 374 Main St., Randolph, MA 02368.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

At one time or another we have heard someone say, "Oh, if I only had . . . a million dollars, a new home, a better hob, etc., everything would be all right with me."

But we know better, don't we? . . . It reminds us of the story about the man who slipped on the ice on a bridge and fell into the cold water. All he wanted as he struggled to the surface was a breath of fresh air. When he got that, all he wanted was to get to shore. When he got there, all he wanted was to get near a stove. When he was standing hear the stove and began sweating in his damp clothes, all he wanted was a new suit and some clean underwear. And when he got all that, all he wanted as to sue somebody because the bridge was icy!

There is an old proverb which says: "He who is not contended with what he has, would not be contented with what he would like to have."

So let us never take it for truth when we hear somebody day, "Oh, if I only had that, everything would be all right with me."

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Whether a waiting period is taking longer than expected, or just seems that way, the anxious Lamb would do well to create a center of calm within her- or himself, and not do anything rash.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Practical matters dominate the week, but cultural activities also are favored, especially those that can be shared with someone special in the Bovine's life. Some important news might be forthcoming.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You need to know more about a possible career move in order to see if it offers a real opportunity or just a change. You're sure to get lots of advice -- some of it good -- but the decision must be yours.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The arrival of hoped-for good news about a loved one dominates most of the week and provides a great excuse for the party-loving Moon Child to plan a special event to celebrate.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Leos and Leonas rushing to finalize their plans might want to think about slowing down the pace, or risk overlooking an important consideration that could become a sore point down the line.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The week's challenges call for logical approaches. But sentiment also has its place. Sharing memories with a special someone, for example, strengthens the bond between you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A brand-new approach to a problem could have a good chance of succeeding if it's based on a solid foundation of fact to strengthen its potential for standing up to scrutiny.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A favorable report should give your optimism an important boost as you confront another phase of a challenge. Don't be timid about accepting advice from someone you trust.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might want to target another goal if your current aim is continually being deflected. But stay with it until you find that first sign of an opening, and then follow through.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Although offers of advice might not always please the usually sure-footed Goat, good counsel is always worth considering, especially from those whose experience can be invaluable.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't rush to make up for lost time. Your productivity can be measured not only by what you do, but how you do it. Move carefully until the job is done the way you like it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Emerging facts about someone you know might cause you to rethink your relationship. But remember to make judgments in context of a full situation, not just on scraps of data.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are known both for your love of acquiring beautiful things as well as for your generosity to others.

OBITUARIES

Robert F. Burns, Sr.
Worked In Office Machine Management

A funeral Mass for Robert F. Burns, Sr., of Wollaston, was celebrated Wednesday in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Burns died over the weekend.

Born and raised in Roxbury and Jamaica Plain, when he was barely a teenager, he left high school and entered the United States Navy. When World War II began a short time later, he was a Gunner's Mate on oil tankers ferrying much needed fuel to troops stationed in Europe and North Africa.

He then went on to serve in the Pacific theater on board a Submarine Chaser. The ship left the East Coast, traveling through the Panama Canal and around the United States to the West Coast and Hawaii. He participated in the invasion of Okinawa and he and his crew were shipwrecked on the island of Takashima after their submarine chaser, SC 686, ran aground during a typhoon. They spent days on the island cut up and hungry, having to climb over coral to get to its shore; they were finally rescued after ten days. He served for the duration of the war and then eventually made his way back to Boston.

With the GI Bill, Mr. Burns graduated and went on to a career in office machine management, first with Smith Corona and later with Harvard University where he worked until he retired 25 years later. Several years after returning from the war, he met the love of his life at a party at White Horse Beach, a red headed nurse who kept him on his toes for 49 years. He and his wife June went on to raise four children and enjoy time with their four grandchildren.

He spent his final days at home and was cared for with the assistance of the South Shore VNA and the doctors and nurses of Carney Hospital in Dorchester.

Husband of June; father of Robert F. Burns, Jr., and his wife Janet of VA, Brian J. Burns of Wollaston, Colonel Stephen T. Burns and his wife Kimberly of VA and Mariellen Burns of Boston; brother of Nancy Norton of Norfolk and Joan Lake of Norwood; grandfather of Timothy, Gregory, Michael and Emily Burns; uncle of Frank McNeil, Cathie Amate, Sally Santiago, Robert Norton, Jr., Gregory Lake MaryKate Feinberg, Thomas Norton, Christopher and Jennifer Lake.

Interment was in Mount Auburn Cemetery, Cambridge.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Caritas Carney Hospital, 2100 Dorchester Ave, Dorchester, MA.

DRUG DROP-OFF Saturday, April 30 10 AM to 2PM

A child can begin a lifetime of drug addiction simply by opening the medicine cabinet at home. Drugs such as OxyContin, oxycodone, hydrocodone, morphine, codeine, Percocet, Darvocet, Vicodin and Lortab have all been linked to opiate addiction.

Also, there is concern about medications in the water supply not being adequately cleared by water treatment plants.
Never flush medicine of any type down the toilet or drain.

What to Bring: All pharmaceuticals, prescription and over-the-counter medications in their original container. This includes pills, liquids, capsules, inhalers, patches, etc. Include all expired prescription medicines and any non-prescription medicines more than 2 years old. Sharps (needles) accepted.

A Police Officer and pharmacist will be onsite to answer any questions and accept your unused medication.

Electronics Disposal Bring all CPUs/computers, TVs, window unit ACs, servers, keyboards, spare computer parts, monitors, flat screens, laptops, network equipment, mice, laser and ink printers, routers, radios, scanners, fax machines, cables and wires, aluminum, copper, cell phones, and telephones to the DPW recycling Center Monday through Friday 7:30 AM to 3 PM.

$4M Investment For Stop & Shop Headquarters

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Stop & Shop's parent company, Ahold USA, will not only stay in Quincy but will be reinvesting $4 million in its building this year and relocating 350 employees to its Quincy Center Plaza building, now designated as headquarters for the company's New England Division.

Ahold USA's Chief Operating Officer Carl Schlicker who outlined the company's plans last week called Stop & Shop's presence in Quincy Center, "a centerpiece of the downtown community."

According to Schlicker's timetable, the Stop & Shop New England Division offices will be fully relocated to Quincy Center this summer and some 950 persons will be employed there by

Mayor To Host Meetings Detailing City Finances

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday his second annual series of community meetings in neighborhoods across Quincy to detail city finances and answer questions from residents as the city continues to battle historic economic conditions.

"We are by no means out of the woods, but we are without question navigating this financial storm in a better position than many cities in the state and nation," Koch said.

"It is absolutely vital, especially in these difficult times, that we show our residents exactly how we spend money, how we raise money, and what will be required to maintain core services. We had a open, active, and honest conservation during these meetings last year, and I am look forward to continuing that dialogue in the coming weeks."

Plaques To Be Dedicated In Memory Of One Marine, Two Soldiers April 28

Memorial Service, Dedications To Mark Vietnam Veterans Day

By JOE REARDON

Larry Norton has always found the ceremonies honoring fallen soldiers to be humbling and emotional events.

Norton himself, the president of the Quincy chapter of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces, knows well the horrors of fighting an enemy in a foreign land. A Marine Corps veteran of the Vietnam War, Norton was awarded the Purple Heart after injuries he received in battle near the Marine Corps combat base of Con Thien.

"It's very emotional for the families," said Norton,

GEN. JOSEPH DUNFORD, JR.
Guest Speaker At Marina Bay Service

who mailed out 500 single invitations and 30 more that went to veteran groups. "It doesn't matter whether they're millionaires or poor. The fallen are remembered."

Three of Norton's fallen comrades will be honored with a memorial service and plaques on Thursday, April 28 beginning at 11 a.m.

They are: Quincy natives PFC Richard John Vasconcellos, U.S.M.C.; SP4 George Francis Fell, Jr., U.S. Army; and W.O. Ralph John Willard, U.S. Army. The VCVCAF is the only Vietnam group in the country that conducts the plaque memorial ceremony.

There are currently 80 plaques in Quincy dedicated to service personnel who died in service from every conflict from the Spanish American War to the Persian Gulf War.

The services get underway at 11 a.m. when Vasconcellos is memorialized at E. Squantum Street and Hunt Street. The services shift to 157 E. Squantum St. at 11:45 a.m. where a memorial plaque will be dedicated in front of the house Fell grew up in. Willard's plaque will be dedicated at 12:30 p.m. at 11 Ditmar St.

State Sen. John F. Keenan, Rep. Bruce J. Ayers and Norfolk County Dist. Atty. Michael W. Morrissey will speak during the dedications.

A memorial service at Marina Bay begins at 2 p.m. that afternoon honoring the 48 Quincy men who gave their lives for freedom and also to honor all Vietnam veterans who served their country honorably.

Norton has been working tirelessly since December in putting the service together and securing the special guests who will be in attendance.

Mayor Tom Koch will offer greetings from the City.Along with Keenan, Ayers and Morrissey, former U.S.M.C Captain Mark Ahern and Cong. William R. Keating will be in attendance.

Willard's nephew, Quincy Police Officer Ralph Willard will also speak.

Joseph F. Dunford, Jr., a four-star general in the U.S. Marines Corps and the 32nd and current Assistance Commandant of the Marines, will be the guest speaker.

Gen. Dunford – who grew up in Quincy – graduated from St. Michael's College and was commissioned in 1977. He was promoted to his current position in October of 2010.

Gen. Dunford's assignments in the operating forces include Platoon and Company Commander, Co L, 3rd Battalion, and 6th Marines. He served as the Operations, Plans and Training Officer in 2d ANGLICO and the Regimental Executive Officer, 6th Marines. He commanded the 2nd Battalion, 6th Marines and the 5th Marine Regiment. He also served as the Chief of Staff, 1st Marine Division.

Other assignments include Aid to the Commanding General, III MEF and a tour in the Officer Assignment Branch, HOMC. He also has served as the Marine Officer Instructor at Holy Cross, as a member of the Commandant's Staff Group, and as the Senior Aide to the Commandant of the Marine Corps.

Cong. William Keating will bring greetings from Washington.

Thomas A. Bolinder, Sgt. USMC (retired), will introduce Vietnam veterans and their families.

After Gen. Dunford's remarks, Joseph H. Booker, past president of the VCV-CAF, will place a ceremonial wreath at the base of the Vietnam War Memorial Clock Tower.

Daniel J. Curry and Julian Terry, USMC, will read the Quincy Vietnam Veterans Memorial Roll Call.

Naseeb "Moe" Morad, a member of the Morrisette American Legion Post, will be the soloist.

Retired Quincy Police Sgt. Steven Kring will play "TAPS."

Rev. John Carl Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church and a former Navy lieutenant, will give the invocation and benediction.

Quincy Police Officer Donald Sautter will lead in the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner."

Norton will introduce dignitaries and Mark X. Ahern, a former Marines captain, will also speak.

Also attending the service: POW and Silver Star recipient James Warner, USN and author of "Dear America: Letters Home From Vietnam" Bernie Edelman; and author Taylor Kiland, who penned "Open Doors," a novel that deals with the aftermath of POWs from the Vietnam War.

Norton praised the city officials and their overwhelming support and cooperation in putting the memorial service together. "This cannot be done without certain public officials, starting with the mayor," Norton said.

Quincy citizens who gave their lives while serving in the Vietnam War include E. Alan Brudno, George R. Levesque, James H. Cavicchi Jr., David A. Pitts, Lawrence E. Sirois, Peter J. Gerry James M. Barry, Martin R. Keefe, James J. Jenks Jr., Richard S. Davis Jr., James M. Walsh, David O'Sullivan, Ralph J. Willard, Peter J. Landry, Brian P. Ahern, James C. Daigle, Basil L. Ciriello, John H. GAZING INTO CRYSTAL

Perhaps owing to an upswing in interest in many things supernatural, crystal jewelry is currently exceptionally popular. This, of course, is nothing new. Over the millennia, colorless and transparent rock crystal has been associated with divination and healing. Thus, this most common variety of quartz has been used for crystal balls and amulets. While it is rare to find crystals of sufficient size and clarity to make crystal balls, crystal beads and pendants are very popular components of bracelets, necklaces, and rings. Contributing to its appeal is the fact that quartz occurs in a range of colors from clear to rose to purple to dark smoky quartz. The stone is also tough enough to be carved into different shapes.

Let us inspire your inner beauty with fine crystal jewelry. Our professional and knowledgeable staff will work with you to make sure you have the best buying experience possible. We offer jewelry and watch repair on the premises. You are cordially invited to 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. Step into our store to view our huge selection and to experience the type of service only we can offer. Should you have any questions or concerns please call us at 617-773-3636.

Third Annual Faxon Park Clean-Up April 30

Faxon Park Master Plan Community Update April 27

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Next week will be a busy one for the Friends of Faxon Park who will undertake the park's Third Annual Clean-up on Saturday, April 30, three days after a community update on the Faxon Park Master Plan set for Wednesday, April 27 at 7 p.m. at the Koch Complex, One Merrymount Parkway.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi announced the two events for Faxon Park which lies in his district.

The massive 80-plus acre Faxon Park offers the largest stretch of open space and parkland in the city and the Faxon Park Master Plan offers a five-step plan for its revival and a makeover.

In recent years the park's supporters have turned out by the dozens for both the Spring clean-up and planning sessions for the park's future.

After one spring clean-up, Raymondi called the 52-plus volunteers "an army of citizens, a cadre, ready and willing to pick up their shovels" and work for the park and community.

Next week, the clean-up volunteers will meet at 8:30 a.m. Saturday at the Pavilion where rakes, shovels and bags will be provided.

Master Plan Update

On Wednesday evening, Raymondi will outline the progress on the Faxon Park Master Plan during a session at the Koch Complex and discuss the status of the Park Department's current application for funding from the CPC.

When the Faxon Park Master Plan was introduced in 2009, Raymondi said the plan offered a "vision (of the park) for generations to

Drug Disposal Day At Quincy Police Department April 30

The Quincy Drug Task Force, in conjunction with Impact Quincy, the Quincy Police Department and the Drug Enforcement Agency, will host a drug disposal day Saturday, April 30 from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. at the Quincy Police Department, 1 Sea St.

The Quincy Drug Task Force, commissioned by Mayor Thomas P. Koch in 2008, has overseen three successful disposal days. The original idea for the event came from several members of the Task Force who knew first hand how important it is to protect young people from experimenting with the powerful drugs that are found in people's medicine cabinets at home.

"Many folks have medicine cabinets full of unused medications, all legally prescribed, and find it difficult to get rid of them because there simply is no outlet for it," said Mayor Koch. "Fortunately, through this event and the installation of the disposal kiosks in two City locations, residents can conveniently and safely get rid of these pills."

Residents will be able to dispose of all prescription and non-prescription pills and liquid medications, no aerosols. Through a grant obtained by Impact Quincy, sharps (needles) will also be collected. This is an anonymous process, including a survey that will be conducted for all participants. When disposing of medication, never throw it in the garbage or flush it. The only safe way of disposal is through a controlled process.

The Drug Disposal Day highlights an important issue facing local communities in the fight against drug use, namely that over-prescription of highly potent controlled substances makes possible that these drugs will become available for illegal purchase. By disposing of these pills in a safe fashion, residents will take a positive step to curtail illicit sales of these powerful medications, especially OxyContin and Percocet.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On April 25, 1719, Daniel Defoe's fictional work "The Life and Strange Adventures of Robinson Crusoe" is published. The book, about a shipwrecked sailor who spends 28 years on a deserted island, is based on the experiences of Alexander Selkirk, a Scottish sailor who spent four years on a small island off the coast of South America in the early 1700s.

• On April 29, 1854, the Ashmun Institute, the first college founded solely for black students, is officially chartered in southeastern Pennsylvania. Renamed Lincoln University after the Civil War, its graduates include poet Langston Hughes and Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall.

• On April 27, 1865, an explosion on a Mississippi River steamboat kills an estimated 1,547 people, mostly Union soldiers returning home after the Civil War. The Sultana was built to hold 376 passengers, but reports say that there were as many as 2,700 people on board.

• On May 1, 1931, New York City's Empire State Building is dedicated. The idea for the Empire State Building is said to have been born of a competition between Walter Chrysler of the Chrysler Corp. and John Jakob Raskob of General Motors to see who could erect the taller building.

• On April 30, 1948, the Land Rover, a British-made all-terrain vehicle, debuts at an auto show in Amsterdam. The Land Rover had a boxy, utilitarian design, four-wheel drive and a canvas roof. Seat cushions, doors, a heater and spare tire were considered extras.

• On April 28, 1965, Barbra Streisand's debut television special, "My Name is Barbra," is aired. One sequence was shot on location in the fur department of Bergdorf Goodman, where Streisand vamped in exotic fur coats to a medley of poverty songs, including "Brother Can You Spare a Dime."

• On April 26, 1986, the world's worst nuclear accident to date occurs at the Chernobyl nuclear plant near Kiev in Ukraine. An estimated 4,000 clean-up workers died from radiation poisoning, as many as 70,000 people suffered severe poisoning and a large area of land might not be livable for as many as 150 years.

Local Civil War Facts, Figures

Quincy – like cities and towns all across the country – is commemorating the 150th anniversary of the start of this nation's Civil War.

On Monday, a wreath-laying ceremony was held at the city's Civil War Soldiers and Sailors Monument at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Later this spring, the Quincy Historical Society is planning an exhibit illustrating the city's participation in our country's bloodiest conflict.

The Civil War began April 12, 1861, when Confederate artillery opened fire of Fort Sumter, a federal fort in Charleston Harbor, South Carolina. Quincy men and boys would soon join the Union fighting the Confederacy until the war ended April 9, 1865.

In researching this topic, The Sun acknowledges Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, the executive director of the Quincy Historical Society; Quincy historian Tom Galvin; and Tom Stansbury, director of Quincy Veterans Services, for providing some of these local facts and figures from the Civil War era.

• In 1861, Quincy's total population was 6,778. There appears to be some ambiguity over the actual number of Quincy sailors and soldiers who served during the Civil War. Some records indicate the number was around 660. However, according to Charles Francis Adams – the grandson of John Quincy Adams – and another historian of that era – William Pattee – the number was 953. That's about 14 percent of the city's population at that time.

• About 12 percent of those serving from Quincy – 113 men and boys – died during the Civil War. Some were killed in battle, some died in military prison, some died of wounds received in battle and others died of disease (malaria and digestive-related ailments) contracted in the Army. The names are listed on bronze tablets on the four sides of the Civil War Soldiers and Sailors Monument.

• Quincy suffered casualties at 17 different battles; the highest number was during the Richmond-Petersburg Campaign that was a series of battles from June 9, 1864 to March 25, 1865. Six Quincy men lost their lives fighting: Serg. Edwin L. Joyce, William L. Burrell, George W. Turner, Lawrence McLaughlin, Osmand Bennett and Thomas Wood.

• Here's a list of the men and the other battles where they were killed:

• Serg. Maj. Eugene M. Trask - Fort Randall; New Bern - James Ryan; Bull Run – Peter P. Marque, Samuel S. Pierce; Galveston – Francis L. Nott; Wilderness – Corp. John Dag, Joseph Flynn, George Wyman; Cedar Creek – John Brown; Malvern Hill – Patrick Dermody; Horatio N. Faxon – Antietam; Fredericksburg – John Manning; Whitehall – Corp. Richard D. Lawless; Weldon Rail Rd – Joseph M. Luzarder; Hatcher's Run – James Donlan; Coal Harbor – Capt. Charles F. Pray, Serg. James Chubbuck, William H.H. Lapham; and Spottsylvania – Timothy Sheahan, Elisha T.C. Ela and James Kelly Jr.

• Francis L. Souther – the first Quincy soldier to die in the Civil War – is also thought to be the first Union soldier killed in the war. He died at the Battle of Bethel, Virginia, on June 10, 1861. He was 25 years old and a member of the famous milling family in Quincy.

• One of the oldest Quincy men to serve in the Civil War was Erza Badger who was 62 years old when he joined the Union. Before the war, Badger accompanied Solomon Willard looking for granite to build the Bunker Hill Monument. Badger – who died of disease contracted in the Army – is buried at Hall Cemetery, next to Saint Mary's Church in West Quincy. Willard is also buried there.

• There are 918 Quincy veterans of the Civil War buried in city cemeteries. The breakdown: 26 in Hall Cemetery (next to Saint Mary's Church); 2 in Christ Church Cemetery on School Street (next to Saint John's Church); 22 in Hancock Cemetery (next to the James R. McIntyre Government Center); 575 in Mount Wollaston; 148 in Saint Mary's Cemetery; 144 in the Sailors Cemetery on Fenno Street; and 1 in the Sailors Cemetery at Snug Harbor.

• The last Quincy Civil War veteran – Frederick Bishop – died in 1938 – some 73 years ago.

• The 34-foot tall, 35-ton Civil War Monument is made of Quincy granite. It was designed, carved and erected by the Mitchell Granite Co. for $4,300. Originally, it was placed in a prominent location in the city square at the corner of Hancock and Washington Streets but Galvin points out that Town Meeting, for one reason or another, decided to locate it in the then new Mount Wollaston Cemetery. The monument was dedicated June 25, 1868.

• The monument was moved to its present site in the cemetery in 1923. Galvin said the granite from the monument may have been quarried at Hitchcock or Hardwick Quarry because it was a lighter shade of Quincy granite.

• Two Quincy soldiers – Peter P. Marque and Samuel S. Pierce – were killed in the second Battle of Bull Run (Aug. 30, 1862) which was part of a string of defeats Gen. Robert E. Lee and Gen. Thomas Jonathan "Stonewall" Jackson handed the Union Army.

• The two biggest occupations held by Quincy soldiers and sailors were in the shoe and granite industries. Fitzgerald notes 139 men were listed as working in the shoe industry; about 110 were employed as quarrymen or stone cutters.

• There are many service personnel from Quincy who shared the same last name and were probably related. Among the more popular surnames of those fighting in the war: Newcomb (12); Nightingale (8) and Packard (6). There's also a Faxon – Horatio N. Faxon – who was related to Henry Faxon who bequeathed land that is now Faxon Field and Russell Park to the city in 1919. Horatio Faxon was killed in the Battle of Antietam.

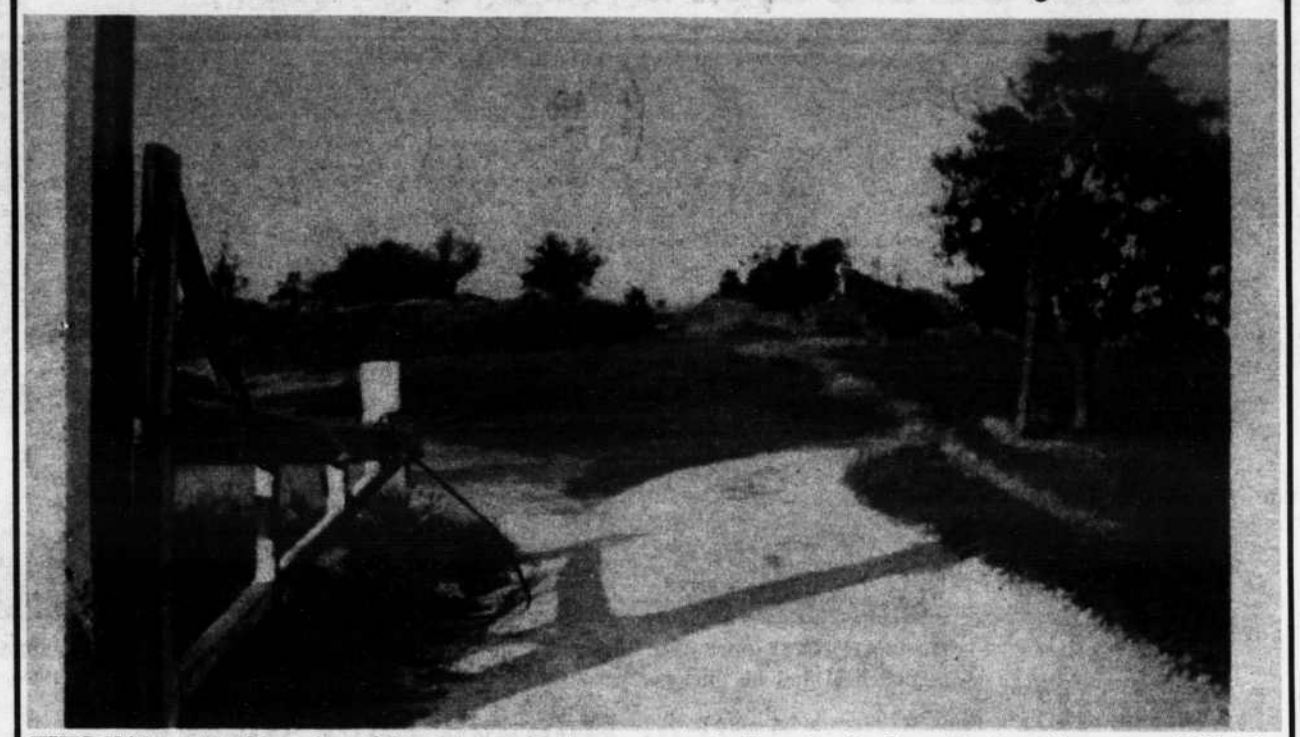
• There is apparently was only one road named for a Civil War veteran in Quincy. That's Revere Road that was named for Paul J. Revere – the grandson of the famous Boston patriot and silversmith. Revere, a colonel in the 20th Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers, was from Boston but married a Quincy girl. He was killed at the Battle of Gettysburg.

• The veterans group at the time – The Grand Army of the Republican or G.A.R. – named its Post in Revere's honor. The original Post home was located on Hancock Street near the street that became Revere Road.

Quincy's role in the Civil War may not be as high profiled as in the American Revolution and the founding of this country. Nor is it as renown as Quincy's shipbuilding effort during World War II when the city produced mighty naval vessels and sent 10,000 servicemen to fight.

As Fitzgerald points out, "Nobody from Quincy really became famous after the Civil War."

But that doesn't discount the role Quincy residents played – many of whom paid the supreme sacrifice – to preserve our nation. Quite the contrary.



"When you do the numbers of how many guys from Quincy served and how many guys were killed based on the population at the time, it's gotta be pretty grueling and it's a pretty significant sacrifice by a small town," Fitzgerald says. "Clearly (serving in the war) did for these guys what World War II did for that generation. This became – if it wasn't a focal point of their lives – it was definitely a turning point in their lives.

"These guys were proud of their service. When you look at their war memorabilia, there's a lot of stuff that really is about the battles themselves. . . Most of these guys were grunts. Most of them never got any higher than corporal or sergeant and most of them really never got any higher than private.

"They just slugged it out. They had to bear the brunt of the fighting. Most of these guys probably had fairly terrible experiences, too. They just went off and did their jobs," Fitzgerald added.

The Quincy Historical Society hopes to open its Civil War exhibit by Memorial Day. It will feature among other artifacts: bullets from the battlefields, some uniforms, a few weapons, documentary materials, and flags.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1921 postcard is a view of the entrance to Squantum Park at the end of Dorchester Street in Squantum. At the time a trolley line ran to the park from the Atlantic Depot of the Old Colony Railroad. Known originally as Chapel Pastures, in the 1800s this was the site of three of the first resort hotels in Boston Harbor. The natural attractions here were the panoramic view from Chapel Rocks and in particular the legendary Squaw Rock, which had an observation platform. In 1895, a cairn was erected here by the Grand Lady of Squantum, Lillie Titus, to mark the landing spot of Myles Standish. He was the first recorded white man to visit Quincy's coastal area that was the summer home of the Massachusetts group of the Algonquin Indians. An old legend has it that Indian ghosts still haunt this part of Squantum. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

New Law Would Restrict Firearms

By FRANK McCAULEY

The City Council was asked by Mayor Charles A. Ross to pass an ordinance amendment, which he hopes will minimize the chances for injuries and deaths due to firearms accidents.

The ordinance will prohibit the sale of firearms within the city limits save in cases of licensed gun clubs, military organizations and a few other rare exceptions.

This Week
1949
62 Years Ago

The ordinance was written at the request of Mayor Ross by John P. Flavin, city solicitor, after a young Milton college student had been accidentally killed in a target incident in the quarry section two weeks ago.

The young victim of the tragedy, a 20-year old Milton resident, was killed April 2 at Lyons Quarry, West Quincy, while target shooting.

"The time has come when we must put a stop to tragedies like this," explained Mayor Ross.

$35,000 SOUGHT FOR NEW LADDER TRUCK

Mayor Ross announced that he would send an order to the city council for the purchase of a $35,000 aerial ladder truck for the Quincy Fire Department.

It was expected that Ward 5 Councillor John O'Connor would attend to amend the order to $28,000 so that a 65-foot ladder truck would be purchased in place of the 75-foot machine. A 75-foot truck could not be housed in the West Quincy Fire Station where Councillor O'Connor wants the new truck to be assigned.

Chief Thomas F. Gorman originally asked for two new trucks this year but Mayor Ross struck the items out of the budget.

The mayor announced his intention to replace one ladder truck in the budget after Councillor made a plea for such a piece of equipment for West Quincy.

Leasing City Property For Religious Use Inappropriate

When I opened up my April 14 Quincy Sun newspaper, an advertising insert from Life Community Church fell out. As I read the advertising postcard for an upcoming Community Easter celebration this church was putting together, I noticed the site of this Easter service was the Lincoln Hancock Community School in West Quincy.

I still remember a few years ago when I still resided in North Quincy that a pastor had a show on QATV. At that time, I remembered that this pastor held church services every Sunday morning over at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School.

Back then I was questioning why the City of Quincy allowed churches to use public facilities like schools for Sunday religious services. I do not believe churches should be using taxpayer-funded public schools as their pseudo-church building.

I am sure Life Community Church offers a good positive message to its congregation and has a positive impact on the quality of life of the City of Quincy, but leasing out public property for religious uses is an inappropriate use of public facilities. If pastors can't afford their own church building, it is one thing to lease out space in another congregation's building but another thing to use a public school building.

Religion is an important element of any community providing moral character but I feel it isn't appropriate and quite frankly endangers the religious freedom of all. Churches need not become beholden to government for holding church services.

A few years back when Star of the Sea originally closed in Squantum, Fr. Drea from St. Ann's in Wollaston said Easter Mass for Squantum Catholics at Squantum Elementary School. I did not think that was appropriate either. Many people believe we need to return prayer to public schools, which is one thing, but church services in public schools are totally something else.

I wish Life Community Church success. The more churches we have in society, the better off we all are. However, co-mingling them with local government is quite another thing. The firewall between public school use and worship services needs to be strengthened, not turn down. It is there to protect religion and religious freedoms.

The Cross-Town Connector And Traffic Jams

The clandestine bridge; the bridge they don't want to talk about; the cross-town connector had to be built to be able to build a new Quincy Center. That is what we have been hearing for the last 40 years.

So they are building the road now. We are hearing that they can't build the new Quincy Center without a new bridge into the new Center. So now we have to spend millions more for the Cliveden Street Bridge.

Is there something wrong with this picture?

The only place for a new bridge is between the new cross-town connector and Granite Street. The distance between Granite Street and the cross-town connector is around one-tenth of a mile. So why are we going to spend millions to build a new bridge to the new Quincy Center?

We will have three roads inside of 600 feet and three traffic lights inside of 600 feet. That is a good formula for major traffic jams. For one time do something right and scrap the new bridge and save millions.

Are they telling us now the connector is not going to do the job? Could this be the ace-in-the-hole for Street-Works to back out of the project? No engineer worth his salt would design such an unattainable project. The only way this new road onto Burgin Parkway can work is by adding a third lane to each side of Burgin Parkway and in order to do that you would have to take T.J. Maxx and demolish it on one side and build a road over the train tracks on the other side. You are talking mega bucks for a useless road.

Author Hannah Tinti Speaks At North Quincy High School's School-Wide Read Of The Good Thief

By DANIEL WHOOLEY
North Quincy High School Senior

During North Quincy High School's annual Spirit Week, the English Department and the Media Department held a school-wide read of The Good Thief by Massachusetts native, Hannah Tinti.

In part through the generosity of a State Street / Boston Financial Data Services initiative, the English Department was able to provide copies of the novel for students to read prior to Ms. Tinti's visit. Involving students, parents, teachers and other members of the community, arrangements were made for the author to visit North Quincy High during her book tour.

In addition, students were honored to welcome Mayor Thomas Koch to the event, whose encouragement and support of their learning is much appreciated.

In the newly dedicated Peter J. Chrisom, Sr. Auditorium, Ms. Tinti gave readings from the novel, spoke of her writing process, and answered many questions from the audience. Her informative lecture and spirited reading of the novel certainly captured everyone's attention.

After the presentation, a small reception was held in the library and Ms. Tinti graciously signed over one hundred copies of her book. North Quincy High is grateful to Ms. Tinti for sharing her time and talent with its students.

Symphonic Winds, 4 O'Clock Jazz Ensemble

Spring Concert May 4 At Eastern Nazarene College

Classic marches, Big Band numbers and jazz arrangements will be among the musical selections performed by Eastern Nazarene College's Symphonic Winds and 4 O'Clock Jazz Ensemble at a free spring concert Wednesday, May 4 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cove Fine Arts Center on the college's main campus in Wollaston.

Comprised of ENC students, adults and selected area high school students, the 35-member Symphonic Winds will perform a number of selections including the marches "Coat of Arms" and "Tacotta for Band," as well as a wide array of pieces ranging from dance to classical, including "Slavonic Dances No. 8," "La Fiesta De La Roca," "Beyond the Summit" and "Clarinet Escapade."

The 4 O'Clock Jazz Ensemble will then present a jazz program featuring "Big Band" instrumentation and arrangements by popular artists including Charles Mingus's "Jelly Roll" and "Boogie Stop Shuffle," Sammy Nestico's "Samantha" and "Orange Sherbet," and other popular tunes.

"We invite area residents to come and enjoy these local ensembles at this free concert," said Stephen Bell, director of both the Symphonic Winds and 4 O'Clock Jazz ensembles. "It will be a fun and memorable evening for all ages."

Woodward School Celebrates Its Founders Academic Excellence On Founders' Night

The Woodward School recently celebrated its Founders and Academic Excellence on Founder' Night.

Recognized on Founders' Night were the finalists and winner of the Founders' History Paper Competition and Scholarship Prize.

The Founders' Paper is a junior class required thesis paper on a topic in U.S. History. An independent group of judges from outside of the School read and score the finalists' papers, whose authors are identified only by number.

LILLIANN SIMMONS PLOURDE

The Grand Prize Winner is the recipient of the Susan M. Hayes History Award and Scholarship, a tuition scholarship established in memory of former Woodward history teacher and Dean of Students, Susan Martin Hayes.

The first place winner of the Susan Martin Hayes Scholarship was LilliAnn Simmons Plourde of Squantum.

Crane Library Celebrating National Poetry Month

In celebration of National Poetry Month and the fact that the state "has produced more poets than any other in the nation," Massachusetts Poetry hopes to have 10,000 Massachusetts residents read seven poems by seven Massachusetts poets in libraries, schools, colleges, book clubs, and senior groups from Cape Cod to the Berkshires.

The public is invited to read poetry Saturday, April 23 at 2 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Event organizer S. D. Mullaney, author of Follow the Wolf Moon and a candidate for an MFA in Poetry at the University of Massachusetts, Boston, says, "Each poem in its way tells a story of how something huge and momentous — death of a loved one, inheritance from a war-torn country, divorce or separation, marriage and love — comes to be lodged in our hearts and to shape our lives. These huge things express themselves in the smallest, most mundane details – everyday sights, sounds, touches, and smells many of us have experienced and can relate to."

The poems were selected to appeal to a diverse audience by connecting our unique experiences with the universal issues of love, loss, home, war and transcendence.

The poems are by Elizabeth Bishop, James Tate, Suji Kwock Kim, Louise Glück, Kevin Young, Robert Pinksy and Alan Dugan.

All are welcome.

'The Secret Garden' Discussion At Library Tuesday

The second session in a reading and discussion series called "Not for Children Only" will be held Tuesday, April 26 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The series gives adults an opportunity to share their perspectives on childhood favorites old and new. In addition to re-reading old favorites, this is a chance to read classics of children's literature that may have been missed, as well as contemporary titles that reach today's youth.

The sessions April 26 will explore Frances Hodgson Burnett's classic novel, "The Secret Garden," the story of a 10-year-old orphan girl who comes to live in a lonely house on the Yorkshire moors and discovers an invalid cousin and the mysteries of a locked garden. Copies of "The Secret Garden" are available for pick-up at the main library checkout desk.

Discussions will be led by Dr. Susan Peterson, associate professor of English and chairwoman of the Humanities Department at Curry College in Milton.

For more information, call 617-376-1316.

Fashion Show May 12 To Benefit Maria Droste Agency

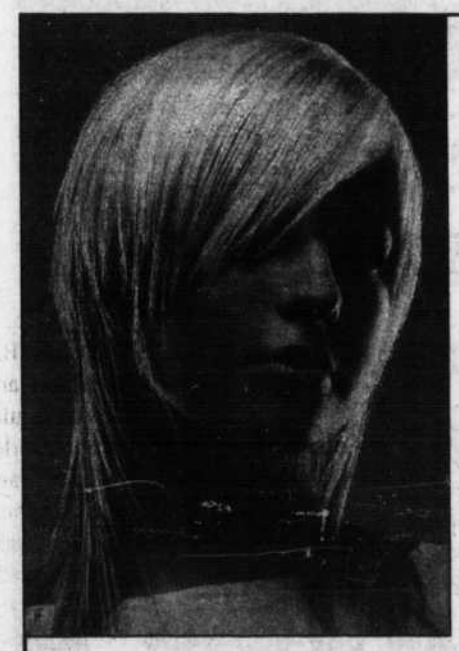
The Maria Droste Fashion Gala will be held Thursday, May 12 at Lantana's in Randolph.

The evening will feature cocktails, dinner, music, a silent auction and women's and men's fashion models.

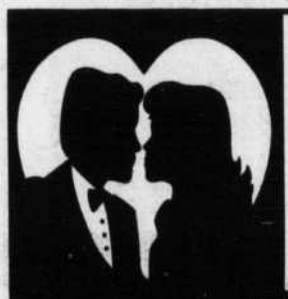
This is the sixth year the annual gala has been dedicated and named in the honor of Darlene Sheehan. For the past five years, the event has been a successful partnership between the Maria Droste Fund Raising Committee and Friends of Darlene Sheehan.

Friends of Darlene's, as well as male and female community leaders, will model collections of spring ensembles. Women will be dressed in collections from Caryn's Corner, Quincy, and Grandasia, Quincy. Men will be wearing clothing from Hajjar's of Quincy.

Hair will be styled by Aura and make up provided by Allure Spa, both in Quincy Center.



Serving as honorary chairwomen of the event are Nancy Calanan, Judy Farmer, Anne Howley, Fran Foy and Maralin Manning. They were the first group of ladies who coordinated the first fashion show.



The Maria Droste Agency is a counseling agency staffed and operated by the Sisters of the Good Shepherd and several clinically trained professionals who serve as volunteers. Since opening in Quincy Center in 1992, the community counseling agency has provided critical support to individuals, couples and family groups in need of compassionate understanding.

For nearly 20 years, the staff and volunteer clinicians have provided hundreds of counseling hours serving clients from ages 5 to 75 on a sliding fee scale that is structured to the client's ability to pay.

For reservations, call 617-471-5686.

Pineapple Upside Down Cake

For this year's Easter recipe, I am getting away from the usual ham, lamb recipe and am instead using a dessert and a vegetable dish.

Both are different as you will see and I hope you will enjoy making then as much as I did.

PINEAPPLE UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

1 1/3 cups flour
¾ cup sugar
2 teaspoons backing powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup vegetable oil
1 egg
¾ cup milk
1-teaspoon vanilla
Rind from 1 lime
1-tablespoon limejuice
For the bottom
Four pineapple slices
½ stick butter
½ cup brown sugar
About 15 pecans

For the cake, and this is why this recipe is so simple. In a bowl, mix all the ingredients for the cake together and mix until smooth (It can be done by hand)

For the bottom, heat the butter and add the brown sugar.

On the bottom of a baking pan, place the brown sugar mixture. On top of that, place the pineapple slices neatly around the bottom. Place a pecan in the hole of each pineapple and spread the rest of them around. Pour the cake batter over it and bake in a 350-degree oven for 35 minutes or until a toothpick comes out clean from the middle of the cake. Wait about 15 minutes before you take the cake slowly out of the pan.

I served it with whipped cream, but vanilla ice cream goes well also.

The following recipe was given to me by my daughter Nancy's friend Janice, who brought me a small taste of it one day. And I enjoyed it so much, that I have made is since and thought you might all enjoy it as well.

BRUSSELS SPROUT, PEAR BAKE

12 large brussels sprouts (fresh and cut in half)
2 Bosc pears (any type will do)
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 cloves garlic
1 small onion
Salt and pepper to taste
2 or 3 tablespoons water or stock

Par boil the brussels sprouts, and cut in half. Slice the pears thin.

In a bowl add the olive oil, the chopped garlic and chopped onion, the brussel sprouts and the pears and mix well.

Place in a slightly greased pan, and add the water. Cook covered in a 350-degree oven for 20 minutes, and uncovered for ten minutes. Happy Easter

Friends Of World Charitable Trust To Host Fundraiser April 27

Friends of the World Charitable Trust will hold a fundraiser to help establish a beauty academy in Bangladesh Wednesday, April 27 from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy, Glendale Road.

Two local entrepreneurs are starting a beauty academy in Bangladesh to give young adult orphans the vocational skills they need to support themselves.

Friends of the World Charitable Trust is a Christian ministry which provides young adult orphans in developing countries with the vocational training they need to become economically self-sufficient.

After a mission trip to Bangladesh with First Presbyterian Church in Quincy, Sandra Ishmael, owner of Allure Spa in Quincy, realized she could use her professional experience and talents to train young adult orphans in the beauty industry.

Robert McCarthy, president of Kanon Bloch Carre in Braintree, joined her, and together they formed Friends of the World Charitable Trust, with Rev. Dr. Stan Johnson as the third Trustee.

"We saw the poverty there and just knew we had to help the younger people," Ishmael said.

The Trust's current project is a beauty academy in Khulna, Bangladesh, to teach haircare, skin care and business management. The beauty industry is growing in developing countries – there are jobs but few trained professionals.

"The Trust's beauty academy will uniquely position the orphans to work in this growing segment of the economy," McCarthy says.

The Trust needs to raise approximately $60,000 for this project.

The public is invited to attend the April 27 fundraiser at the Neighborhood Club. There will be food, raffles, a silent auction, and benefit jewelry.

Mayor Thomas Koch has been invited to attend.

Ticket donation is $35. Tickets are available at Allure Spa, 15 Quincy Ave., Quincy.

For more information, call 617-471-4464.

Events To Mark Community Development Week April 25-29

The City of Quincy will join other communities across the nation in celebrating "National Community Development Week" from April 25-29, announce Mayor Thomas Koch and Planning Director Dennis Harrington.

The week-long celebration provides the opportunity for Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) communities to showcase CDBG-funded projects and programs, and to educate residents, local businesses, and community groups about the programs administered by the city's Department of Planning and Community Development.

The CDBG program is a flexible program, overseen by the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), that provides communities, such as Quincy, with resources to address a wide range of unique community development needs.

Locally, CDBG funds are used to support activities and services such as community center programs; emergency food centers; housing rehabilitation activities; code inspections; the creation of affordable housing units; and also supports economic activities such as public works projects and assistance to small businesses for jobs creation.

Last year, the city's administration of the CDBG program directly benefitted nearly 13,000 Quincy residents.

Since 1975, the CDBG program has provided over $73 million to the City of Quincy for community development programs.

"The CDBG program continues to strengthen our city by channeling Federal funds directly through our Department of Planning and Community Development to address crucial neighborhood issues," Koch said. "From youth, family, and senior programming to street and sidewalk repair, the CDBG program is a vital and effective tool to assist us in meeting the needs in our community."

Seven events are planned during Community Development Week to celebrate the positive impacts CDBG and other HUD resources have had in Quincy. All events are open to the public.

The Community Development Week schedule is as follows:

• At 11 a.m. on Monday, April 25, there will be a ground-breaking ceremony at the intersection of Granite Street and Water Street, to celebrate the kickoff of the Brewer's Corner Neighborhood Improvement project.

This project, funded with a combination of CDBG and Energy Efficiency Conservation Block Grant funds, entails the implementation of a package of public infrastructure improvements.

The plan calls for the installation of new LED traffic signals; associated geometric improvements; pavement markings, and pedestrian amenities at the Copeland Street/Water Street/ Granite Street/Garfield Street intersection. The plans also call for sidewalk and curb reconstruction, ADA compliant ramps, associated roadway resurfacing at this intersection, several treeways, and neighborhood amenities like benches and plantings.

• At 2 p.m. on Tuesday, April 26, the Quincy 2000 Collaborative and the City of Quincy will present a check to the Lobster Stop at their 723 Washington St. location (Fore River Bridge rotary). CDBG funds given through the Quincy 2000 Collaborative, were utilized to provide a $25,000 loan to the Lobster Stop.

The funds will be used to purchase equipment, inventory, and provide working capital.

• From 6 to 8 p.m. on Tuesday, April 26, a workshop on the city's "At Home in Quincy" program will be held in the Foy Conference Room of Quincy City Hall.

"At Home in Quincy" is a program made possible through the city's Affordable Housing Trust, which may provide homebuyers living or working in Quincy with help to make the purchase of their first home more affordable with up to 2% down-payment assistance and Private Mortgage Insurance (PMI) paid for through Quincy's Affordable Housing Trust Fund.

• At 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday, April 27, a public hearing on a recently completed Analysis of Impediments to Fair Housing will be held in the Foy Conference Room of Quincy City Hall.

• At 11 a.m. on Wednesday, April 27, senior volleyball will be offered at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St.

• From 5 to 8 p.m. on Wednesday, April 27, a community service fair will be held in the Foy Conference Room of Quincy City Hall. The fair is intended to create an atmosphere for high school and college students to network with organizations who can offer professional development internship opportunities for college students and a chance to earn required volunteer hours for high school students.

The event will present volunteer and internship roles that build skills, networks, and experience for resumes and future employment.

From 5 to 9 p.m. on Thursday, April 28, a foreclosure prevention workshop will be held in the Foy Conference Room of Quincy City Hall.

The workshop will be administered by Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, through funding from the CDBG program.

The full Community Development Week schedule is available on the city's official website at www.quincyma.gov. For more details, call 617-376-1363.

Imagine just 5 days of treatment for breast cancer.

South Suburban Oncology Center helps you spend less time fighting cancer and more time living.

South Suburban Oncology Center in Quincy offers pioneering treatment for early stage breast cancer patients. Electronic Brachytherapy is a new alternative in partial breast irradiation, through advanced technology that is breaking barriers in breast cancer treatment. SSOC is proud to be one of the first - and few - centers in the country to offer this to our patients.

- FDA-approved treatment for early stage breast cancer
- Eligible patients are treated for 5 days, twice a day
- Less radiation exposure to the heart and lungs versus MammoSite
- Clinicians can be at patient's side during treatment
- High levels of patient satisfaction

For more information, including eligibility, contact SSOC today.

This treatment may not be appropriate for all early stage breast cancers. A specific criteria will determine if a woman is eligible to participate with this treatment option.

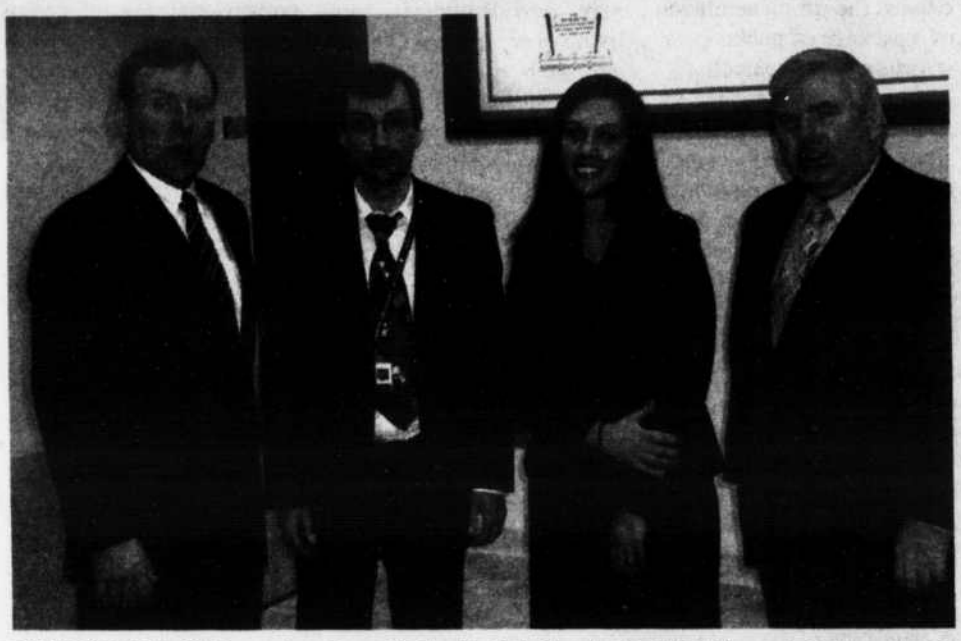
Bank Of Canton Hosts Norfolk Advocates For Children Conference On Bullying



The Bank of Canton recently hosted a Norfolk Advocates for Children (NAC) Conference focused on understanding and preventing bullying and cyber-bullying.

The session was held at the bank's corporate headquarters in Canton in conjunction with the Norfolk District Attorney's Office.

The conference was designed to help educators, counselors, police officers, and other community professionals help children by accurately identifying and appropriately responding to the pervasive culture of bullying and cyber-bullying among today's youth.

The program included informative and compelling presentations on understanding and intervening in cases of bullying, a review of legal issues for professionals, the impact of bullying on children, and bullying/cyber-bullying prevention programs for students.

"Each year, more children fall victim to bullying and cyber-bullying at the hands of fellow classmates, but there are preventative steps that can be taken to make kids safer," said Stephen P. Costello, president and CEO of Bank of Canton.

BANK OF CANTON in conjunction with the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office recently hosted a Norfolk Advocates for Children (NAC) Conference focused on understanding and preventing bullying and cyber-bullying. From left are: Stephen P. Costello, President and CEO of Bank of Canton; Dr. Peter Raffalli, Childrens Hospital; Gabrielle Viator, Assistant Attorney General; and Norfolk County District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey.

"Bank of Canton was proud to welcome Norfolk Advocates for Children and the Norfolk County District Attorney, Michael W. Morrissey, for this important conference as community professionals, educators, and law enforcement work together to prevent the harassment of children and students."

"Every case of bullying that can be prevented before it starts, rather than punished in its aftermath, is of huge importance to the children involved, their parents and their community," Norfolk County Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey said. "The NAC model is based on many community partners, both public and private, joining our efforts to help children in need; the Bank of Canton's contribution of their conference center is a perfect example of that."

Norfolk Advocates for Children is a partnership of public and private agencies that work together collaboratively to help children and families who experience physical, sexual, and domestic abuse.

City Hall Returns To Normal Business Hours Friday

City Hall will return to its normal 4:30 p.m. closing time on Fridays tomorrow (April 22) after 10 months of closing an hour early as part of an employee furlough program that saved $170,000 during the current fiscal year.

The Quincy Public Employees Union and SEIU Local 888, which represent about 150 clerical workers, both agreed to a one-hour per week furlough last year as an alternative to freezing wages that were included in the unions' contracts. The difference in wages that resulted as part of the furlough meant City Hall workers did not get contracted raises this year.

"I am grateful for the cooperation of all of our workers, and the patience of our residents, as we continue to work through these difficult times facing the City and the Commonwealth," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

The furlough program was one arm of a much broader program of wage deferrals and health insurance changes negotiated between Mayor Koch and City unions over the last three years in an effort to avoid widespread layoffs. Every union in the City has agreed to defer contracted raises at least once, and police unions accepted wage freezes for two consecutive years.

In 2008, unions agreed to join the state Group Insurance Commission, which has saved the City more than $15 million health-care costs since it was implemented.

"Our workforce – from firefighters, to laborers, to police officers to teachers and office workers, all deserve great credit for willingly coming to the table and making sacrifices," Koch said. "This is an issue that is playing out on the national stage in a far more confrontational context, but in Quincy we were able to achieve cost-savings by working together in good-faith negotiations."

Quincy Center Plans Draw National Interest

Quincy's past and future piqued the interest of some 30 planners from other cities in the United States last week when they signed on for a first-hand look at Quincy and a short seminar on the proposed $1.3 billion Quincy Revitalization Project.

"Everybody was really excited about the plans," said Rob Stevens, AICP, Principal Planner, Quincy's Department of Planning and Community Development.

Stevens was the guide who escorted the planners from Boston's Convention Center to Quincy via a ride on the Red Line's T. The visitors were among the 5000 planners attending the recent 2011 Convention of the American Planners Association (APA).

In Quincy, the planners were offered a double bill that, first, featured the city's historical treasures. Following that was a seminar on the Quincy's future presented by Planner Dennis Harrington and Richard Heapes, Managing Partner, Street-Works.

"It was a great opportunity to share with a national audience of urban experts Quincy's remarkable history and dynamic redevelopment plan for the future," Heapes said this week.

At the outset, Rev. Sheldon Bennett, Minister, United First Parish Church, welcomed the visitors to the church where they learned of the Adams family and viewed the tombs of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their wives located in the crypt of the church. They also discussed Quincy Center's other historic and architectural treasurers.

The planners then gathered in City Hall where Harrington outlined the city government's work on the revitalization plans, such as zoning changes and urban renewal designations.

Heapes outlined the work of the developer in designing the plans and raising the finances.

Stevens said the workshop offered "a chance to show off all the planning" as well as spread the word on the city's unique undertaking regarding financing.

"Everybody was talking about it," said Stevens who parried questions from the participants on the train ride back to Boston.

Stevens also noted that one visitor on his mobile tour came from England so the Quincy plan is likely to go international as well as national.

Police Plan Annual Sting Of Local Liquor Retailers

Underage drinkers had best beware because Quincy Police Department is once again checking alcohol vendors through the annual sting operation, directed by Detective Lt. Peter Turowski.

During the operation, police send underage persons to liquor retailers, restaurants, and package stores with the funds to purchase alcohol as a test of the retailers' diligence.

In some years, the retailers have scored perfectly with no Quincy sales to underage buyers while last year the sting netted two or three offenders. Businesses that sell to the underage buyer face license sanctions.

According to Cindy Manning, Secretary to the License Board, there are 36 package stores licensed in the city. Over 100 restaurants are licensed to sell alcohol, with 96 having full all-alcohol licenses and 18 with beer and wine licenses.

The inspections are conducted in accordance with guidelines set by the state's Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC).

Mayor To Host Meetings On City Finances Beginning May 3

In the meetings, Koch will detail the City's financial plan for the Fiscal Year that begins on July 1 and which is expected to be delivered to the Quincy City Council for deliberation on May 2.

Koch said he will present "a clear picture" of city spending, revenues, and historic and future trends.

"It is not enough to just put the budget up on the website, deliver it to the City Council, and say that's good enough: We want to really explain how the City operates, what we've done for spending cuts, and how we plan to move forward," Koch said.

While the community meetings will be focused on finances, Koch said residents are welcome to attend with any questions they may have.

The meeting schedule is as follows, all times are 7 p.m. unless otherwise noted:

- May 3, Broad Meadows Middle School
- May 12, Montclair Elementary School
- May 16, Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center
- May 24, Kennedy Center
- May 25, Kennedy Center, 1:30 p.m.
- May 26, Beechwood Knoll Elementary School.

$4M Investment For Stop & Shop

the end of this year.

Currently, there are approximately 600 employees in Quincy Center and most of the additional 350 employees will be relocated from Stop & Shop's Braintree offices, according to Debbie Hill, spokesperson for Ahold.

Hill also said that all of the $2.9 million in building improvements will be internal and the balance of the $4 million will be directed to technology purchases and upgrades.

"We are delighted to announce that our building in Quincy, which we own, will once again be fully occupied later in 2011 as we relocate divisional staff to the building," said Mark McGowan, president of the New England Division.

McGowan also pledged continued support for the city. "As one of the largest local employers in Quincy, we intend to remain actively involved in the quality of life of the downtown Quincy community."

Schlicker's announcement and McGowan's plans in Quincy Center drew cheers from City Hall and Street-Works officials as more signs of confidence and a major boon to the Quincy Center Revitalization plan. Street-Works is the designated developer for the city's $1.3 billion renewal project.

For Mayor Thomas Koch's, Ahold's plan reinforces his belief that, for Quincy, "The future is now."

"We are thrilled by their commitment to reinvest in our city, keeping their ties to our community strong. Quincy Center is poised for a dramatic rebirth and this $4 million reinvestment by one of our longest-standing corporate citizens sends an unmistakable message that the future is now for our historic, vibrant downtown.

"We are seeing signs like this almost every day that Quincy Center is truly going to be the economic investment capital of the region in the years to come," the mayor said.

For Street-Works' partner Ken Narva, Ahold's plans "demonstrate their confidence in the downtown redevelopment and its position for future success."

In fact, Stop & Shop's real estate team has long been a major force in the Quincy Center's redevelopment project as Stop & Shop's team introduced Street-Works to Quincy in 2005.

"Stop & Shop has a long history of support and investment in Quincy and this is another commitment to this community...." said Narva.

Company Divisions

The Quincy building at 1385 Hancock St. will become one of two main Ahold USA support offices with the company's finance, real estate, construction, legal and human resources functions based here.

Currently, Stop & Shop New England and Stop & Shop New York Metro Divisions operate more than 390 supermarkets in the northeast, as well as a distribution center in Freetown.

With more than 20,000 associates, the company is one of the largest private sector employers in Massachusetts.

Ahold USA also operates two additional divisions: Giant Landover and Giant Carlisle and Peapod, the nation's leading e-commerce grocery business.

The international retail food giant is based in the Netherlands with supermarkets in Europe and 13 states in the United States where it employs more than 106,000 associates.

According to a Wikipedia report, Ahold's U.S. division was ranked as 7th of the "Top 75 North American Food Retailers" several years ago, based on 2006 fiscal year estimated sales of $24 billion.

come."

Heading his list will be a status report on the purchase of a 2.9-acre lot intended to link the original 57 acres of Faxon Park to the 13-acre Avalon Estates parcel and to adjoining open space of some 15-acres.

Some $50,000 in Community Preservation (CPA) funds were set aside for that purchase several years ago.

In addition, speakers at next Wednesday's session will report on the repairs of the stonewalls at Faxon Park. Thanks to a $200,000 award from CPA, that project was expected to begin last year and conclude this year.

A report will also focus on plans for removing contaminants from the Faxon Park acreage which includes the original Quincy High School building site.

Quincy Rotary Club's Donation Helps Feed Needy Families

"Spice up the New Year" is the theme for Quincy Rotary's donation of $1,000 along with nutritious recipes, and spices to benefit the Interfaith Social Services food drive.

Not only will these spices help to flavor up meals but they will also provide meals for 160 families living from Quincy to Cohasset.

The Quincy Rotary has partnered with Alan Shawn Feinstein in a national effort to combat hunger and support efforts to alleviate hunger through community service.

The top goal of eradicating hunger and poverty has long vexed humanitarian organizations. Rotary club members, who not only advocate the cause but also volunteer at the grassroots level, can be part of the solution.

For more information about Quincy Rotary Club, visit, www.quincyrotary.com.

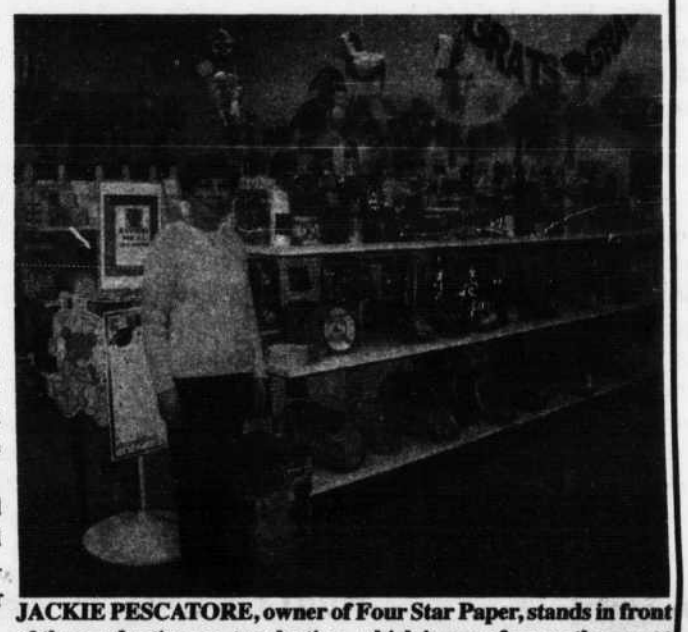
Four Star Paper: Quality Products at Reasonable Prices



Four Star Paper provides a unique shopping experience. If you're having a party, it's the place to go to find all you need! If you're a retail customer, you'll find everyday paper products in addition to party supplies. If you're a member of a church, parent group or club, you'll find products for functions, fundraisers or stocking your facility. If you're a wholesale customer, you'll find products in quantity as well as small items you may need. No matter why you come to Four Star, you will find quality products at reasonable prices.

Four Star Paper is a family-owned business that has been in Quincy for over twenty years! Named in honor of the owners' four children, you can usually find a family member in the store. Located at 84 Liberty Street we are open to the public Monday-Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. and on Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. The spacious location is staffed by knowledgeable people who actually enjoy helping customers. "There aren't many stores whose employees still greet people and ask them if they need help. They are also willing to help customers to their cars with their purchases when needed," says owner Jackie Pescatore.

Four Star Paper offers retail customers basic party needs-plates, napkins, cups, cutlery, table covers. It also stocks a wide variety of paper party and seasonal products. We are currently stocked for the spring season with graduation, First Communion and Confirmation paper products. We also offer birthday, luau, baby shower, patriotic and other special occasion paper products. In addition, we offer disposable trays, utensils and canned foods to help you with your event. Add fun to any party with our balloon centerpieces and bouquets.

Four Star Paper services wholesale customers including coffee and sub shops, restaurants, caterers, and management companies. We offer delivery to these customers and pride ourselves on our speedy and efficient service. As a testimony to that service and competitive pricing, we still retain many of our original customers.

Four Star Paper is a member of both the Quincy and South Shore Chambers of Commerce and the National Federation of Independent Business. For more information on available products, please visit us on facebook or at www.fourstarpaper.com.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, April 12, 2011, at approximately 1 p.m., a citizen reported that a male and a female attempted to con their way into their Norfolk Street home under the guise of working for the water department, needing to check the water heater.

LT. DAN MINTON

Coincidentally, the resident happened to work for the water department and knew that these two suspects did not. The Police were notified but were unable to locate the suspect's vehicle, a green pick-up truck with wooden sides.

A few hours later, at approximately 5:15 P.M., Officer Matt Tobin was in the area of Wollaston Center when he observed a pick-up truck matching the description, with a male and female inside. The Officer observed the pick up truck pull to the right and stop at the intersection of Brook and Arlington Street, even before he put his blue lights on.

Officer Dan Parisi arrived moments later. As the Officer approached the truck, the operator said, "sorry, sorry." The operator provided a driver's license and passport from El Salvador, along with a valid registration. Officer Tobin attempted to converse with the operator but he just kept saying, "sorry." When asked who owned the vehicle, the passenger stated it was hers, that they live in Chelsea. When asked why they were in Quincy, she stated, "Just looking for scrap metal."

Officer Tobin requested that QPD Communications have the caller from the earlier incident at Norfolk Street come to his location. When the caller/witness arrived on scene, the Officers asked what occurred and was told the following: the doorbell rang and he went to the door to find a woman stating that she worked for the water department and wanted to check the water heater. He also noted that there was a male standing next to the green pick up truck. When she was denied entry, the couple drove off and he called "911."

The caller told Officer Tobin that he was absolutely sure it was the same truck, adding that it was also the same two people who were at his home earlier. Although the circumstances were highly suspicious, technically, a crime had not been committed. During this time, Officer Parisi ran a routine record check on the operator and found that he did not have a driver's license. Furthermore, the passport and license had different dates of birth on them and the passport did not have any type of stamp indicating when or where entry was made into the United States. It was determined that the license was forged, not the passport, although his point of entry was unresolved.

The suspect, a 40 year old Chelsea resident, was placed under arrest for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle and forgery of a registry document.

SAFETY ISSUE - HOUSE NUMBERS: Spring is here, a good time to make sure that the number on your house is easy to spot and large enough to read, especially at night. When emergency units are responding to your home, time is crucial. If the call is of a medical nature and there are extra people on scene, have someone go to the sidewalk and flag down responding units.

Another Job Well Done

On Tuesday, April 12 at approximately 2:05 P.M., Officers Brian Flaherty, Paul Matthews and Paul Holland responded to the East Squantum Street area for a family disturbance in progress.

Quincy Communication alerted the units that the caller stated her husband pushed her against the wall while she was holding their child. Upon arrival, Officer Flaherty noticed the husband sitting on the front stairs with the wife standing nearby, holding their 9 month old child. The wife was yelling and screaming about how her husband would not let her take the car seat from his vehicle to transport their child.

Officer Flaherty interviewed the husband, who said that his wife was unreasonable, argumentative and slapped him several times across the face. He said that he grabbed her to keep her off of him, but denied hitting her. The area where the husband said he was struck was red.

Officer Flaherty then interviewed the wife, who said that she woke her husband up around noon time because she wanted him to transfer the car seat from his vehicle to hers, but he refused. She stated they argued for about an hour and he would not let her take the child since she did not have a car seat to transport their child. She said that as she attempted to leave, her husband shoved her against the wall while she was holding their child. She responded by slapping him several times across the face.

Based upon information available, Officer Flaherty told Officer Holland to place the husband under arrest. Upon hearing this, the wife blurted out, "I recant what I said - I don't want him arrested. I'm not saying anything else. I called and asked for your f@#$%^& help and you arrest my husband for nothing. All I wanted was the car seats."

She then refused to answer any other questions and told the Officers to leave "since you just ruined my life." The wife/victim was offered an emergency restraining order, but she refused this as well as a Quincy Police Department Domestic Violence Victim's rights pamphlet. The 28 year old suspect/husband was charged with Domestic Assault and Battery and transported to the station for booking.

Real Estate

Total Dollar Volume Down 6% In First Quarter

Register Of Deeds Issues Report On Norfolk County Real Estate Activity

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell has issued a report on real estate activity in Norfolk County for the quarter ending March 31.

In January, 2010 the Registry launched its electronic recording division. By the end of March of 2010 the Registry had received 323 electronically transmitted recordings generating total Registry revenue of $40,568.00.

This year during the same quarter the Registry received 2,193 electronically transmitted documents for recording. Revenue derived from these documents exceeded $300,000.

Register O'Donnell said the average recording time for a document transmitted electronically to the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds is less than 15 minutes regardless of where in the country the document emanates from.

Total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the quarter period from January to March, 2011, settled at just under $833 million, a 6% decrease from the same 2010 quarter.

A total number of 2,696 deeds were recorded during the January to March, 2011 quarter also constituting a slight drop from the 3,008 deeds recorded during the same timeframe last year. The average sale price of deeds over $1,000 (both residential and commercial properties) increased countywide by 4% from the previous year's first quarter to $644,124.

This increase may be driven by the sale of commercial properties, O'Donnell said.

Mortgage recording activity increased in the year's first quarter with 7,947 mortgages recorded marking a jump of 13% from 2010. Total mortgage value, however, for the quarter stood at $3 billion, representing a decline from 2010 numbers.

"It is important to note," O'Donnell said, "that this total mortgage value amount does not necessarily represent the true increase in indebtedness as some mortgages may be recorded multiple times against different parcels of land, are refinances simply replacing existing debt, or are recorded to secure equity credit lines which may not be drawn to their capacity."

O'Donnell continued:

"While foreclosures continue to trouble the market with 84 foreclosure deeds recorded from January to March, 2011, this number represents a great improvement over the same 2010 period during which 208 foreclosure deeds were recorded."

Even with this improvement, O'Donnell initiated a new coding system in November 2010 whereby notices informing homeowners of a lender's intent to foreclose are more closely tracked by the Registry. This coding system enabled the Registry in the year's first quarter to enter into a Memorandum of Understanding with both the South Shore Home Consortium and Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore to identify for services and counseling those Norfolk County homeowners who have just recently received a Notice of Foreclosure from a lender.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County.

Foreclosure Prevention Counseling Clinic

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore will offer a free foreclosure prevention counseling clinic in Quincy April 28 to help local families struggling with their mortgage payments.

The clinic will be held from 5 to 9 p.m. Thursday, April 28 in the second floor conference room at Quincy City Hall. Attendees will have an opportunity to meet with Neighborhood Housing Services counselors, who will review each participant's individual housing issues and begin to develop a plan to mediate with the lender to best solve the client's foreclosure issue.

Open to area residents of any income level, the Quincy event is one of three foreclosure prevention clinics Neighborhood Housing is holding across the South Shore to help local families in danger of losing their homes to foreclosure.

Additional sessions are scheduled for May 12 at Weymouth's John McCulloch Building and June 8 at Braintree Town Hall.

"We want homeowners to know that they don't have to wait until their home is about to be foreclosed upon to come see us," Executive Robert Corley said. "These sessions are for any family that is struggling to keep up with their mortgage payments; if people come to see Neighborhood Housing early on, our counselors can try to arrange a loan modification and payment plan to help them preserve their financial stability and prevent foreclosure."

To register for a foreclosure prevention clinic, call 617-770-2227.

Reflections From The 1981 Royal Wedding

Sun Reader Jean Ann Phinney Shares Memories When Prince Charles And Lady Diana Married

(Editor's Note: As the 2011 royal wedding of Prince William and Kate Middletown approaches, one of our readers shares some of her memories of the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana 30 years ago.)

By JEAN ANN PHINNEY

In 1981 I was on a trip to Scotland and arrived in Edinburgh the day before the London wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana on July 29. Upon arrival in Edinburgh we checked into our hotel on Princes Street across from the Princes Street Gardens next door to Jenners Department Store. Our first stop was The Food Court at Jenners. We anticipated we would be watching the televised wedding the next day – all day! We carefully selected lunch items, which required no refrigeration.

The wedding day was a state holiday in Great Britain. Everything was closed. On Princes Street, a very busy main street of Edinburgh, there was an occasional car, a bus on holiday schedule, and some pedestrians, but generally most people were at home in front of a television.

As the wedding day dawned a substantial Continental breakfast was delivered to guests' rooms. We had breakfast while watching Lady Diana alight from her carriage and the world had its first glimpse of the soon-to-be-princess in her billowing silk wedding gown with a cascading bouquet of flowers. Until that moment all details of Diana's wedding outfit were a closely guarded royal secret.

The entire morning was devoted to the wedding. At lunchtime, we had the tasty Jenners "wedding picnic" with coffee or tea made in the room with the electric kettle. The telecast went on from the ceremony to other features on the bride and groom and London and the royal family. It concluded sometime after the wedding party appeared on the balcony of Buckingham Palace, at about mid-afternoon.

Having been saturated with the wedding, television, and sitting all day, we embarked on a walk around the beautiful center of Edinburgh. We went across the Princes Street Gardens to Edinburgh Gardens, down the Royal Mile to Holyrood Palace, back the length of Princes Street – a long, but very pleasant walk.

As we approached our hotel we noticed quite a crowd gathered around one of Jenners Department Store windows. We had to find out why! We patiently inched closer and there was "Diana" in her wedding gown! The mannequin looked liked Diana and the gown was a duplicate of her gown! As I stood there examining it, I tried to imagine what preparations it took to accomplish this treat for everyone who saw it. Jenners must have stocked bolt upon bolt of possible wedding dress material. They had one, which, to my eye, was identical. They must have had a florist standing by with all the possible flowers that could be used. A jeweler must have had access to a wide variety of jewels that Diana might wear. To make all of this possible there had to be a team of expert seamstresses who worked from the first glimpse until the arrangement of the mannequin in the window.

I am still in awe of this "frosting on the cake" treat that Jenners produced in a matter of hours.

The 1981 royal wedding treat was so well received that I imagine it will be repeated on April 29 with a mannequin of Kate Middleton in her wedding gown. I would like to be a "fly on the wall" in Edinburgh that day!

Royal Family's No-Bake Chocolate Biscuit Cake

According to the latest gossip, today's recipe for chocolate biscuit cake is Prince William's favorite. It is said that this cake will be one of the several to be served on Prince William and Kate's wedding day.

In this recipe, which calls for tea biscuits, the royal family prefers McVitie's brand Rich Tea Biscuits, but any firm butter cookie can be used on this intensely rich and chocolatey no bake treat.

CHOCOLATE BISCUIT CAKE

For the cake

7 ounces package butter tea biscuits (sold in the cookie aisle)
1-cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons honey
½ stick butter
16 ounces (about 2 ½ cups bittersweet chocolate bits)
1-teaspoon vanilla

For the glaze

2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup heavy cream
6 ounces bittersweet chocolate

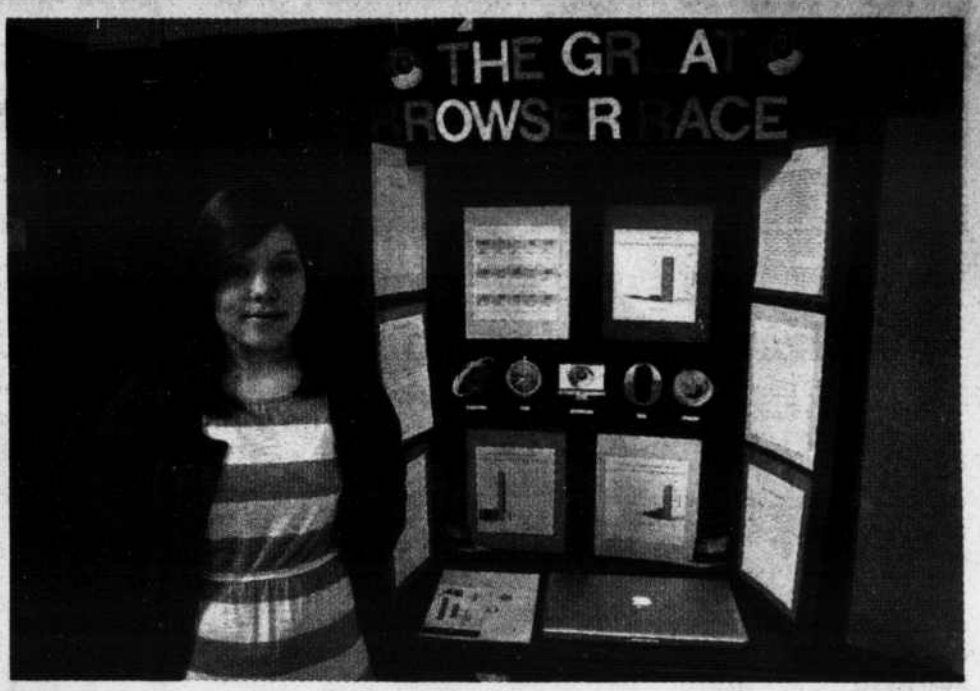
Coat a 7 or 8 inch round spring form pan with cooking spray

To make the cake, with your hands, break up the biscuits into ¼ to ½ inch pieces, because you want chunks not crumbs.

In a medium microwave bowl, combine the cream, honey and butter. Microwave on high for 1-½ minutes, or until bubbling. Add the chocolate and stir until melted and mixture is smooth. Stir in the vanilla, then the crumbled biscuits.

Spoon the mixture into the pan, and gently tap the pan on the counter to eliminate any air pockets.

Refrigerate for three hours until thoroughly chilled.



Once the cake is chilled, prepare the glaze. In a small saucepan over medium heat, combine the butter and cream until mixture starts to boil.

Remove it from the heat, and add the chocolate, stirring until completely melted and smooth.

Then top the cake with the glaze.

GRIFFIN CURRAN, an eighth grader at the Sterling Middle School, was the first place winner at the school's recent science fair. His project was titled "Rusting Metals."

SABRINA RAUCH was a second place winner at the Sterling Middle School's recent Science Fair.

Sterling Middle School 14th Annual Science Fair

Sterling Middle School recently held its 14th Annual Science Fair under the direction of eighth grade science teacher Lou Venturelli.

Sterling's first place winner was Griffin Curran whose project title was "Rusting Metals."

Second place winners included Kunyi Li and Sabrina Rauch, while Bailey Brann and Romel Malimaban finished third.

Marina Araujo, Stephen Delorio, Aaron Ha, Christine Tam, Jenny Thi and Henry Yip received Honorable Mention.

The school's "kids vote" winner chosen by students was Kim Matos.

Eighth grade students proudly displayed their projects to both their fellow students at their school as well as faculty judges who had to determine how well they followed the scientific method, along with several other criteria.

"We want kids to solve a problem that they are interested in by setting up an experiment," said Venturelli. "Both our high schools are participating in science fairs, so this should serve as an important learning experience for them."

Cyclists Riding For 'Pedal Partner' Jackie Mullen

Fundraiser Friday For Pan-Mass Challenge Team

Team CHUCKLE, a team of riders in the Pan-Mass Challenge, will host a fundraiser at The Varsity Club in Quincy Friday, April 22 from 7 a.m. to 1 a.m.

Ray Waldron, a Quincy firefighter and lifelong Quincy resident, was a co-founder of Team CHUCKLE in 2010. Last year, Ray, Rob Brennan and Will Prendergast, another Quincy resident, rode in the Pan-Mass Challenge and raised over $26,000 as a team for The Jimmy Fund.

The goal for Team CHUCKLE in 2011 is to raise $250,000 for The Jimmy Fund.

Last year the team found inspiration in the sister of team co-captain Rob Brennan. She was diagnosed with rhabdomyosarcoma, an extremely rare form of cancer just weeks before the 2010 PMC. This cancer afflicts less than 350 people a year in this country, of which over 90% are infants. The cancer is so rare that there are no studies on it for adults, except at Dana Farber where money raised directly from the PMC has funded research for it. Thanks to doctors at Dana Farber, Rob's sister Dana is now cancer free less than one year later and now a volunteer on Team CHUCKLE.

This year, Team CHUCKLE has grown to 32 riders, including fellow Quincy Firefighter Mike Kerr, and over 30 volunteers and includes Boston comedians who are helping to promote laughter as the best medicine. The team motto is Pedal Hard...Laugh Harder.

"PEDAL PARTNER" – Four-year-old Jackie Mullen, a patient at Dana Farber, with Pan-Mass Bicycle Challenge Team CHUCKLE members Melissa Kelley and team co-captain Rob Brennan.

This year, the team has a "Pedal Partner," 4-year-old Jackie Mullen, who loves to dance, Disney Princesses, doing crafts, dressing up, lady bugs and butterflies. She is also being treated at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute for a Langerhan Cell Histiocytosis tumor in her skull, a form of cancer that afflicts 8 children out a million.

Jackie is providing great inspiration for Team CHUCKLE and has been described by PMC official Alex Smith as the most enthusiastic and charismatic 4 year old she has ever met. Jackie was the first patient to sign up for this year's Pedal Partner program and introduced herself to Alex by asking "What is your clipboard for?" as soon as Alex walked into the treatment waiting area at Dana-Farber!

Friday's fundraiser will feature comedian Elvis Collins, singer/songwriter Randy Vera, and South Shore rock band, Itchy Bean.

OCD Treatment Group Meets At Bethany Church

A treatment group for Obsessive Compulsive Disorder will be held Monday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m. at Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear St., Quincy, beginning April 25.

The group will meet every other week.

There is no cost but donations will be accepted.

How To Check For Lyme Disease

When warmer spring temperatures beckon kids outdoors, parents should remember to check them for ticks to avoid Lyme disease.

Dr. Greg DeMuri, an infectious disease specialist at American Family Children's Hospital, says Lyme disease may cause flu-like symptoms, fever, fatigue, rash and joint and body aches. Ticks get the Lyme bacteria by biting wildlife, such as deer, and the bacteria spread when the ticks bite human skin. This treatable disease can have serious long-term effects if it's not detected early in its course.

DeMuri says Lyme disease is quite common in younger people who are more likely to be outside in the spring and summer months.

"Children are lower to the ground, and ticks live in grass and low-lying vegetation and get on the child's body," he says. "Parents should look over the child's skin from head to toe because ticks can go anywhere. It generally takes 24 to 48 hours for a tick to spread Lyme disease."

DeMuri, who is also an associate professor of pediatrics at the University of Wisconsin School of Medicine and Public Health, says if a tick is found in the skin, it should be removed immediately, preferably with a pair of tweezers.

"Washing the skin or using other remedies such as gasoline, alcohol and petroleum jelly will not work," he says. "You should use tweezers to grab the tick by the head and not leave any part of it in the skin. Forcible removal is the key."

But prevention is always preferable. DeMuri says children can most easily avoid Lyme disease by

- tucking their pants inside their socks
- wearing clothing that is not loose-fitting
- using repellents such as DEET, which he says is non-toxic.

"There is this public misconception that DEET is dangerous," says DeMuri. "I can tell you in my 15 years in Wisconsin that I have seen well over 100 cases of Lyme disease and serious complications from them, and I have not seen a single case of toxicity caused by DEET. The benefits clearly outweigh the risks."

DEET is found in a number of over-the-counter insect repellents. DeMuri also says picaridin and permethrin can keep ticks away.

"Both are practically odorless, and will last on clothing for a number of weeks," he says.

Untreated, Lyme can cause chronic joint pain and complications to the heart and central nervous system. However, if caught early, the disease can be eradicated with the use of antibiotics.

"It's very unusual to die from Lyme disease," says DeMuri.

Wollaston Beach Stroller Walking Group Sundays

The Friends of Wollaston Beach have established a Beach Stroller Walking Group.

The "Wolly Strollers" meet Sundays at 8:30 a.m. at the Wollaston Beach Bathhouse.

The group is open to any parent/guardian with a child/children in a stoller.

Those wishing to walk with the group are asked to wear a blue shirt to show they are part of the group.

The strollers will walk down to Black's Creek, cross the street, walk along the seawall to the lights at Billings Street, cros the street and walk back to the playground.

Registered walkers are welcome to walk any portion of the route according to their own level of fitness.

No pets at this time.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

FAT CHANCE!

Not only does gum disease afflict a large portion of the adult population and pose the threat of tooth loss, this inflammatory condition has also been linked with an increased risk of heart disease, stroke, and other serious conditions. With this in mind, patients should be scrupulous about oral care at home and scheduling regular dental appointments. It may also pay to increase consumption of omega-3 fatty acids found in fish. New research indicates that omega-3s significantly decrease the risk of gum disease. People consuming the most DHA (one of the principal omega-3 fatty acids found in fish) were 22 percent less likely to suffer periodontitis; EPA (the other important fish-oil omega-3) also lowered the risk, but not as much.

If you are looking for a family dentist who understands the needs of everyone in your family as individuals and as patients, we hope yo will consider us. Since there is no pain or discomfort present during the initial stages, people often ignore the signs and symptoms, believing them to be normal occurrences. Knowledge about gum disease is, therefore, imperative to dental health. If you need answers to questions about gum disease, or any other dental health care, don't hesitate to contact us at 617-479-6220. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Four of every five Americans suffer from some form of gum disease, according to the National Institute of Dental and Craniofacial Research, which is part of the National Institute of Health (NIH).

ARE YOU OVER-MEDICATING?

Millions of Americans who take pain medications should know that the government has acknowledged that the most popular painkiller poses great potential for over-medication. In recognition of the fact that overdosing on over-the-counter acetaminophen leads to liver damage, the FDA called for a limit on the daily adult maximum dose at 3,250 milligrams. More recently, the FDA asked manufacturers of prescription combination products containing acetaminophen to limit the amount of acetaminophen to no more than 325 milligrams (mg) in each tablet or capsule. With such actions being taken, those afflicted with chronic pain may ask themselves whether they want to continue to mask pain with potentially dangerous drugs or avail themselves of drugless chiropractic treatment.

How many medications do you take? We believe in preventive health care. Chiropractic is a health care discipline that emphasizes the inherent recuperative power of the body to heal itself without the use of drugs or surgery. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we maintain that the body has a built-in capacity to restore health within certain limits, and we base our care on this principle. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where the conditions we address are as varied and as vast as the nervous system itself. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and let us help you feel better. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Even over-the-counter non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs), which include aspirin, ibuprofen, and naproxen sodium, can cause stomach bleeding.

3-1 Overall; Next Game April 26 Against NQ

A Fast Start To The Season For QHS Softball

SENIOR KORI SORENSEN fanned 16 Hanover batters in Quincy's 3-2-victory on April 14. Sorensen and the Presidents are off to another fast start (3-1 overall) and should be in contention for a Patriot League title this spring. The team's next game is on April 26 versus North Quincy.

By SEAN BRENNAN

Four games into their season and Quincy softball (3-1 overall) is already on track for another successful regular season. Last spring, the Presidents jumped out to a 12-1 record before finishing out the schedule at 15-5.

Quincy's tournament run ended prematurely following a 20-inning 1-0 loss to Dartmouth High School in a Division I South Sectional preliminary round game.

The 2011 campaign began with a 5-3 non-league victory over Stoughton (April 5); the Presidents lost a fifth-inning lead to Silver Lake Regional on April 7, eventually falling 8-5 at Mitchell-McCoy Field. Quincy answered right back against Pembroke on April 11, winning 3-2 and the team closed out last week with a 3-2 come-from-behind-ten-inning, walk-off victory over Hanover.

With a week off before playing next Tuesday versus North Quincy (3:30 start), the Presidents are taking this time to work on fundamentals, including improving their fielding, with every intention of coming back after the school vacation week fine-tuned for the stretch run.

"We still have a lot of work to do, but I have liked what I have seen so far," said QHS coach Roger Bacchieri on Monday. "We have the potential to be a good hitting team and with the pitching (depth) that we have we should be in every game we play. We need to still work on our fielding. We didn't have too much time (in the pre-season) because of the weather, but that is something that we can improve on."

Back this season for one last go-around is star hurler Kori Sorensen. And that is great news for Quincy and bad news for the rest of the Patriot League. Sorensen (2-1) is already pitching at a high level. Against Hanover, a team which should be among the best the Patriot League has to offer this spring, Sorensen fanned 16 batters in ten innings as Quincy won in exciting fashion on a walk-off hit.

"She has been fantastic," said Bacchieri about his three-sport standout. "Kori is one of the best pitchers in the area and when she is on the mound she gives us a chance to win every time out."

"Kori is a three-sport athlete (volleyball, basketball, softball) but she pitches year-round," Bacchieri continued. "She has continued to improve and get better every year and so far this season her pitches look faster. Whenever she pitches we should stay in the game."

With Sorensen locked in as the Presidents' No. 1 starter, Quincy holds a huge advantage over most teams; however, if the talented senior needs a game off, the Presidents have a capable No. 2 starter in junior Nicole Parry who can come in and get the job done. Parry, the team's starting shortstop, already has a victory under her belt as she pitched Quincy to a 3-2 win over Pembroke. A potential all-star at the shortstop position, Parry's ability to toe the rubber gives Bacchieri options, and that is never a bad thing.

"Nicole can pitch and she gives us another option," he said. "It allows us to alternate if we think Kori may need a game off."

Joining Sorensen as seniors to watch this season are Jamie Shaughnessy (second base), Lisa Lam (outfield) and Alyssa Shaw. Shaughnessy is the spark that will drive the Quincy offense while Lam has already contributed with her speed – she scored the winning run against Hanover.

"Jamie was phenomenal for us last year," Bacchieri stated, "and she is probably our best hitter. She hits line drives; she is a great hitter."

Quincy's four seniors bring with them big game experience and varsity knowledge, but do not overlook the impact that the junior class could have this spring. Besides Nicole Parry, juniors Katy Lowry (leftfield), Erin Chiocchio (first-base), Blair Hajjar and Kiley McDonald will be asked to produce at the plate and in the field and according to Bacchieri, so far, so good with this class.

"I am expecting big things from Lowry," he said. "Erin played in the outfield last year and is playing first base this season and she should also be a big part of the team and Kiley will see time in right field. They are all good athletes and have been playing great."

The future of Quincy softball is bright because of the talent the Presidents have in their sophomore and freshmen classes. Leading the tenth-grade charge is third baseman Devin McMahon, a returnee from last spring. Fellow sophomore and returning varsity player Devon Varmahmoodi is expected to see considerable time behind the plate. Though impossible to replace the leadership and production of since-graduated Olivia Berry – now starring at catcher for Trinity College (CT) – Varmahmoodi isn't green; she caught three games for Quincy in 2010.

Other sophomores to keep an eye on as the season progresses are Ashley Faiella and Marissa Dwyer.

The freshmen class is headlined by Taylor Parry, Olivia Noonan, Rachel Papile and Bethany Walker.

"The younger girls are catching on fast," Bacchieri said. "We are a young team and it may take some time for us figure stuff out, but there should be opportunities for these kids to play and get better. Being so young also gives us plenty of room for improvement."

Quincy has already played two of the top teams in the Patriot League: Silver Lake and Hanover. After losing a late-game lead to the Lakers, the Presidents responded with a confidence-building win over the Indians. The league is well balanced, as evidence by some early season results, and that gives Bacchieri and his staff confidence that the Presidents should be in the mix for a league title at the end.

"I like our chances but from what I have seen in the papers the league looks balanced this year," he said. "Hanover and Silver Lake are both good teams but so are Middleboro and Hingham and North Quincy. Having so many strong teams will make for some interesting and competitive games, but if our pitching holds up and we can score four to five runs a game we will be tough to beat."

Quincy's next four games include their rival game with the Red Raiders (April 26), on the road at Randolph (April 27), at home against Duxbury (April 29) and against Scituate on May 2.

NQ Girls Tennis Is Serving Up Early Season Success

By SEAN BRENNAN

Early season results oftentimes are a precursor to a successful and rewarding regular season. This could well be the case for the North Quincy girls tennis program.

The Red Raiders entered the school vacation week firing on all cylinders and if early April match results are any indication, North Quincy should be in line for a Patriot League championship run. North Quincy (3-0 overall) has already defeated Hanover, Hingham and Whitman-Hanson, with their 3-2 victory over the Harborwomen being the early season benchmark.

These Red Raiders can match up with any team. Their top-three singles players are as good a trio as you will find in the area. No. 1 singles player Elizabeth Sullivan is a top tier talent as is No. 2 singles player Sara Sullivan – both juniors are undefeated through three matches this spring. Tiffany Leung, North Quincy's No. 3 singles player is no slouch either; only a sophomore, she has already come up large in a key spot. Her three-set (3-6, 7-6, 6-1) victory against Hingham gave the Red Raiders their first match win over the Patriot League's perennial powerhouse in over three seasons.

The North Quincy doubles teams are also legit. Playing at No. 1 doubles

NQ/Quincy Tracksters Impress At Invitational

By JOE REARDON

Eventually this spring, the clouds will part and the temperature will rise, allowing the North Quincy/Quincy track team to get the absolute most from their talent in optimum conditions.

Tracksters competing in Saturday's Notre Dame Academy Freshman-Sophomore Invitational were hoping for warm conditions, but the weather was anything but. A cold win howled the entire day and the temperatures hovered in the 40s, but felt much colder because of the wind chill.

The less-than-ideal conditions, though, didn't deter NQ/Q tracksters from putting up some impressive marks. The meet gave freshmen and sophomores the opportunity to compete and get a good idea as to where they stood amongst their underclassmen peers. This year was the biggest in its 16 years with 90 teams and more than 1,500 athletes competing for underclassmen bragging rights.

Given a good day to throw, Sam McNally should be able to improve ten-fold in the javelin. McNally never let the conditions bother her as she fired the spear 96 feet, 5 inches to finish less than a foot behind Medway's Julia Cassidy (97-4) to place second overall.

The throw not only earned McNally the silver medal but it proved to be a breakthrough performance in her specialty. McNally's effort erased her previous best by a whopping 15 feet and qualified her for the EMass Div. 1 championships on May 28 at Andover High. McNally joins sisters Olivia and Maya Umoren, who have already reached the Div. 1 standard in the shotput.

"We had a great day," said head coach Geoff Hennessy. "We were all psyched that Sam did so well. It was windy and cold. It was a tough day unless you're a distance runner."

McNally also had a successful day on the track, winning her 200-meter dash heat with a swift 29.60.

Rose Bennett, one of the most dependable athletes on Hennessy's squad, had a superb day as well. Bennett stretched herself to the limit to come up with a 29-2-1/2 performance in the long jump that placed her a very respectable 14th against a tough field. Bennett pushed hard down the straightaway and missed qualifying for the 100 hurdles final by less than half a second. Her finish did give her 12th overall.

NQ/Q also got a big showing from Jaquan Harris in both the 200 and long jump. Harris finished a step out of the top 10 in the 200 with a sterling 24.10 and leaped 16-5 for 19th in the long jump. Javelin thrower Matt Roche cracked the top 10 with a toss of 117-9, a distance that Roche should be able to improve on with better conditions.

Hennessy has plenty of reason to be optimistic about this season's team. The athletes have yet to catch a break with the weather, but are competing at a high level nevertheless. And he'll be getting a handful of athletes back from injuries and sickness in the next couple of weeks.

"We have kids who haven't competed yet," Hennessy pointed out. "It's too early in the season to be worried about times. We're just looking for a good day."

New Season, Golf Pro at Presidents Golf Course

Presidents Golf Course has opened for the 2011 golf season. The public golf course, owned and operated by Norfolk County, opened on March 14. The 18-hole, 5750-yard, par 70 golf course will be entering its 34th season in North Quincy.

Monday through Thursday, Presidents GC runs on a first-come-first-serve basis. Friday through Sunday, before 4 p.m., tee times are required; tee times can be made 48 hours in advance.

In other course news, the new Head Pro at Presidents GC this season is PGA Professional Dana Smith. Smith has been hired as the Head Golf Professional. Originally from Dorchester, he had previously worked as an Assistant Golf Professional at Wollaston GC, Walpole CC, Oakley CC, Winchester CC and Granite Links GC. With over 18 years in the golf business, Smith brings a wealth of knowledge in golf retail, customer service, the golf swing and the game of golf.

DANA SMITH, HEAD GOLF PRO

Presidents GC will also be offering several golf programs for men, women and junior golfers. Assistant Golf Professionals Rob Churchill and Jim McMahon will be instructors for the Women's Golf Clinics, which are held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights from 6-7 p.m. and Junior Clinics and Camps. Private golf lessons are also available from our golf professionals.

If you have any questions concerning our golf programs and lessons, to make a tee time or ask about our daily rates, call 617-328-3444, ext. 305.

are Julie Ross (senior) and Sanjana Kadrivel while senior Julie Doyle and Mallory Devoe team up at No. 2 doubles.

The combination of steady singles and doubles has moved North Quincy into the discussion for a league title.

"The thing I like best about this group is that they work as a team," said NQHS head coach Kathy Torraco. "They are very considerate of each other and they have no problem helping each other out. We have played well as a team so far and I believe that we have the talent to continue to succeed."

In high school tennis final match scores are based on all five spots with the first team to reach three points winning. The Red Raiders have jumped out on all three opponents because of the play of the Sullivan sisters. Twin sisters Elizabeth and Sara Sullivan gave North Quincy a 2-0 lead in the match against Hingham. Elizabeth won at No. 1 singles, 6-3, 6-0, and Sara won at No. 2 singles, 6-4, 6-0.

"Sara and Elizabeth came to the team already with talent and skill," said Torraco. "They are very talented players."

In North Quincy's 5-0-match win over Whitman-Hanson, Elizabeth Sullivan won 6-0, 6-0, and Sara Sullivan won 6-0, 6-1.

Leung is a rising star for the Raiders. Besides her clutch match win against Hingham, she also was victorious against Whitman-Hanson, winning, 6-0, 6-1. It is her inner drive that earned her the spot at No. 3 singles.

"Tiffany has such persistence and a drive to be good," stated Torraco. "She practiced all winter and her strength and agility has improved ten-fold. In her match against Hingham she lost the first set but came back and took the second set in a tie-breaker before winning the third set 6-1."

With three underclassmen playing singles, seniors Ross and Doyle bring leadership and experience to the doubles teams. But their influence doesn't end there. An example of just how united this team is comes in the form of sportsmanship from Ross. Last season she was locked in at the No. 3 singles position. However, when Leung burst onto the scene this spring, Ross moved to No. 1 doubles because it was what was best for the team overall.

"Julie was a our No. 3 singles player last season," said Torraco. "When Tiffany became our No. 3, Julie could have complained but she didn't because she knew it was best for the team. That is the type of leadership she and Julie (Doyle) bring to the court."

Already 3-0, the Red Raiders are now a contender to finish in first-place in the Keenan Division with an eye on winning the end-of-the-year Patriot League championships.

"The goal is to make it to the championships, but a league title is also attainable," Torraco said. "We need to keep it going. There are still challenges ahead but we feel that with the stability that we have we should continue to be competitive."

North Quincy's next match is on Monday, April 25 against Quincy. The start time at the Bishop Courts in North Quincy (near Montclair School) is 3:30 p.m.

The North Quincy and Quincy boys' and girls' teams will meet again on May 24 and 25 at the Quincy Tennis Club.

Taylor Poulin Top Male; Nicole Christofaro Top Female

62 Residents Ran Boston Marathon

Taylor Poulin was the top Quincy finisher in Monday's 115th running of the Boston Marathon as the 25 year old traversed the 26.2-mile route from Hopkinton to Boston in 3 hours, 13 minutes and 57 seconds. Sixty-one locals finished the prestigious race.

Nicole Christofaro, a former Rockland High standout in cross-country and track, was the top female finisher in 3:26:29.

Perfect conditions made for the fastest run in the race's history. Kenya's Geoffrey Mutai established a world's best time with his sensational 2:03:02 and fourth-place finisher Ryan Hall broke his own American record with a time of 2:04:58.

Other Quincy finishers include Hassan Haydar (3:16:38), Maureen Lamie (3:27:44), Laura Shuford (3:27:50), Kevin Griffin (3:32:50), Amy Kovick (3:38:42), Joe Flynn (3:38:55), David Twomey (3:47:27), Sarah Staid (3:50:22), Sarah Atiya (3:51:29), Kathleen Timmons (3:52:24), Jeanne Hogan (3:56:59), Joshua Dubin (3:59:28), Kellyrose O'Brien (4:01:33), Sinead McGlynn (4:03:33), Sarah Welch (4:09:52), Brian Mahoney (4:11:40), Erika Fairweather (4:12:56), Kathy Gorman (4:14:38), Kristina Levasseur (4:14:41), Heather Bain (4:16:32), Mary Varden (4:18:45), Denise Murphy (4:19:16), Kara O'Toole (4:19:32), Rachel Dubin (4:20:13), Jennifer Senkier (4:20:54), Jim Lyons (4:22:22), Robert Collins (4:22:56), Jonathan Keener (4:23:50), Rita Senier (4:23:52), Daniel Maguire (4:28:25).

Central Sweeps City Swimming/Diving Championships

The Central Middle School boys and girls swimming and diving teams combined for 206 points to win the Quincy Middle School Swimming and Diving Championships held April 9 at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool in Quincy.

Compiling 109 total points was second-place Atlantic Middle School who finished second in the boys rankings (62) and third in the girls with 47 points. Sterling Middle School took third-place with 96 points with 64 points on the girls' side and 32 points on the boys' end. Point Webster placed fourth overall, accumulating a third-place total of 42 points in the boys' competition with six more points added by the girls followed by Broad Meadows MS whose 44 points, all earned by the girls team landed fifth overall.

Eighth graders Nicholas Pham and Jason Lee paved the way for Central's 92 points on the boys' side. Pham won both the 25-and 50-yard freestyle events, swimming 14.69 and 33.50, respectively. Lee tied for first in the 50-yard breaststroke (50.91) and placed second (23.09) in half the distance. The duo paired with eighth grader Michael Mullaney and seventh grader Bryan McMahon in Central's gold medal showing in the 100-yard medley relay.

Individually, Mullaney earned first in the 25-yard butterfly (17.00) and 100-yard freestyle (1:22.56) events while McMahon's 25-yard (22.50) and 50-yard (55.09) backstroke efforts yielded a pair of silvers. Eighth grader Erin McMillen swept the breaststroke events clocking 18.03 for one length and 42.79 for two lengths and seventh grader Lucia Buzzell set the new meet standard for the one-meter dive with 57.50 points.

Atlantic capitalized on huge contributions from both its veterans and youths. Sixth grader Leilani Garcia won the 50-yard freestyle (29.81) and grabbed second in the 25-yard butterfly (14.40) while eighth grader Matthew Alexander notched a pair of seconds in the 25-yard free (15.25) and 25-yard butterfly (18.88) events.

Eighth grader Sabrina Rauch of Sterling won both the 100-yard freestyle (59.66) and 25-yard butterfly (13.81) events. Nathan Campbell, a sixth grader, prevailed in both the 50-yard backstroke (48.81) and one-meter diving events (55.75).

A pair of eighth graders, Stiven Kodra and Aaron Brodeur, paced Point Webster. Kodra tied for first in the 50-yard breaststroke (50.91) while Brodeur earned second in the 50-yard freestyle (35.78).

Broad Meadows' Kim Driscoll, an eighth grader, won the 50-yard backstroke (40.18) and notched a second in the 50-yard freestyle (30.50).

14th Annual Quincy Lions Club Run/Walk for Sight April 23

The Quincy Lions Club will hold its 14th Annual Run/Walk for Sight on Sat., April 23 at Pageant Field. Online registration is currently open at www.quincylionsclub.org/2011-Run-Walk-For-Sight.html.

Day-of-race registration will begin April 23 at 9 a.m., followed by the children's 1K race at 10:30 a.m. The adult 5K run/walk, which is on a course certified by U.S. Track & Field, begins at 11 a.m. Prizes will be awarded to race winners in a number of categories and the first 200 registrants will receive a free race T-shirt and runner's giveaway bag.

The registration fee is $20 for adults and $5 for the children's 1K race and includes a buffet lunch following the races. There will also be entertainment and a prize raffle.

"The Run/Walk for Sight is a fun event for the whole family," said Quincy Lions Club President Loretta McTiernan. "The local community has been very supportive of the Lions Club's efforts to help blind and visually impaired individuals and we hope everyone will come out and enjoy this fun and worthwhile event."

Proceeds from the Run/Walk benefit eye research and the Quincy Lions Club's community service activities, including providing free eye exams and free eyeglasses for local residents in need, offering free vision and health screenings, providing college scholarships to local high school students and more.

11 Residents Honored By Jimmy Fund Walk

Quincy residents Bob Benn, Terry Chui, Katherine Durant, Stacy Hoag, Meg Madden, Kevin Ng, Susan Porter, Roney Queiroz, Prasad Thottempudi, Laurel Wainwright, and Brian Wilinsky were recently honored as Pacesetters of the 2010 Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk presented by Hyundai.

By raising a minimum of $1,000 each, the Pacesetters from Quincy collectively raised $21,703 of the more than $6.5 million for last September's Walk. Funds from the Walk benefit adult and pediatric cancer care and research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Pacesetters are dedicated walkers who show their commitment to conquering cancer through their tremendous fundraising efforts. In 2011, Pacesetters will be asked to raise at least $1,250 to become a Star Pacesetter, $2,500 for Two Star level, $5,000 for Three Star, and $10,000 to become a Four Star Pacesetter.

"The commitment of our walkers, especially the more than 1,600 Pacesetters, is essential in the Walk's fundraising efforts," said Ann Beach, director of the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk. "They are our ambassadors and the key ingredient in funding our fight against cancer, having raised $3.9 million for the 2010 Walk."

More than 8,500 people walk up to 26.2 miles in the Jimmy Fund Walk. It is the only event, other than the Boston Marathon itself that is sanctioned by the Boston Athletic Association to use the official historic marathon route from Hopkinton to Boston. The Walk is an annual event that has raised $73 million since 1989.

The 23rd annual Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk will take place on Sunday, Sept. 18 and aims to raise $7.5 million. To register or to support a walker, visit www.JimmyFundWalk.org or call 866-531-9255.

Quincy Community United Methodist Church

An Easter Vigil will be celebrated Saturday, April 23 at 7:30 p.m. at the United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St.

"One phrase can sum up this powerful service, " said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of the church. "And that is 'expect the unexpected.' She added, in a very personal and heartfelt way, the Vigil celebrates the hope and promise of Easter."

Dating from the earliest years of the Christian Church, the Easter Vigil is a service unlike any other, literally leading the congregation from Lent to Easter. It does so through word, song, and most importantly symbols that refer to Scripture. Because many people today are unfamiliar with symbolic interpretation, explanatory notes are provided in the text of the Vigil service. Dr. Jarek-Glidden has also updated the ancient service somewhat, so that is "speaks" to today's Christians.

Everyone attending the Vigil is requested to bring a flashlight-an updated and safer version of the traditional candles. Some extra flashlights will be available, in case anyone forgets.

People are also asked to wear comfortable walking shoes because some walking is necessary.

The church, which is handicapped assessable, is located at 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

Community Easter Egg Hunt At Wollaston Nazarene

HOLY WEEK and EASTER SERVICES

Star Of Sea Faith Community To Hold Easter Liturgy

The Friends of Star of the Sea announce that a Catholic liturgy will be held at noon Easter Sunday at the First Church of Squantum, 164 Bellevue Rd., Quincy.

The liturgy to be held is called a "Celebration in the Absence of a Priest" and has been approved by the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB) and the Vatican for use in American dioceses. The liturgy will include communion, using hosts consecrated by a Roman Catholic priest in good standing in the Archdiocese of Boston.

The Celebrations in the Absence of a Priest guidance states, "For their part, it is the right of the lay faithful, barring a case of real impossibility, that no priest should ever refuse to celebrate Mass for the people or to have it celebrated by another priest if the people otherwise would be able to satisfy the obligation of participating at Mass on Sunday or the other days of precept."

The Friends say they are extremely disappointed that their request for an Easter Mass has been denied by the Boston chancery, but they are pleased to be able to offer this alternate form of worship to the members of their faith community.

Guidelines for the service to be held encourage the faith communities that use this liturgy to think of themselves not as a community without a priest, but rather, as an "assembly in expectation of a priest."

The Friends say the use of this liturgy is not a permanent fix, nor can it be called a Mass. However, they point to guidance from the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops that says this liturgy does serve as a substitute for Mass on an interim basis.

A collection will be taken at the liturgy to help support the efforts of the Friends with their ongoing Canonical appeals. In recent weeks, the Vatican has issued 15 decrees in cases similar to the one the Friends have recently filed – all fifteen have ruled in favor of the parishioner groups, which means those other closed churches cannot be sold.

Episcopal Parish Of Saint Chrysostom

The Episcopal Parish of St. Chrysostom, corner of Hancock and Linden Streets, Quincy, will hold an Easter Service, Sunday, April 24 at 10 a.m.

The community is invited.

The service will be followed by a light lunch.

Covenant Church

The Covenant Church of Quincy, 315 Whitwell St. (corner of Granite Street) announces its schedule of Holy Week services.

On Good Friday, April 22, at noon, the congregation will join with the South Shore Evangelical Clergy Association in welcoming the community to the annual Ecumenical Good Friday worship service.

The service will be held at The Evangelical Congregational Church of Atlantic. Several members of the community clergy will speak and there will be special music and a simple soup lunch will follow the worship.

The public is invited to the Covenant Church for the seventh annual Easter Fun Fest Saturday, April 23 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. There will be snacks, crafts and games for children as well as refreshments for parents and grandparents.

An Easter Egg Hunt will take place at 11 a.m. and at 11:15 a.m. the Easter Story will be told.

On Easter Sunday, April 24, the celebration of Jesus' resurrection will begin with the annual Sunrise Worship service. Sponsored by the South Shore Evangelical Clergy Association, the worship begins at 6:30 a.m. at Wollaston Beach between the Wollaston and Squantum Yacht Clubs.

At 10 a.m., the community is invited to worship at The Covenant Church. There will be special music by soloist Rachel Hallenbeck.

Rev. Karen Palmatier, pastor of the church, will bring the message of the morning.

Houghs Neck Congregational

Houghs Neck Congregational Church continues its Holy Week activities with a number of special services and ceremonies today (Thursday) through Easter Sunday.

All are welcome to attend.

To mark Maundy Thursday, a complimentary lasagna dinner will be held at 5:30 p.m. tonight (Thursday) in the church's Fellowship Hall. Following the dinner, a Maundy Thursday Service of Communion and Tenebrae will be held at 7 p.m. in the church sanctuary.

On Good Friday (April 22) at 6:30 p.m., the church will present a free screening of The Passion of the Christ. The Academy Award-nominated film, presented in Aramaic, Latin and Hebrew with English subtitles, recounts the last 12 hours of Jesus's life, from his betrayal through his crucifixion and resurrection. Because the film includes graphic depictions of Jesus's torture and crucifixion, viewer discretion is advised.

On Easter Sunday, an early morning "Sunrise Service" will be held at 7:30 a.m. on Nut Island, followed by an Easter breakfast at the church at 8 a.m. Easter Sunday worship services will begin at 9:30 a.m., when Pastor John Castricum delivers the sermon, "Pure Joy." Deacons serving on Easter include June Paul, Mark Paul, Janice Hughes and Robert Gordon.

Interfaith Social Services' Women's Prayer Breakfast A Success

Over 250 Women From 32 Different Houses Of Worship Attend Event At St. Catherine's Church

St. Catherine's Greek Orthodox Church in Braintree overflowed with women of other faiths as the church recently hosted Interfaith Social Services' 13th Annual South Shore Women's Prayer Breakfast.

Over 250 women from 32 local houses of worship gathered for a morning of prayer, music, and fellowship. Members of St. Catherine's Church prepared a sumptuous meal including Greek sausages.

"This was our most successful prayer breakfast to date," said Interfaith Social Services' Executive Director Rick Doane.

"All of the proceeds from the breakfast go to helping impoverished local families served through Interfaith's Food Pantry, counseling center and other assistance programs. It was wonderful to see the youth group from St. Catherine's serving breakfast to all of the attendees. That example of community spirit is what makes this event so special."

The keynote speaker at the breakfast was Christine A. Lott, executive director of Chris Cares International. Lott delivered an inspirational message about her transition from being a vice president of Operations at Goldman Sachs in Boston to the head of a non-profit organization helping families in Africa.

Chris Cares is based out of Stoughton and works to help the people of Tanzania. To date the organization has constructed a Catholic Church in the Village of Ilboru, Tanzania; and is currently working to build The School of St. Nicholas in the village of Olosive, Tanzania.

Lott told of the obstacles that she has had to overcome while trying to help people so far from home. Her words inspired many of the attendees including Betsy from Hingham's The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"Christine's story was truly inspiring, her dedication to helping the people of Tanzania helps all of us to stop and think about what is truly important in life."

Lott left the breakfast and boarded a plane to Africa where she is trying to resolve some of the problems that her organization is facing as they work to build a school in Tanzania.

"This breakfast is about community" Doane said. "Ms. Lott told us about a community that her organization is trying to strengthen thousands of miles away, hopefully that will inspire us to strengthen our communities' right here in Massachusetts.

"Many of the programs that support the most vulnerable members of our society depend on support from the community, they depend of us standing together to help neighbors in need. This breakfast is a wonderful illustration of what a community truly is.

"To have women of various faiths and backgrounds sitting at the same table, having breakfast, getting to know each other, overcoming misconceptions and stereotypes makes us better people and a stronger community."

Interfaith Social Services' is a non-profit organization serving the residents of Massachusetts's South Shore, our mission is to strengthen family life and offer assistance to anyone in need. Programs include: the Pantry Shelf, distributing over 400,000 lbs. of food to impoverished local residents every year. HomeSafe, providing assistance and homelessness prevention services to families and individuals in emergency situations. Harvest Helpers, organizes backyard gardeners and community groups who donate fresh local produce to food pantries. New Directions Counseling Center, serves adults, children, couples and families who are dealing with a myriad of life issues. A special program within the center reaches out to clients who cannot afford the help that they so desperately need. Quincy Medical Center Interfaith Chaplaincy, delivers counseling to hospital patients and grieving families. Bureau Drawer thrift shop, provides the community with an affordable option for clothing and household items. The shop is run entirely by volunteers. Career Closet, outfits low income job seekers with free professional attire. For more information about ISS or to donate online please visit: www.interfaithsocialservices.org

A Thought For The Week

It is Easter, the occasion for Christians to rejoice again in the celebration of the Resurrection. Easter is an occasion for a new beginning in our lives; an occasion for renewal of the spirit. That is why so many of the symbols of Easter reflect and emphasize the theme of renewal.

No matter the times, no matter the torments, Easter brings with it hope and promise of new life and bright days.

It comes garlanded in crocuses and hyacinths, its triumphal procession is attended by pink and white dogwood and yellow forsythia and flowering crab. Lambs are born and nibble the tender green grass of yet another spring. Birds that fled the blasts of winter return and flash red or blue from tree to tree. The sun that stood aloof dips down to color the gardener's face as he entrusts to the good earth the seeds that will blossom into flowers and floods of varied hue.

Easter's message, like that of Christmas, is of good tidings and great joy. It speaks to the eternal abundance of life.

It is a hopeful holiday and we hope our readers will enjoy it to the fullest . . .

William J. Gormley, 87

Assistant Scout Master

A funeral Mass for William J. "Bill" Gormley, 87, of Quincy, an Assistant Scout Master and retired insurance agent, was celebrated Tuesday in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mr. Gormley died April 17.

He loved his family and enjoyed the years they were all involved in scouting. He was Assistant Scout Master for Troop 11 in Quincy and a Pack 14 Committee Member. His proudest day was seeing his son, Robert, earn the Eagle Scout designation.

Mr. Gormley also enjoyed fishing for stripers, the Boston Bruins and his Irish heritage.

He was born in Melrose and was a U.S. Army veteran of World War II.

Mr. Gormley retired from John Hancock in 1988 as an insurance agent. He will be remembered for his easy going manner and gentle smile.

Beloved husband of Adele (Kamps) Gormley. Father of Robert Gormley and his wife Lauren, Laura Clarke, Lynn Giroux, and Britton Whitney and his wife Rebecca. Brother of the late Winifred Gormley. Also survived by many grandchildren and great grandchildren.

Edith F. Perry, 90

Teacher, Administrator At St. Ann School

A funeral Mass for Edith Forge Perry, 90, of Quincy, was celebrated April 16 in St. Ann's Church, Wollaston.

Mrs. Perry died April 12 at Marina Bay Skilled Nursing Center.

EDITH F. PERRY

Mrs. Perry, as she was known lovingly to thousands of St. Ann School children, first began teaching at the school in 1958. An educator with a degree from Emmanuel College, she was approached by the then St. Ann's pastor to fill an unpaid, one-year position to lead a third grade class at the young school. She happily agreed to serve as a measure of her strong belief in Catholic education, never imagining she would go on to become part of the regular staff for decades and, ultimately, be named Vice Principal.

An accomplished singer and long-time member of the parish choir, she particularly enjoyed sharing her love of music with each St. Ann's student. As part of her daily class schedule, she taught music to generations of Quincy children, gently encouraging each one that an appreciation of music and the arts is an important part of a well-rounded life.

In addition, she helped found a St. Ann's after-school drama program that produced a series of annual musical plays, from the King and I, and The Sound of Music, to Fiddler on the Roof, all with full costumes, sets and accompaniment. She took pride in including as many children as possible in each production, and loved seeing the shyest of young participants blossom into confident performers. Many would return later in their high school years to thank her for igniting a lifelong passion for song and stage.

Wife of the late Philip P. Perry; mother of Suzanne Perry of Chelsea, Diane Cierpial and her husband Carl of CA, Donna Perry of Beverly, Robert Perry and his wife Mary McNamara of Milton, and Maria Perry and her husband John Stock of MO; grandmother of Elisa, Philip and Christiane Perry; sister of Ann O'Connor of Quincy and the late Pauline Bonanno of South Boston.

Interment was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Edith F. Perry Scholarship at Quincy Catholic Academy, 370 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02171.

Velma J. Goode, 75

A funeral service for Velma Jacqueline "Jackie" (Snow) Goode, 75, of Woburn, formerly of Hingham and Quincy, was conducted Tuesday at the Hingham Congregational Church.

Mrs. Goode died April 15.

She was associated with the Bank of Boston for 15 years, retiring in 1996. She was a Hingham resident from 1964-2003 and was a member of the Hingham Congregational Church and also the Community Church of Neponset in Dorchester.

Mother of Rev. David R. Goode of PA, Diane (Goode) Komejko of Scituate and Linda (Goode) Dooner of Hingham; sister of Dr. Beatrice L. Snow of Woburn and Charles A. Snow of Tewksbury.

She is also survived by eight grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren.

Interment was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel, Hingham.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Breast Cancer Foundation, 1220 B East Joppa Rd., Suite 332, Baltimore, MD 21286.

Rita M. Paone

A funeral Mass for Rita M. (Harold) Paone, of Wollaston, was celebrated April 16 in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Paone died April 10.

RITA M. PAONE

She graduated from Everett High School but was a longtime resident of Wollaston. She was a member of the Wollaston Mother's Club and assisted in the opening the first gift shop at Quincy Hospital.

Mrs. Paone enjoyed bowling, dancing, traveling, shopping, and arts and crafts. She was a talented artist and gourmet cook and her family describes her as a social butterfly that loved being with her family, friends and entertaining.

Wife of Ugo R. "Dick" Paone of Wollaston; mother of Richard A. Paone of Duxbury, Barbara J. Paone of Randolph and Robert P. Paone of Boston; sister of the late Mary Harold, Lillian Murray, Ruth Essiambre and Eddie Harold; grandmother of Robert Hutcheon of Quincy, Samantha Hutcheon of Randolph, MSgt. Timothy Paone of Germany; great-grandmother of Cory and Anthony Davis.

She is also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Interment was in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Ann's Church, 757 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02170.

Mary J. Murphy, 79

Homemaker, Assembler

A funeral service for Mary J. (Alaimo) Murphy, 79, of Quincy, was conducted April 16 at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, Quincy.

Mrs. Murphy died April 13.

Born in Waltham, she was raised and educated in Quincy schools and was a 1949 graduate of Quincy High School. She was a homemaker but had also worked ten years as an assembler at the former Raytheon Plant in Quincy; she had been retired for many years.

Mrs. Murphy was devoted to her family and friends and was a woman of great faith.

Wife of the late Richard J. Murphy, QFD; mother of Steven D. Murphy of Quincy, Richard A. Murphy and his wife Martine of Braintree, Joanne M. Lipocky and her husband Alan of Medway and Maureen J. Rota and her husband David of Avon; grandmother of Richard, Jonathan, Corrine, Nicole, Michael, Sarah, Eric, Abigail and David; great-grandmother of Madison, Sienna and Sydney; sister of Joanne Mills of Plymouth and Angela Coughlan of Prides Crossing and the late Madeline DeThomas.

Interment was private.

Memorial donations may be made to the Norwell VNA Hospice, 91 Longwater Circle, Norwell, MA 02061.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Impatience is still somewhat of a problem. But a sign of progress should soothe the anxious Aries heart. Meanwhile, invest some of that waiting time in preparing for the change ahead.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Bovines tend to excel at solving problems, not creating them. But you risk doing just that if you're slow to respond to a timely situation. If necessary, seek advice from someone you trust.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The Gemini Twin might need to do more than a routine check of both a job-linked and home-based situation. Dig deeper for more data on both fronts to avoid unwanted surprises later.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Moon Children facing an important workplace decision are encouraged to use their perceptiveness to see through any attempt to win them over with a supercharge of fawning and flattery.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Good news catapults Leos and Leonas into reconsidering a deferred decision. But time has moved on, and it's a good idea to recheck your plans and make adjustments where necessary.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The week favors relationships, both personal and professional. Take the time to look for and immediately repair any vulnerable areas caused by unresolved misunderstandings.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A friend's problems bring out your protective instincts. Be careful to keep a balance between meeting the obligations of friendship without being overwhelmed by them.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The temptation to take an extreme position on an issue is strong, but moderation is favored both in personal and professional dealings. Move toward finding areas of agreement.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Getting another boss or teacher? Try to see the person behind the image. It will help you adjust more easily to the changes that new authority figures inevitably bring.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Much as you might dislike the idea, keep an open mind about using the assistance of a third party to help resolve problems that threaten to unravel an important agreement.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Music helps restore the Aquarian's spiritual energies this week. Take someone you care for to a concert of your musical choice. Also, expect news about a workplace matter.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A challenge that seems easy enough at first could take an unexpected turn that might test your resolve. Decide if you feel you should stay with it, or if it's better to move in another direction.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can be strong when standing up for justice, both for yourself and for others.

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

City of Quincy

"REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS" TAX POSSESSION AUCTION SERVICES FOR THE SALE OF LAND ACQUIRED THROUGH FORECLOSURE OF TAX TITLE

TAX DEPARTMENT MAY 11, 2011 @11:00 A.M.

The City of Quincy, acting through Deborah Coughlin, Collector of Taxes for the City and as custodian of property pursuant to Massachusetts General Law Chapter 60 section 77B, wishes to receive proposals for professional services that relate to the marketing and subsequent sale of land acquired through the foreclosure of tax title. The desired services include the marketing of the properties and the advertisement of the sales, to include all notice requirements arising under M.G.L. Chapter 60 and all other laws, and 2) conducting the actual sale by public auction. It is anticipated that the fee for these services will be paid by the successful bidder as a "buyer's premium." All terms and conditions governing the sale must comply with the purposes, terms and intent of M.G.L. Chapter 60 and all other Laws of the Commonwealth which may apply.

For the purposes of this Request for Proposals ("RFP"), the properties to be sold consist of the various parcels now held by the City and such other properties as the City may hereafter so hold which are or become ripe for sale and are actually sold during the term of said contract. The term of the contemplated contract shall be for one year, together with the right of the City, in its sole discretion, to extend said contract for up to 2 (two) additional one-year periods.

Detailed specifications are available on-line at the City of Quincy's website, www.quincyma.gov and also available at the office of the Purchasing Agent, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, Massachusetts, 02169, between the hours of 8:30 AM and 4:30 PM for a non-refundable printing charge of $25.00

The City of Quincy may cancel this RFP, or accept or reject any or all proposals in whole or in part, at any time whenever it is deemed to be in its best interests.

The City of Quincy will not be responsible for any costs incurred by a proposer in preparing and submitting a proposal in response to this RFQ.

The submission and review of such proposals must comply with the purposes, terms and intent of M.G.L. Chapter 30B and all other applicable laws of the Commonwealth. Acceptance of any submission and price proposal to provide such services is subject to the availability of funding. The award of the contract for auctioneer services is subject to approval by the City of Quincy.

Bids/Proposals will be received at the office of the Purchasing Agent until the time and date stated above, at which time and date they will be opened and registered. Late Bids/Proposals, delivered by mail or in person, will be rejected.

Thomas P. Koch, Mayor
Kathryn R. Hobin, Chief Procurement Officer
